And now Congressman Frank Jones has been placed on a sub-committee of the naval committee of the House, to visit the various naval stations and report if there are any offices that can be dispensed with or any leaks that can be stopped. This would be called a junketing committee by the wicked democratic press were its members republicans. The object of the committee is the manufacture of political capital, if possible, and the intimidation of republican officials,—not very possible. It is to be hoped that Mr. Jones will not so far neglect the railroad interests of the Eastern stockholders, in his zeal as a partisan and his eagerness as an investigator, as to fail to make answer at the coming annual meeting to queries as to the cause of the "slumping" of the stock after he touched it, from par to nearly zero, whether by the payment of excessive salaries to the president, manager, superintendents and numerous other officials who drew sustenance from the Eastern Railroad until it fell from sheer exhaustion, or from mismanagement its life was wasted. Hundreds of the constituents of Mr. Jones would like an explanation on this and many other points, for the property he has helped manage for them until it is nearly worthless was in many cases their all. If he has resisted all the extravagance of the Eastern Railroad management and has been overruled by his associates, his resignation offered with that of Director Cumming would have been wise. If he has countenanced their course, he will find that a committee of the whole propose such investigations as will unearth some of the transactions of the past two years. Failing of a proper response at the February meeting, Mr. Jones will have ample opportunity during the fall campaign to acquaint the people, whose suffrages he is so anxious to secure for re-election, with the circumstances of the case, and to defend a few transactions that were presumed to be securely hidden, but have only awaited his renewed candidacy for office for the longed for opportunity of revelation. In the meanwhile, Mr. Jones may saunter around among the navy yards at will—but his capacity for investigation should not be lost sight of in railroad matters.

Masonic Anniversary.

The special communication of St. John's Lodge held at Masonic Hall on Wednesday evening, Jan. 16th, for the purpose of celebrating the anniversary of the membership of those venerable brethren of the mystic tie, John Somerby and Lewis Bruce, was one of the most enjoyable events of the Masonic fraternity that has taken place in this city for many years, there being present many of the oldest Masons in this city, six of whom have been active members of the fraternity for more than fifty years; among whom we noticed, besides the two venerable guests of the evening who joined the fraternity in 1819, the following; Past Master Josiah G. Hadley, Brothers Benjamin Weeks, Ammi R. H. Fernald, George P. Edny, Nehemiah Moses, and that active Mason, Past Grand Master John Christie, who for fifty years has been conspicuous for his zeal and devotion to the interests of the craft, an oracle among his Masonic brethren, and an honor to the fraternity.

The committee to whom were committed the arrangement of the entire affair were Worshipful Master John W. Dame, chairman, Thomas J. Mitchell, John H. Cheever, Samuel S. Fletcher, John Dame, James W. Wingate, Thomas E. O. Marvin and Matthew T. Betton.

First on the well-arranged programme was the special communication of St. John's Lodge, No. 1, which took place in Masonic hall, this being of course strictly confined to members of the fraternity. After the opening service peculiar to the order, and the singing of Auld Lang Syne by the brethren, a congratulatory address to the venerable brethren was delivered by Past Master Albert R. Hatch, which received the closest attention. Then followed a song by a quartette, Brother E. A. Tilton presiding at the organ, and after a prayer by the Chaplain, the lodge was closed in due form by the Worshipful Master John W. Dame. After the closing of the lodge, the ladies, to the number of about two hundred, were invited into the hall and welcomed by a short address by Past Master Marvin. The brethren and their ladies, under the direction of the Marshal, then took up the line of march for the banquet hall, which presented a fine appearance, having been decorated in a beautiful manner with bunting, mottoes and emblems—and although four tables the entire length of the hall had been laid with plates for two hundred and twenty-five, and spread with eatables, it was found that but about half of the party could be accommodated at a time, but arrangements had been made for this contingency, and after the first party had been sufficiently provided for, they adjourned to the main hall to make room for the others.

At the conclusion of the feast, post prandial exercises were indulged in, and were exceedingly enjoyable to all. The following were among the toasts given:

"The Grand Master of Masons in New Hampshire." Responded to by Past Grand Master John R. Holbrook, who gave a brief, but interesting, history of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, which was formed in 1798 by St. John's and Pythagoras Lodges of Portsmouth and Rising Sun Lodge of Keene, that sterling patriot John Sullivan, Governor of New Hampshire, being the first Grand Master. He was succeeded by Dr. Hall Jackson, who held the office for seven years, dying while in office. Both of these were Past Masters of St. John's Lodge, which Lodge in fact furnished all the Grand Masters from 1798 until 1816 and for thirty-five out of the eighty-seven years since its formation. The Grand Lodge held its meetings in Portsmouth until 1815, when it was removed to Concord. During its continuance in this city it held quarterly sessions and usually celebrated the festival of St. John's Lodge by a public parade and address by some prominent member of the fraternity.

"The Craft." Past Master Washington Freeman.

"Solomon." Past Master John Dame.

"Our Past Masters." Past Master A. R. Hatch, who in the course of his remarks alluding to the high character borne by the Past Masters of St. John's Lodge since its organization in 1736, made particular mention of such sterling men and prominent citizens among them as George Mitchell, John Wentworth, William Pearson, Hugh Hall Wentworth, Wyzeman Claggett, Samuel Sherburne, Hall Jackson, John Sullivan, Nathaniel Adams, Clement Storer, John McClintock, Samuel Larkin, Lyman Spalding, John Davenport, Sylvester Melcher, Samuel Cushman, Robert Smith, John Knowlton, John Trundy and many others.

"Our Veteran Members." Past Master William H. Hackett.

"Old Portsmouth." Bro. William R. Martin.

"The Square." Bro. Joseph P. Morse.

"The Compass." Bro. Elisha Tripp.

"Sister Lodges." Brother Charles W. Gardner.

This closed the table exercises, which were decidedly interesting.

The festivities of the evening were then closed by a grand assembly in Congress hall, Messrs. M. T. Betton and J. H. Cheever acting as floor managers. Turner's Quadrille Band furnished the music, and dancing was kept up until a late hour.

Thus closed one of the most fraternal as it was one of the happiest events in the calendar of our local masonic order, and long will it be remembered by the large number who were fortunate enough to be present.

The Weather of 1811.

ELIOT, Jan. 18.

Mr. Editor; I have read an article in the Boston Cultivator stating that the present winter is one of more remarkable weather than any past winter in the age of any man living. I have arrived at the age of eighty-four years and can remember back about seventy. In 1811, when I took my father's farm (he dying that year,) January was very mild and very little snow, ground bare about all the month. February, very mild, small and small amount of snow. By the middle of March, snow all gone and frost out of the ground and farmers preparing to put in early seed. A very small amount of rain in all the seasons; hay about half an average crop; corn and potatoes a fair crop. Hay sold from the field at twenty dollars per ton; six feet oxen sold for forty dollars; cows with calf sold for twelve to fourteen dollars; Spring calves sold for $2.50 in the fall. JOSEPH FROST.

Jottings.

Mr. John Lord of this city has in his possession "A Commentary or Exposition upon the Divine Second Epistle Generall, written by the Blessed Apostle St. Peter. By Thomas Adams. London, Imprinted by Felix Kingston for Iacob Bloome. 1663."

Arthur P. Devlin, who was mobbed in Dover, will repeat his lecture on "Romanism in America" here soon.

That democratic battery planted at Exeter, the New Hampshire Democrat, had no ammunition to spare, fired but a half-dozen guns and then surrendered. Joshua L. Foster has charge of the remains.

Snow fell on Sunday to the depth of two inches.

Mrs. Frances How, wife of the venerable Elder Moses How, formerly of this city, died at the residence of her son in Cambridge, Mass., Friday, at the age of 75 years.

One of the CHRONICLE's original subscribers, Mr. Thomas Murphy, is still in business on Penhallow street at the same location on which he started thirty-seven years ago. Long life to him.

Schooner Geo. L. Treadwell, Taylor, of this city, arrived at New York from St. Marc, January 20th, and reports Jan. 8, at 5:30 A. M., experienced a tremendous heavy squall off Cape St. Nicholas Mole, throwing the vessel down, filling the decks with water; lost deck load, also burst jib and sprung foremast badly 20 feet above deck. After the squall, it blew a severe gale from North-east by North, attended with fearful sea; had been 48 hours North of Hatteras.

Sure enough, the U. S. S. Marion did not sail on Saturday, owing to a breakage of machinery. She dropped down to the lower harbor in the afternoon, the navy yard authorities having tired of her presence.

The following officers of the first National bank have been elected: Hon. William H. Y. Hackett, President; Edward P. Kimball, Cashier; Wm. H. Y. Hackett, Richard Goodwin, John Stavers, William L. Dwight and William H. Y. Hackett, Directors.

Honorary members of the Portsmouth Artillery Company who have received their certificates are requested to call on the Treasurer, Mr. W. Russell Foster, and pay their entrance fees immediately.

Col. Hackett sold by auction on Saturday to Mr. B. F. Webster one-sixteenth of schooner H. Prescott for $155; to Mr. Chas. H. Mendum nine shares National Mechanics and Traders' Bank at $109.50; and to Capt. J. Gilman Moses twenty shares Rockingham National Bank (par value $50) at $66.25.

Damon Lodge, No. 9, Knights of Pythias, will dedicate their new hall next week.

The S. P. C. A. acknowledge the receipt of twenty dollars from a friend to the cause to be added to the permanent fund.

AN IMPORTANT PAPER WANTED.

EXETER, Jan. 20, 1876.

Sundry persons have at different times expressed the wish that there be published an account of the leading facts regarding the origin and early history thirty-one years ago, of the independent democratic movement in New Hampshire. Such publication, it is said, would be of general interest to all, and of special interest to the survivors in that movement, and to the children and friends of those who have deceased. There would be a propriety in having the facts to be published set forth in Exeter, because the News-Letter is published in the town where the rebellion broke forth, and where it assumed organization and a power, which has not yet ceased to be influential. It led directly to a change in the politics of the State, to a change in our representation in Congress, and to alliances which have caused the record of New Hampshire to be such in the last fifteen years as no man can be ashamed of.

All who remember the early events of the independent movement in the Fall of 1844, and during the Winter subsequent, will readily call to mind the fact, that the stunning blow given to the long reigning democracy of that period, from which they never recovered consisted of a printed call for a meeting at Exeter, in February, 1845, signed by about three hundred democrats of the county of Rockingham, many of them the most prominent and justly influential men of their party, protesting against the action of the State Central Committee, and of the leading men at Concord, in misleading the masses into servility to the slave power of the South. If any publication should be made, it would be very desirable that the handbill, with the names attached, should be reproduced, and, if possible, the address and resolutions adopted at the meeting in Exeter. The object of this letter is to request any person who may have a copy of these documents to send the same to me. I will put the same into the hands of some one, who will prepare something appropriate for publication, or I will do my best to write out a statement myself.

Respectfully,

AMOS TUCK.

Castoria.

Cross, sickly babies and children may enjoy health and mothers have rest, if they will use Castoria. Worms, feverishness, teething, wind colic, sour stomach and undigested food make children cross, and produce sickness.

Castoria will assimilate the food, expel worms, and correct all these troubles. For twenty years Dr. Fletcher experimented in his private practice to produce an effective Carminative and stomach regulator which would be as effective as Castor Oil, without its unpleasant taste or result.

The reputation of his experiment extended. Physicians and nurses rapidly adopted his remedy, to which he gave the name of Castoria.

Castoria is as pleasant to take as honey, regulates the stomach and bowels, and does not gripe. It is so adapted to all ages, continues no alcohol, and is absolutely harmless to the most tender infant.

Try Castoria once and you will never be without it.

Prepared at the Laboratory of J. B. Rose & Co., 46 Dey Street, New York. 0tagr20

Why will you suffer from Rheumatism, Sprains, Stiff Joints, Swellings, Burns, Scalds or Weak Back, when the Centaur Liniment affords certain relief. Many articles soothe pain to a certain extent, but the Centaur Liniment cures. The White Liniment is for the human family; the Yellow Liniment is for horses and animals.

Cross and sickly children can be made healthy and strong by regulating their stomachs and bowels with Castoria. It is more effective than Castor Oil, and is as pleasant to take as honey. For Wind Colic, Sour Stomach, Worms and Costiveness, there is nothing in existence equal to Castoria.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we believe to be a rare journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the employed mother by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its useful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper throughout is well prepared for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Billiousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the date of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time thousands came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and received one package, but with little hope of their curing my permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. My friends wondered at my several relapses, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $5.00 for half-dozen packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and have taken half of them, and my sisters for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried nearly everything that offered. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials of the worth of your Pills you say, "Not for gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I wouldn't give it before I would do without them. In my case these find $1.5o for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD, Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 15, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, consulting the best of physicians, but no one could give me relief. I was so bad that I could not stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did me good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken the whole of them I was a person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Kidneys and Constipation, and I shall try to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think it was a blessing to humanity when you had the pills introduced to my friends. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages. Yours respectfully,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, and shall not take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute to your medicine. I have two sisters in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Reminster, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.60 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the morrow of the year. It shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest congregation of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is Democratic, and the Senate is broadly, nay, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the last six months will show the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or continue in the exercise of vitality. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to make a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke earnest discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long desired revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE could only appeal to its peers record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the access also of many new ones. To intelligent citizens can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, uncontrolled by partisan zeal, selfish or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will go into the fight for the old Republican principles of which it was the champion and through the American conflict, and it will rely on whatever those principles are vindicated under the old banners. But it can never be servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts of its friends, and either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. Its aim is giving the world and country the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whose interests are those of the people, and cause harm to any. Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus is found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid and almost triumphant victory by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of all Administrations, State and Nation, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people ready to follow its guidance, and it hopes to be clearly right in its political course through all the troublous times of this an equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One count of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of its most vehemently urged principles and to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may safely be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have to within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a nearer approach to the ideal of THE TRIBUNE, and that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvements.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. Its news will be given in the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and its reference will ever be to the score for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the kind and no less complimentary support in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading newspaper" has seemed to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by its closest attention to news and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh intelligence, the most complete report, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is now delicately. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing to its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the hurry-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent its spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AT NORTH CONWAY.

THE MISTAKE OF AN EVENING.

[By Florence P. Allen.]

"I think you said—" There was a startled look on the pleasant face of the much enduring waitress as she bent a little lower; and certainly the order which she had received, "Miss Sylvester and dipped toast," was rather a novel one. "I don't think I understood you, sir."

"I beg your pardon," said Philip Van Dorne, coming back to the contemplation of his supper with a sudden start, and blushing like a school-boy as he became conscious of his mistake; and then, as the relieved damsel sped away, her evident fears as to his lapse from sanity being quieted by a less difficult order, he glanced again at the distant table where sat the three personages whose advent had so surprised, and, as it appears, disconcerted him.

Two ladies and a gentleman; one lady tall, pale and dark-eyed, with a wonderful crown of pale gold hair; the other a mere child in appearance, with a round, piquant, peach-blossom face, wide blue eyes, and fair hair cut close and curling around her forehead in little babyish rings; the gentleman a rather grave-looking, but decidedly handsome man, with no peculiarity of look or demeanor that would justify Philip Van Dorne in staring at him in such a decidedly vindictive and unprepossessing way.

He watched them furtively until they rose to depart; but as they passed by, he was to all appearance entirely absorbed in the roll with which he had been trifling for the last half-hour, and did not raise his eyes.

They noticed him, however, for the younger lady laid her hand suddenly on her companion's arm.

"Look, Rose!" she whispered, "there's Phil Van Dorne." And Rose, after one glance, passed on, with her gold-crowned head held a little higher, and her face a little paler than before.

Two minutes later, Philip van Dorne was in the office, hastily running over the list of the new arrivals at the Kearsarge House. Yes, here it was at last; "Mr. and Mrs. Colchester, Miss Sylvester, New York;" and although he had felt sure of it from the first, the sight of her changed name affected him as he had believed nothing could have done. "Joe was right, after all," he said, bitterly, as he turned away. "Odd that I should meet them on their wedding journey, though." Very soon he found himself face to face with a gentleman with a lady on either arm.

"Mr. Van Dorne,—how unexpected, and—how pleasant!" It was a wee white hand which was extended to him, and he took it mechanically in his.

"Thank you," he said, his eyes wandering to the tall, lissome figure beside her. "I hardly thought to meet you here, Emmie."

The old pet name came almost unconsciously—Emmie had always been a favorite of his in the old days—and then Rose returned his low bow without removing her hand from the sleeve where it rested.

"Oh, and I beg your pardon,—Mr. Colchester—Mr. Van Dorne. I believe you have met before, though."

"Yes," answered Philip, grimly, "once or twice only, I think." Emmie, with a little laugh, slipped her pretty hand through his arm.

"Rose, you and Roger lead the way. We will follow." And Philip, finding himself taken possession of, resigned himself to his fate. After all, it was better to face it bravely than to run away; so, with Emmie on his arm, he joined the promenaders on the wide veranda.

All that long evening he watched that face, that proud, pale face, which had once been to him the only face in all the world. And when at last he sat alone, trying, for once unavailingly, to find solace in a cigar, that pale, proud face seemed still before him.

How he had loved that woman!—how dear she had been to him in the old days! Yet how little had separated them! A hasty word,—a scornful reply,—and it was over.

He had been greatly to blame. He felt it now, keenly; but she had been impatient of interference, and imperious and commanding in her pretty girlish way,—and so, at last—

"Ah, me!" said Phil, tossing his cigar away as he rose, "to think that I should meet her here on her wedding journey, not two years afterward! There were grounds for jealousy of Colchester, after all, although I don't think she is madly in love with him. Perhaps that stately, dignified style suits him, though." He thought, gloomily, of the time when that gold-crowned head had rested lightly on his shoulder, in her charming fits of penitence for some misdoing, when those eyes had looked up to him as they looked at no one else, when those lips—

"Confound it all!" he said, wrathfully. "I shall make a fool of myself if I go on this way. Better leave quietly to-morrow—take the early train, and leave a note of adieux to Emmie." But fate ordered it otherwise; for, as he went in to his early breakfast, a nod from a curly head, and a wave from a pretty hand, brought him to a seat beside Emmie himself.

"We only stay here to-day, you see," explained the little lady, after the morning greetings were interchanged, "and we want to make the most of it. Therefore this early breakfast;" and Rose smiled across at her sister in a manner so suggestive of the bright, winsome Rose he used to know, that Phil felt bound to assert to himself that he was in no danger of "making a fool of himself" over another man's wife. "Better face it out," he thought. "It's only to-day anyway, and if I go it will look as though"—as though he had not forgotten old times so completely as desirable, he was afraid. Thus deciding, he talked and laughed with Emmie, and was so generally agreeable that even Roger Colchester unbent a little, and the pale face opposite grew interested and appreciative.

After breakfast they strolled around after the usual fashion of North Conway visitors, and Philip, having nothing else to do, strolled with them; but although he strove to seem at ease with Rose, he felt that he failed miserably, and gladly turned to Emmie for relief. She, at least, was unchanged, just the same childish, winsome Emmie as of old, whom he had been used to pet and tease; and she had not outgrown her old liking for him, either—that was evident, for she showed it frankly. So he strolled along beside her, and pointed out the beauties of "Minerva's Head," the shadowy "Indian Maiden," and the famed "White Horse," which, with upraised head and flying mane and tail, seems ever galloping madly away from North Conway and sight-seers in general, but ever remains there, one of the "lions" (pardon the anomaly) of the place.

After dinner there was a ride proposed. "Would he go?" Emmie asked; there was "just room for four." He went.

Riding backward made Emmie ill. "Would Rose mind?" "No, Rose wouldn't;" and before Philip realized it Rose was sitting beside him. The silken fold of her dress swept against him; and once, as the carriage swayed heavily, her gloved hand rested on his arm with a swift, light pressure, which made his heart throb strangely.

"I beg your pardon," she said; and, looking up, her eyes met his for a moment—only a moment; but as she turned away a sudden wave of crimson swept over her face.

"She has not forgotten, then," he thought grimly, glancing at the two opposite.

Roger Colchester was, to all appearance, unconscious of the little by-play; but Emmie's blue eyes were a trifle wider than usual, and she was looking at Rose with a sudden surprised curiosity on her face.

All that afternoon Philip was invisible. Taking a full cigar-case as a companion, he set himself resolutely to the task, of walking off the new depression and unrest which had come to him.

"I won't see her again," he said. "They go early to-morrow, and I'll keep away from them;" and, pursuant to this plan, he was one of the latest arrivals at the supper-table, and ate in stately solitude.

When, however, he went out on the broad piazza a little later, and, looking through the windows, saw them sitting in the great parlor, he could not resist the temptation to join them. "After all," he said, "it is only to-night, after which she will go out of my life entirely." So he sauntered in, in his lazily graceful way, and took the vacant seat beside Emmie.

"Have you been dancing?" he asked.

Emmie answered with a little sigh of regret, "No, only twice. Roger doesn't care for it, and there is no one else."

"Take pity on me, then. I am partnerless. May I?—for the Lancers?" The next moment, with Emmie's hand on his arm, he joined the dancers, and went through the figures "unexceptionably," as Emmie declared; and then stood beside her, laughing and talking lightly when the dance was over and she had resumed her seat.

"Listen!" she said, as the music began again. "How odd for them to play that,—the saddest of all sad things,—it is the 'Last Waltz,' of the Madman,' Rose."

Philip hesitated for a moment. Why should he not? She could but refuse; and it would be the last time. He turned toward her with a look almost of entreaty on his handsome face. "Will you?" he said—"Will you, Rose?"

He had never once called her by her new name—he could not—and the old name came so thoughtlessly. "I beg your pardon," he said, gravely. Without reply she rose and laid her hand on his arm.

That waltz,—could he ever forget it?—with that gold-crowned head almost resting on his shoulder—with that beautiful face so close to his own. For this brief space she was his. At last it came to him suddenly and sharply, that not one particle of the old love had died out, in spite of all his struggles, and the mantle of grim cynicism in which he had striven to envelope his better self; that, Roger Colchester's wife as she was, she was dearer to him than any other woman ever was, or ever could be.

"You are tired," he said, sharply, seeing the sudden pallor of her face as she looked up, wondering at his long silence.

"Why did you not tell me?"

"It is so beautiful," she said, almost in a whisper,—"and so sad. Is it not heart-breaking?" There were tears in the great dark eyes as she turned her head away; but Philip, looking down at her, answered not a word.

"How white you are, Rose!" exclaimed Emmie, as they came back to her. "You should not have danced so long. Why did you let her?"—a little sharply—looking up at Philip. But Rose answered quietly that it was nothing, she was only a little tired, and she had not waltzed for so long,—so very long. She glanced at Philip; and he, meeting her eyes, thought of their last waltz together in the old days.

"The music is over for to-night," said Emmie, gathering her light cloak about her. "Early hours seem to be the rule at the 'Kiarsarge,' for the piazza is deserted. It is lovely out there in the moonlight. Come!" And slipping her hand through Roger Colchester's arm, she led the way.

"We're going to walk down to the 'Pagoda,'" she proclaimed, after a few minutes, looking back over her shoulder. "One wouldn't think it a prosaic depot, by moonlight. You don't mind our leaving you for a short time, Rose, as you are too tired to go, do you? We'll be back directly." The next moment Rose and Philip were left alone together for the first time.

There was a moment of embarrassing silence as the two disappeared down the wide plank walk; and then Philip began to talk rapidly concerning the scenery, and especially old Kiarsarge as appearing by moonlight, the "cloud-effects" of the previous day, etc., until he saw the shimmering gleam of Emmie's dress in the distance, and knew she was returning. Then he turned to the woman beside him, with a sudden and entire change of manner.

"As you and I go our different ways to-morrow," he said, "I will bid you good-bye to-night; but before I go, I must say one thing which, perhaps, I ought not to say now, but which I ought to have said long ago. If, in the old days, I was domineering and exacting,—as I was,—I must sincerely beg your pardon. We did not part friends,—let us now,—and I wish you every happiness, Mrs. Colchester."

She was standing beside him, a fleecy shawl veiling her head and shoulders, her face turned away from him, and her dark eyes looking up at the far-away crown of Kiarsarge; but, as he spoke the last word, she turned quickly, a vivid blush sweeping across her face, and looking up at him with a great wonderment in her wide eyes.

"I was in fault, too," she said, after a little pause, her voice trembling strangely. "I have regretted it bitterly since,—more than you can know,—and I,—Philip!—how could you think it?—I am not Mrs. Colchester. I thought you knew it—;is Emmie."

Very soon after, Emmie, returning with her husband, was electrified by the sight of Rose—with her head pillowed on Philip Van Dorne's broad shoulder, Philip's strong arm around her, and her beautiful face, no longer pale, but suspiciously rosy, looking up at him in a way which told of happiness and peace at last.

"It is all very well to go seeking one's fortune in foreign lands, Rose," said Philip to his wife, a few months afterward, "but I don't believe in it. I found my fortune quite close, search, though, I must confess) nearer home."

"Where?" asked Rose, looking up at him, with a mischievous light in her great dark eyes.

"Under the shadow of Kiarsarge, love,—at North Conway—and at the moment when I believed that I was bidding an eternal good-bye to another man's wife, I found my own."—Aldine.

News and Notes.

Mr. Norris, the New Hampshire correspondent of the Boston Post, is the first person to discover that no election of Congressman will take place in New Hampshire until March, 1877, an act approved March 3, 1875, providing that any State that has not yet changed its day of election, and whose constitution must be amended in order to effect a change in the day of the election of State officers in said State, is exempted from electing in November.

A German squadron, consisting of three iron-clads and one tender, will visit the United States in July.

By a collision on the Great Northern Railway, near Huntingdon, England, on Saturday, during a blinding snow storm, thirteen persons were killed, including a son of Dion Boucicault. The Scotch express collided with a mineral train, and the express from London ran into the debris of the first two.

Pinney, the defaulting clerk to Pay Inspector Spaulding at San Francisco, has been heard from. The vessel in which he escaped recently arrived at Liverpool and reports that she put into Fernambuco, where Pinney got off with his plunder and a lady friend.

The Cincinnati Gazette says that portion of that city in which the heavy grocery houses are located, presents scenes that recall anti-war times. The sugar and molasses products of Louisiana are arriving in large quantities, and merchants are laying in their supplies as they used to do in old times. Consumers are also turning back to the Louisiana products. This is especially true of molasses.

A special from Keyser, West Virginia, says ex-Governor Thomas, of Maryland, late Minister to Peru, while walking on the track of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near his home at Franksville, Garrett county, Maryland, Saturday afternoon, was struck by an engine and instantly killed.

The latest food for gossip in Brooklyn, outside of Plymouth Church, was a thrashing given by one Goodkin, a tenor of a South Brooklyn choir, to one Hall, the basso of the same organization, Friday night. Goodkin walked off with the soprano, whom Hall had escorted to the rehearsal, and was escorting her home after said rehearsal. Hall overtook them, assaulted Goodkin, and got beautifully whipped. Goodkin and the lady then proceeded homeward; but Hall again put in an appearance in a few moments with a six shooter. Goodkin thereat took to his heels, the young lady gave a shriek, and Hall followed Goodkin around the block. A policeman fortunately heard the cries of the soprano, captured both the tenor and basso, and the latter was fined for his assault.

Should China fail in rendering indemnification and inflicting punishment for the plundering of the German schooner Anna, near Amoy, the German Government intimates that its demands will be exacted by force. A squadron of German war vessels will be held in readiness to proceed to Chinese waters, should such an emergency arise.

A caucus of the republican Senators and members of the House was held at the Capitol, Saturday night. On motion of Senator Edmunds, a committee of seven was appointed, whose duty it is to select suitable names, one from each State and Territory, to compose the Union republican Congressional committee, the selections to be made after consultation with the delegations from each State and Territory. The committee will report to an adjourned meeting of the caucus. It consists of Senators Cragin, of New Hampshire, and West, of Louisiana, and Representatives Wheeler, of New York, Hunter, of Indiana, Burchard, of Illinois, Lynch, of Mississippi, and Page, of California.

It is now officially announced that the rumor that the 200 Indiana editors who are visiting Philadelphia intend to pay the $1,250,000 Centennial deficiency out of their own pockets is a canard.—Louisville Ledger.

Huzza for Maine! Away up north, a neighbor to Labrador, yet she pays every obligation of the State on demand; her interest account is settled to a dot; a sinking fund provided for future needs; gives $500,000 yearly for support of her schools; levies a tax of only four mills on a dollar, and has about $400,000 ready money in her treasury. Huzza for Maine!—Cincinnati Star.

Cutting down the salary of our foreign ministers, and at the same time objecting to their making up the deficit by a quiet game of "draw," is rather rough on those poor individuals who are compelled to spend so much of their time away from home.—Washington Chronicle.

"The resumption act as it stands is of no earthly consequence," says the Boston Herald. We must take the liberty of dissenting. The act is very far from being what it ought to be; but it is better than nothing. The "consequence" comes in just here; to repeal the Sherman act, without putting a better one in its place, is to seem, at least, to take a step backward—away from specie payments. Even the appearance of such unwisdom as that had better be avoided.—Springfield Republican (Ind.)

The Nation says of Jeff Davis: "A decent regard for the opinion of mankind, even if we are not burdened with self-respect, requires us to exclude him at least from participation in the councils of the Nation he tried to destroy. We owe it to ourselves, in short, to say that there was at least one man whose political career was closed by his share in "the greatest rebellion the world ever saw."

Only eight republican Congressmen voted for the repeal of the resumption act.

Samuel Muzzey was found dead in his stable at Laconia, Saturday evening. his horse having fractured his skull by a kick. He leaves a wife and three children.

Senator J. P. Jones, of Nevada, took his seat in the U. S. Senate, Monday, for the first time this session.

Gen. Banning, chairman of the House military committee, has prepared a bill regulating the pay of officers of the army, which, if adopted, makes practicable a saving of from $560,000 to 600,000 per annum, by providing first that officers not on active duty shall receive only their pay proper, all allowances being cut off. Second—That they shall receive quarters, fuel and forage only in kind; that is, they shall not receive in money commutation for these allowances when they do not actually need them, and this whether they are on active duty or not. Third—Officers detailed from regiments to staff duty shall receive the pay belonging to their actual rank, not of their staff rank. Under this provision Lieut. Fred Grant, whose staff rank is that of Lieutenant-Colonel, will only receive pay as a First Lieutenant. The bill is very comprehensive, and applies to general officers as well as those of lower grades. Thus Gen. Sherman's pay would be reduced from $18,000 to $15,000; Sheridan's, from $15,000 to $11,000; Major-Generals from $9500 to $7500; Brigadier-Generals from $7500 to $5500.

—In Milwaukee, a prominent grocer commission merchant stood in the doorway of his store, when up came a poor woman with a baby in her arms. She begged for something. "Yes," said he, "I think it right to give to God's poor." So he took two potatoes from each of the five barrels (to be sold on commission,) and gave them to her, saying, "My good woman, I'm not giving to you; I'm giving to God." "Taters is good," she said. Then, as he turned to his partner, he said, "John, I've done a good deed. Whoever buys them potatoes won't miss two from a barrel."

—"Ah Sin" in Chinese means Mr. Victory. Twenty years hence some Yankee, cooling himself on the utmost peak of the Sierra Nevada, will cry, "Ah Sin, where is thy victory?" and two million bald-headed Asiatics will patiently rise and say, "We are klumin' Faller Allaham, thee hundle thousen more."

Universal Amnesty.

It is beautiful to see the readiness of the defeated party in our late rebellion to agree to forgive and forget everything relating to the war. No wonder they wish to forget the horrors of Andersonville, as a criminal strives to get rid of the burden of crime which presses on his conscience. If they have any human feeling at all the incubus of this terrible wrong must press upon them like a nightmare. Can the war be forgotten? Ask the father who mourns for the loss of his beloved son on the bloody fields of Fredericksburg or Chancellorsville. Does not every day bring up his sorrow before his mind? Ask the soldier who spent a few weeks in Southern prisons and came forth with shattered health and ruined prospects. Can he forget? Ask those who feel the pressure of increased taxation caused by the war expenditures. How can they forget? Ask the business men who feel the disturbance of business caused by the forced use of false measures of value. Can they forget? It is impossible. We spent our life's blood and sacrificed our property to save the nation and it can never be forgotten.

Now do those who so ostentatiously wave the olive branch set the example which should induce us to forgive and forget, even granting it were possible? What were the causes of the war? They were State rights and slavery. The rebels claimed that, as soon as their darling right of holding living property was interfered with, they had a right to secede. They put their theory in practice even before any attempt was made to interfere with their so-called rights. Do the rebels show any intention of forgetting these issues of the war? Not at all. Let any one who thinks they have forgotten read Hill's speech on amnesty, or the speech of Mr. Tucker of Virginia on the centennial bill. "The States made the Constitution" says this champion of the South. One would suppose he had never read even the preamble to the Constitution. "We, the People of the United States * * * * do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America," is the way that fact is stated there. The amendments to the Constitution have stated in such explicit terms the rights of the freedmen that the most zealous Southerners dare not proclaim slavery in Congress yet, but an equally effectual way is devised to overawe the freedmen and take from them all political power. The cry of "bloody shirt" will no doubt be raised if I advert to the situation of affairs in Mississippi; and other Southern States are little behind in denying the negro his rights. The democratic party of the North has always defended these atrocities of their Southern "brethren," and every one who has mentioned these acts has been met with ridicule or denial. Do not the rebels still remember the war? Look at the removals of Union soldiers from office caused by the present democratic House to give place to rebel sympathizers. In our own State we have abundant evidence that the war is not forgotten by the democrats. Were not Evarts W. Farr and other Union soldiers removed from their places by that party while they had power in this State? The forgetting is to be entirely on one side. The democrats never speak out openly, if they did their work would be: "You republicans forget all about this war and then we will quietly remove you from your offices and put in men of our stripe, who have always been kind to our Southern brethren." Now when the Southern rebels, and Northern traitors who sympathized with them, will show conclusively that they are willing to give up all claim to those issues which brought on the war and which were settled by the war unfavorably to them, and will cease to boast of the part they took in the endeavor to destroy our government, then the republican party will clasp hands across the bloody chasm and forgive, what they can never forget,—the horrors of the war.

—A little negro decided to emigrate from Columbus, Ky., but having no means he mounted the pilot of the locomotive attached to Conductor Latimer's train, after the engineer had oiled round, and rode into Johnsonville, a distance of forty-one miles. When the train stopped at this point the urchin was hauled down from his perch and asked what he was doing there. "Ise jes' wemigratin'," he whimpered. "Suppose a cow or a horse should have come up there, what would you have done?" "Thar wuzn't any horse or cow gwine to come up dar, day's too big. A sheep come dar and said wid me a little while, and den got off again." The engineer remembered to have struck two sheep a short distance back, but supposed both had been knocked off on either side of the locomotive.

Needless Suffering.

Many persons of weakly constitution, with dyspeptic and bilious tendencies, suffer life-long bodily distress unnecessarily. Their existences are commonly shorter than those of healthier mortals, but while they last, it is usually the case that they are continually doing themselves, or being dosed to no purpose. Could they be induced to use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for a while, strength regained, digestion restored, and the disappearance of bilious symptoms, would speedily acquaint them with the difference between a remedy which deals with causes, and those which affect symptoms merely. Not only are the Bitters a searching specific for complaints affecting the stomach, liver or intestinal canal, but they are, in consequence of their invigorative and bracing influence upon the entire physique an admirable means of protecting the system against the atmospheric influences which beget malarial disease.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually polluted at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the DIRECTION of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS) there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

THE AVALANCHE OF IMMORAL LITERATURE

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be found. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to D ec., '76) for $3.0 :

Or, or $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest of books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 400 illustrations; they have 48 splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddle etc. No more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Old Time Chronicles, No. 131.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

In a visit to the residence of Hon. B. F. Prescott of Epping, the Secretary of State, hich is found to interest us, especially his ew dwelling, somewhat spacious and ele- ant, substantial and convenient; but a few ld time articles may be appropriately no- ced now.

In one of the apartments is a chair, said o have once been possessed by Gov. Lang- on. Gov. Langdon was a Portsmouth gen- eman, born there. Besides other offices held, he was Governor at different times be- ween 1785 and 1811, six years. He died ept. 18, 1819. The chair is similar in form o some now, circular without a back any higher than the arms part. It is substan- ial, but plain and simple in accordance with many articles of furniture in earlier imes.

Mr. Prescott has a powder horn, on which s the date 1759, undoubtedly the time of s construction. It is curiously wrought, as the English coat of arms, the Hud-on River marked out, pictures of New York City and Albany, other places along the River, with the forts, and several other de- vices. It is the most beautiful thing of the kind we have ever seen.

—The bill for the worsted that a Fourth Street woman used in working a dog on her husband's slippers, was brought in to him yesterday, and he remarked to her that he wasn't going to pay any dollar and a half or any such fixing." "But you said you wanted a dog on them," responded his wife. "So I did, madam, so I did. But you might have made a darned sight smaller dog."—Fulton Times.

GRAND CLOSING

—AT—

HENDERSON'S.

The parties who had agreed to purchase my stock of Dry Goods on the first of January, not being able to meet their engagements, the stock is still left in my hands, which seriously interferes with the business arrangements I had made.

I have therefore determined to give the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity a rousing benefit. To make quick work of it, I propose the following inducements to purchasers of Dry Goods:

A Present to every Customer

buying One Dollar's worth of goods.

A Better Present to every customer buying Two Dollars' worth.

A still Better One to every customer buying Five Dollars' worth.

An Elegant Present to every customer buying Ten Dollars' worth.

Every customer buying One Dollar's worth or more, is sure of a Valuable Present.

In addition to all this, one in every twenty-five packages containing a present, also contains a check entitling the lucky holder to the

VALUED AT 55 DOLLARS.

ONE-HALF BARREL FLOUR,

LADIES' ROCKING CHAIR,

ONE BOX RAISINS,

ONE BARREL POTATOES,

ONE BARREL APPLES,

And lots of other merchandise to eat and to wear.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT AT THE HEAD OF THIS COLUMN IS AN ACTUAL FACT!

The amount of presents to be given away is equal to just one-half the amount of the value of the goods sold.

The Grandest Dry Goods sale ever heard of,—offering better inducements even than Lovering in his celebrated book sale.

We don't all want a book, but we all need Dry Goods, and in purchasing of me you get your goods as low as can be bought in Portsmouth with all the additional inducements thrown in.

☞ Everything will be conducted squarely and everything advertised will be carried out.

No person in the store knows the package containing the checks for the larger presents, and the only condition we exact from the persons receiving them is the privilege of publishing their names, simply to satisfy the public that the goods are given away as advertised.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are so compounded from concentrated principles, extracted from roots and herbs, as to combine in each small granule, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, as much cathartic power as is contained in any larger pills for sale in drug-stores. They are not only pleasant to take, but their operation is easy—unattended with any griping pain. They operate without producing any constitutional disturbance. Unlike other cathartics, they do not render the bowels costive after operation, but, on the contrary, they establish permanently healthy action. Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them.

$500 Reward is offered by the Proprietor to any one who will detect in these Pellets any calomel or other form of mercury, mineral poison, or injurious drug.

Castoria.

Cross, sickly babies and children may enjoy health and mothers have rest, if they will use Castoria. Worms, feverishness, restless, wind colic, sour stomachs and indigested food make children cross, and produce sickness.

Castoria will assimilate the food, expel worms, and correct all these things. For twenty years Dr. Fletcher experimented in his private practice to produce an effective Cathartic and stomach regulator which would be as effective as Castor Oil, without its unpleasant taste or recoil.

The reputation of his experiment extended. Physicians and nurses rapidly adopted his remedy, to which he gave the name of Castoria.

Castoria has no paregoric, nor laudanum, nor Paregoric, nor any other narcotic, is pleasant to take as honey, regulates the stomach and bowels, and does not gripe. It is so adapted to all ages, contains no alcohol, and is absolutely harmless to the most tender infant.

Try Castoria once and you will never be without it.

Prepared at the Laboratory of J. E. Ross & Co., 46 Hay Street, New York. otu&p26

Why will you suffer from Rheumatism, Sprains, Stiff Joints, Swellings, Burns, Scalds or Weak Back, when the Centaur Liniment affords certain relief. Many articles soothe pain to a certain extent, but the Centaur Liniment cures. The White Liniment is for the human family; the Yellow Liniment is for horses and animals.

Gross and sickly children can be made healthy and strong by regulating their stomachs and bowels with Castoria. It is more effective than Castor Oil, and is as pleasant to take as Honey. For Wind Colic, Sour Stomach, Worms and Costiveness, there is nothing in existence equal to Castoria.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaints, Nervousness, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package they became so well pleased, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden, but one Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have taken nearly all the pills and, for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any benefit, as I had spent so much money for other pills, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I have took. I have recommended them to several others, and have sold them to my friends. I will forward one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few to those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have sold many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills as it can end anything. I have got testimonials one and they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do with out them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. Care Watson & Gannett.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have been subject to Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to even pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer out my life. A friend opened one day to see your advertisement in the Compagnonnable. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well at night, and my old Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will cost me a large sum of money. I think it will not be without them if money would buy them; I think the most prove a blessing to thousands who will be unable to procure them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages. Yours respectfully, MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two grandsons who are in business in Andover, and a lady in Reidendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and a prolonged struggle for the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during such a year as 1876 is disposed will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our fiscal era. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In industry commerce and production. In industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting the claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, unobstructed by partisan misrepresentation, and unbiased by ambition.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the principles of the Republican party of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banner. But it can never be a servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of political parties, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the facts, independent of the interests or prejudices of any party. In politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure honest and economical government, and economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. THE TRIBUNE itself has fallen into the error of the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and Independents in 1873 and 1874, and is now as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Republicans when it came into power through the storms of 1872 and 1873 with equal success, and command yet stronger approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without regard to party, has been to make the Republicans feel that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward candidates for office who are the reverse of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conventions and the Independent voters have to at within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the tendency will be to continue and hasten the improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to 1 bor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the qualities which have made it a favorite in the home, the counting-room, the office, and the workshop. It will carefully collate the news of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conventions and the Independent voters have to at within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the tendency will be to continue and hasten the improvement.

PULMONICE

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMONICE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMONICE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing lag the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMONICE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmonice Cordial.

The Pulmonice Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in search America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDM. BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, which have been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

BARNUM CENTENNIAL SHOW.

P. T. Barnum, the showman, is at present busily engaged in perfecting arrangements for a centennial show during the coming Summer, and in conversation with a representative of the New York Tribune, said: "Last year I had travelling my hippodrome—which was of itself the largest affair that had ever been exhibited in any country—a museum, menagerie and circus in different parts of the country. These three were too much for one man to attend to, and I brought them all home to Bridgeport and sold the whole affair at auction. The secret of it was that in selling all this at auction I had my agent bid in the best parts of the collection, so as to make an exhibition more complete than any ever given in the world. I have bought out the European show, circus and menagerie, which formerly belonged to Smith, Nathans, June and Dailey, and have added to it the best portions of my own show, as well as many recent importations, and propose to make the most complete and comprehensive 'school'—I don't know but that I shall call it an 'Academy of Object Teaching.'

"One of the leading features of the animal department is the hippopotamus, which I recently purchased for $25,000. These animals come from the river Nile, and can only be captured when they are young, and few survive transportation. The show will embrace all the leading features of a museum, menagerie, circus and hippodrome, and some peculiar centennial objects of attraction. I have 120 railroad cars for transporting all this, and it will require five trains to carry it. I have 1100 men and women connected with it, 500 horses and ponies, and 62 cages of wild animals. My term of office as Mayor of Bridgeport will expire in April, and the enterprise will receive my personal supervision. I intend to travel with it. We will be in Philadelphia for a time. I think we will go there before the Centennial opens and remain for a while during its progress. We intend to go to Europe possibly this season, certainly by next. We will visit all the prominent cities and towns in the United States, going as far East as Bangor, and as far West as Kansas City. I am the sole proprietor and manager, and my assistant managers are Smith, Nathans, June and Dailey."

THE SICK ROOM.

One of the worst faults of our very faulty modern architecture, as applied to houses, is found in the fact that our architects do not take into their plans the possibilities of sickness in the family. They act on the presumption, if they are not utterly careless and forgetful touching this matter, that only well people and strong people are to occupy the house that they design. Now, no house is properly constructed that has not in it a room or rooms expressly designed for the accommodation of the infirm and the sick. This room should be in the first place properly located. It should have a warm, sunny exposure. The window light should be ample and command the widest possible view. Sickness is tedious enough, when the invalid has the best possible conditions for comfort and amusement; but it is doubly tedious when one is confined in a room which affords to the sufferer nothing more diverting and inspiring than the sight of bare walls, and windows that reveal nothing but sightless air.

The writer says that everything should be done to shorten the long days and make the tedious nights cheerful, and that "the first essential in a sick room is a good, liberal fireplace. As a ventilator, this is unsurpassed. Through it, and by means of the warmth which it generates, the whole room is kept, in its atmospheric conditions, wholesome and pure. Nothing is more soothing and quieting than the influence which subtly steals into the senses of him who gazes dreamily into the gentle flame. How much it relieves the monotonous dreariness of confinement, no one who has not experienced it can realize. It is companionship in itself.—Golden Rule.

—A stupendous engineering feat is under consideration, being no less than the drainage of the Zuyder Zee, making that inland gulf, in extent 200 and odd miles by about 50, once indeed what, says the London Iron, it will probably again be, a fertile plain dotted with smiling villages. The Harlem Lake, the bed of which was overwhelmed by an eruption of the sea in the sixteenth century, was drained not many years ago by a company of English engineers. The Zuyder Zee dates from about the time when Earl Godwin's lands became a treacherous sandbank, an epoch remarkable for extensive inroads of the sea along the whole southern coasts of the German ocean. A writer in the London Daily News observes that the addition which the drainage of the Zuyder Zee will make to Holland will be equal to nearly six per cent. of the whole present area of that country. If successfully completed perhaps the feat may stimulate to a similar attempt to roll back the waves from a tract fully as large on our own (the English) eastern coast, which is believed by engineers to be quite as practicable.

—With the usual ingenuity of his kind, a Middletown, N. Y., compositor has made calculations showing that the work of the type-setter is by no means as easy as some people imagine. He has figured it out that in the course of a year's type-setting, the average compositor will put up more than seven million separate pieces, which, with the distribution of the same, requires more than fifteen million motions of the hand.

News and Notes.

Rev. E. D. Winslow, proprietor of the Boston Post, and Treasurer of the Boston News, absconded from Boston on Wednesday of last week, having committed forge ies amounting to $200,000. He purchased the Post for cash last May, raising the money on forged indorsements. Messrs. E F. Porter, Joseph H. Chadwick and the National Bank of the Commonwealth lose heavily. It is thought he sailed in a steamer for a foreign port on Saturday.

Louisa W. Pond, of Worcester, pleaded guilty on Saturday to twelve indictments, and was held in $60,000 bail. He was sentenced to the State prison for fifteen years.

The Iowa republicans are unanimous for Blaine and McCrary as a National ticket. McCrary is an ex-Congressman, and was conspicuous as a champion of the grangers. By the way, it may be remarked that Blaine stock is rising rapidly. He is the first choice of many Western States, and in New England he has strong support. Connecticut will go for him probably, in case there is no show for Hawley or Jewell, for first or second place.

Messrs. Jordan, Clark & Co., wholesale clothiers in Boston, who at the end of 1873 had a clear balance of $241,000, have suspended because of the heavy embezzlements of their book-keeper, Frank Sanford, who has absconded with a young woman. His wife is at her father's, in California. Experts are trying to trace out the amount of Sanford's robberies.

The prohibitionists of Maine are now before the legislature with a request for more law. The bill they ask to have enacted prohibits the manufacture of intoxicating liquors under a penalty of $500 fine or six months' hard labor, and for the second violation both the fine and imprisonment or a year of hard labor. There is one exception: Anybody may manufacture cider from apples grown in the State, and sell it in quantities of a gallon and upwards. All clerks and assistants are to be treated as principals, and any person who shall keep a sign of any kind upon or within any part of his premises, indicating intoxicating liquors are sold therein, shall be judged a common seller.

Fall River has twice the population of New Bedford, but only four more dwelling-houses.

The candidate who has probably gained most advantage by the selection of Cincinnati as the place for the sitting of the republican convention is General Hayes of Ohio. The reason which induced the committee to fix upon Cincinnati was not that it would help or weaken the chances of this or that particular candidate, but that in order that the party should succeed in the Presidential race next November it would be necessary to carry Ohio—one of the doubtful States—at the State election in October, three weeks in advance of the election of President, and it was claimed that the holding of the convention in Ohio would go far toward making that State safe next Fall. Formerly it was claimed that as Pennsylvania goes so goes the Union, but since the election in the Keystone State is no longer held in October the saying has become applicable to Ohio. The friends and supporters of Governor Hayes will urge, and justly, too, that so long as it is admitted by all that it is absolutely essential to republican success that the electoral vote of Ohio should be cast for the republican candidate that safety demands the nomination of Governor Hayes as the Presidential standard bearer, for the reason that he has proved his popularity and strength among the voters of Ohio by carrying the State for the third time and redeeming it from democratic rule. Another element in his favor will be his unimpeached character and record. Even democrats in the last canvass were forced to acknowledge his purity of character, as well as his administrative ability.—N. Y. Herald.

It is now reported that important testimony favorable to Piper will be presented at his second trial, charged with the belfry murder, which begins on Monday next.

The more Governor Hayes is reflected upon and investigated, the stronger he will appear for the Presidential nomination, and he will be ten times stronger as a candidate for election than as a candidate for nomination.—Ohio State Journal.

The talent of the College of Agriculture, and of the able and popular Professor of Veterinary Science of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, will contribute to furnish both pleasure and instruction.

The annual New Hampshire farmers' festival will be held at Concord, on the first and second days of February, and the Board of Agriculture extend a cordial and earnest invitation to the farmers of the State to be present, and participate in the exercises.

The Concord Patriot prefers Gen. Hancock as the democratic candidate for President and Lyman Trumbull for Vice President.

The adjourned meeting of the republicans of Senatorial district number six will be held on Thursday of this week at Alton. The Wolfeboro' News thinks a selection will be made of a candidate who can be elected.

He was born at Murray, Ky., January 10, and his name is John Centennial Thompson.

Congressman Franklin Landers, of Indianapolis, will probably be nominated as Governor of Indiana by the independent greenback party of that State. The straight democrats are in an awful stew about it, because these independents hold the balance of power, and the democrats will have to support Landers, or else start an establishment of their own and be badly defeated by the republicans. Holman is the candidate for the democratic nomination for Governor, and it is suggested that he offered his resolution with a view to have the House declare in favor of contraction.

Johnny Lynch, a thirteen-year-old West Warren (Mass.) boy, was showing his elder sister a pistol on Sunday, when it was discharged in her face, and she will probably lose her eyesight.

There is a man up Lowell way who may possibly want to know before Jeff. Davis is amnestied whether he has ever revoked a certain proclamation declaring Benjamin F. Butler "an outlaw," whose captor was to "cause him to be immediately executed by hanging," and whose officers likewise on capture were to be "reserved for execution."

"Blaine may plant and Bristow may water," says the Lowell Courier, confidently, "but William Tecumseh Sherman is going to walk off with the Cincinnati nomination, and he will be elected just as easy!"

The New York Commercial Advertiser prints a table showing that the amount of default on railroad bonds alone since the panic of 1872, is $783,967,665, of which the unsettled amount at the present time is $533,045,000, the ultimate loss on which is, of course, a question of time or conjecture. But the serious appearance of this total is greatly qualified by the fact that the list of roads defaulted contain a vast amount of good first and even second mortgages.

Edmund Anthony, senior proprietor of the Standard, and postmaster of New Bedford, died Monday, aged 65 years.

On the 1st of April a new railroad route between Boston and Washington, via Philadelphia and Baltimore, will be opened. It will be by way of the New York & New England and New York & New Haven roads to Harlem River; by transfer steamer Maryland to Jersey City; thence by the Pennsylvania and Wilmington & Baltimore roads to the South. Two trains will be run each way daily—one morning and one evening. Pullman cars will run on both. The Maryland will take eight passenger coaches across the river. It is probable that much of the travel over the Eastern and Lowell roads will be turned this way, as these will be the only Boston lines running Pullman cars.

Centennial search reveals the fact that George Washington was once the manager of a lottery scheme. He could not tell a lie, but he did what he could for the Blue Ridge turn-pike.

A letter from Ravenna, Ohio, to the Cleveland Leader, tells this painful story: "Two months ago, T. G. Murphy, teacher of the Ravenna Catholic school, having occasion to correct a child, eight years of age, named Kelly, for the trivial offence of whispering, lifted him by the ears, and bumped him up and down upon the floor, with such violence, that a hopeless case of hip disease is the consequence. Over two hours after, the little fellow dragged himself homeward, and crept into the bed, from which he has never risen, and which he will doubtless never leave again, save as a corpse or as a helpless cripple. His suffering has been intense. It being impossible to move him, his lower limbs have become paralyzed and wasted to a skeleton. The bones of his body are pricking through. Dr. Joseph Waggoner, one of Ravenna's ablest as well as most humane physicians, has been in constant attendance, and gives it as his opinion that suppuration has taken place at the hip joint, and that the child's recovery is impossible, for, though his life should be spared, he will be hopelessly crippled. When these facts became generally known and indignantly commented upon, Father Carroll, the village priest, poured upon the unfortunate mother a torrent of invective for her imprudence in disclosing the tale to Protestant ears, denouncing her and her boy in severest terms, and vindicating to the utmost Mr. Murphy and his discipline."

Isaac N. Blodgett, of Franklin, has been chosen chairman of the democratic State central committee. He is the man who invented the present patable poll law in order to give himself a seat in the House, which he could not get under the old law.

Capt. Low, commanding the Tennessee flag-ship of the Asiatic Squadron, has informed the Navy Department that he arrived at Nagasaki, Nov. 27. Among the the incidents of the Tennessee's voyage is mentioned the fact of her beating the time of the mail steamer Golden Age, and winning (for those who bet at Shanghae) a purse of $2000, made up at Shanghae between the Americans and English. The Tennessee's time was 38 hours; the Golden Age's 44 hours. The Tennessee made, under sail and steam in the latter part of the run, thirteen and a half knots an hour.

The Washington correspondent of the Advertiser gives a list of the bills introduced by the democrats in the House, and shows that if they are passed they will take from the treasury seventy millions of dollars.

The latest advices from Cuba state that 2500 insurgents have invaded the counties of Sagua and Marcurijes and destroyed extensive sugar plantations, valued at many millions of dollars. The town of Sagua in la Chica was burned, and warehouses, containing 1600 hogsheads of sugar, consumed. The depredations of the rebels cover a wide range of country, extending from the north to the south side of the island.

Hartford people think of choosing "Mark Twain" for Mayor.

The book-keeper of the Bingham House, in Philadelphia, has been held in $1000 for trial on a charge of violating the civil rights law, by refusing a colored clergyman a room, alleging that the house was full, when the rejected applicant sat down in a side room and counted eighteen men who afterward registered their names and were assigned room. Finally the book-keeper told the preacher that he refused his application because he was a black man.

A son of Rev. M. Durfee, of Worcester, Vt., was killed by a log rolling on him while in the woods chopping, on Saturday. He was alone, and when found was underneath the log.

The New York Tribune publishes a letter from Boston in which it is said that Massachusetts delegates to the National republican convention may vote for either Bristow, Blaine, Washburne or Fish. The letter adds that the suggestion of Charles Francis Adams is received favorably in no section, thus completely overlooking Sam Bowles. The latter however, is equal to the emergency. He proves, satisfactorily to himself, that the choice of the republican convention is narrowed to Adams, Bristow and Washburne, and says that in the judgment of to-day Bristow is the one of those three.

James B. Beck, the newly elected Senator from Kentucky, was born in Scotland, and consequently there will be one man in the Senate who is not a candidate for President.

Special despatches from Bismarck contain glowing accounts from the Black Hills country. A party carrying the mail between Bismarck and the Black Hills gave wonderful reports of the richness of the country. Twelve hundred men are now in that portion of the Black Hills through which rapid creeks run. The average diggings are one dollar an hour per man, and $137 was taken out in six hours by four men. The next day the same force took out $112. California Joe saw $34 taken out of one pan, there being one nugget worth $20. The returning party brought specimens o gold. All agree in the statements regarding the richness of the country. A party is preparing to start from Bismarck for the Black Hills and will take a large amount of goods.

The Augusta, (Ga.) Chronicle predicts that "the repeal of the 14th amendment of the Constitution of the United States will come in the fullness of time." On what is this startling prediction based? Not on the continued ascendency of the republican party, but clearly on the expectation of a democratic restoration.

"Blaine is a fiend," remarked a Southern Congressman who heard the Maine representative quote from the confederate archives the damaging record of Jefferson Davis. It is the mission of "a fiend" to torture the wicked. Blaine performed the part most successfully. "I heard Blaine's last speech on the amnesty bill," says a Massachusetts man just returned from Washington, "and it made me proud and sad." I was proud when I saw a New Englander beating down one and another of the Southern men who angrily rose to interrupt him, as a lion would sweep through a pack of maddened curs; but I was sad because the attitude of the Southern members and their muttered words snowed that the hopes kindled on the Seventeenth of June were but an illusion. I can no longer doubt that many members of Congress hate the Union as bitterly as they did during the war. The speech of Mr. Blaine did not revive that hate, it only caused his revelation."

Nashua has only two paupers, and the overseers of the poor have rendered no outdoor relief since last July.

—In answer to inquiries made concerning the matter, the Churchman explains why Easter will fall this year on the 16th rather than on the 9th of April, by saying that Easter Day is regulated not by a solar but by a lunar cycle—the cycle that regulates the Golden Number. Now, by solar calculation a day always begins at midnight; but by lunar calculation it begins at noon. If, therefore, the Paschal full moon falls on a Saturday, after 12 m., it is counted as falling on Sunday; and then Easter Day is, under the rule in the Prayer Book, the Sunday following. This is what happens in the present year. The Paschal moon falls on Saturday, April 8, at 2:43 P. M. It is therefore counted as falling on Sunday, April 9, and Easter Day is the Sunday following, i. e., April 16. It may be added that should the full moon fall on March 21, before 12 m., that full moon (counted as falling on March 20,) would not regulate Easter Day, but the one following. This happened in 1810.

—Emerson's last volume contains this fine thought: "Courage to ask questions; courage to expose our ignorance. The great gain is, not to shine, not to conquer your companion—then you learn nothing but conceit—but to find a companion who knows what you do not; to lift with him and be overthrown, horse and foot, with utter destruction of all your logic and learning. There is a defeat that is useful."

THE LATE COMMODORE POPE.

[Boston Transcript.]

Can you allow space for a few words in memory of a good man who spent all his years in his country's service, and whose life was marked by unusual saintliness. The late Commodore John Pope, who died in Dorchester on Friday of last week, was born in Sandwich, Mass., in 1798, and appointed midshipman at the age of eighteen. As midshipman he was in numerous engagements with pirates and buccaneers in the Gulf of Mexico, and took part in breaking up the piratical gang headed by La Fite. He was lieutenant under Commodore Paterson in the frigate Constitution 1827-30, in the Mediterranean squadron.

He was also first lieutenant of the sloop of war Erie, commanded by the eccentric Captain Percival. While first lieutenant of the frigate Independence (the flagship of the Brazilian squadron), the small-pox and plague, which were then raging in South America, broke out among the ships' company, which numbered over 700 men, and at one time a third of them were down with these epidemics. Commodore Pope was commissioned a commander in 1843, and in 1844 commanded the receiving ship at Boston. He was at the Charlestown Navy Yard in 1837, and in 1843 and in 1850 3 as executive officer. He commanded the Vandalia in Commodore Perry's expedition to treat with the Japanese Government in 1852. In 1855 Commodore Abbott relieved Commodore Perry; Abbott died during the year, and Captain Pope assumed command of the squadron, transferring his flag from the Vandalia to the frigate Macedonian.

During this cruise he had a number of severe engagements with Chinese pirates. In the Chinese rebellion in 1855, he rendered valuable service in protecting the property of the English and American merchants, living in China. These merchants in appreciation of his efficient services, made him a present of a large and elegant service of silver plate, accompanied by a handsome testimonial expressing their thanks for his kindness, their good wishes for his health and prosperity, and their sorrow at parting with him.

He was in 1855 commissioned a post captain. He commanded the naval station at Portsmouth, N. H., from 1857 to 1860; was sent to Europe to command the steam frigate Richmond in the latter year; returned to the United States in that ship in 1861, joining the Gulf squadron, where he rendered service until the following year, when he was relieved from sea duty and placed on the retired list, having reached the age of sixty-two years. From 1863 to 1865 he was prize commissioner at Boston to adjust claims and to look out for the prizes captured by the blockading squadron. The last active duty he performed was from 1866 to 1869 as lighthouse inspector.

The commodore was the last of his class. All the other officers of his date passed away before him.

While a midshipman serving in the West Indies the ship to which he was attached was wrecked, and he was in the water lashed to a spar for thirty hours.

But whatever services the commodore may have rendered to his country, his own personal character must ever shine brightest. He was a thorough gentleman. He was a good Christian man. His integrity, his unswerving honesty caused him to be known in the navy as "honest John." His disposition was the most amiable, and it is said that no sign of anger, no harsh or unkind words ever came from him either on board ship or in the midst of his official duties, or in his happy home. His death is not mourned alone by his own kindred, but by his neighbors and by his church, and by all who knew him. He never turned the poor away from his door empty. The naked and hungry will weep for him. It is not a little singular that four such sterling characters as Gardner, Howe, Decatur and Pope should pass away almost together.

—Well, here is an obituary as is an obituary, in the Indianapolis Herald: He was a man who had hosts of warm friends, and his death will be sincerely regretted. While deploring his untimely end, however, we must not forget that he was one of that dangerous class of genial swindlers whose loose ideas of right and wrong have done so much toward making us a nation of thieves. An unmitigated rogue, wholly bad in everything, is much less dangerous than one who coolly perpetrates the most monstrous frauds, and yet is not lacking in those virtues which make his fellow-men love him.

—When a little St. Louis boy has been gone several days his parents miss him, and the papers come out with advertisements like this: "If anybody finds a little boy, four or five years old, dressed in blue jeans pantaloons and jacket, and brown cap, it would be well to ship the lad to Mr. Henry Thon, No. 2000 Franklin avenue, who is one boy short."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—Rice coffee is a good food for children who are suffering with Summer complaints, and is made by browning the grains of rice like coffee, and afterward boiling them. It is not unpalatable, very nourishing, and can be made any strength that is required. With the addition of sweet cream and loaf sugar, a child of two or three years will require no other food until the disease is removed.

—While some boys were skating recently, a gentleman noticed one on the bank who looked longingly, but who had no means of enjoying the sport. "Well, bub, haven't you any skates?" "No, sir." "Why not?" "'Cause mother says I ain't prepared to die, and father says he needs the money to buy him some undershirts!" was the lonesome reply.

—The most glowing passages in a minister's sermon will attract scarcely half the attention that centres on the man who blows his nose in church.—Fulton Times.

—The German Nurse: "Is it a Cherman or an Enklish pay?" The Mamma: "Well, I don't know. You see she was born in England, but my husband is German." The German Nurse: "Ach, soh! Zen ve vill vait to see vat le-kvetch she vill schteak, and zen ve ——— know." —Punch.

—And now the Alfonsist troops are concentrating, and it looks blue for the Carlists. Isabella—with her gingham umbrella—is seen coming over the Pyrenees to join her son. "The umberella" is to aid him in his reign, of course. There is no other nuns from Spain.—New York Telegram.

—An enterprising friend suggested us to print our first Centennial issue in the National colors. The idea was neat but impossible. We have no white ink, we could not be blue on such a day, so we concluded to have the Bulletin universally read.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Where Does It All Come From?

Pints and quarts of filthy Catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane which lines the chambers of the nose, and its little glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life-liquid is needed to build up the system, but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which also acts directly upon these glands, correcting them, and apply Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from. The instrument and both medicines sold by druggists and dealers in medicines.

Needless Suffering.

Many persons of weakly constitution, with dyspeptic and bilious tendencies, suffer life-long bodily distress unnecessarily. Their existences are commonly shorter than those of healthier mortals, but while they last, it is usually the case that they are continually doing themselves, or being dosed to no purpose. Could they be induced to use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for a while, strength regained, digestion restored, and the disappearance of bilious symptoms, would speedily convince them with the difference between a remedy which deals with causes, and those which affect symptoms merely. Not only are the Bitters a searching specific for complaints affecting the stomach, liver or intestinal canal, but they are, in consequence of their invigorative and healing influence upon the entire physique an admirable means of protecting the system against the atmospheric influences which beget malarial disease.

Jottings.

The democrats renominated Col. Jerome B. Butler of this city as their candidate for Senator, on Tuesday.

The temperance movement at York is doing a good work, and some two hundred names are now on the pledge. At a recent meeting a more fully permanent organization was made by choosing the requisite committees.

The Jubilee Singers will appear at the Temple to-morrow evening, the proceeds go toward the Mount Olivet church fund.

Peter Marcy, a brother of Daniel Marcy, the democratic candidate for Governor, is a resident of New Orleans and very rich. He has promised, so a prominent democrat of Rockingham county boasts, to contribute $50,000 to help his brother to an election in this State.—Nashua Telegraph. We hope the democratic voters of Portsmouth, who have so often rallied at the polls "for the champs" will demand their full share of this fund before depositing their ballots.

Petitions have been presented in the Massachusetts legislature asking for an investigation into the affairs of the Eastern Railroad. Just what is wanted, an impartial inquiry into the causes which have brought ruin on the road.

The following extract from the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE of January 10, 1804, shows the views of the Portsmouth Jeffersonian democrats of that day relative to a third term: "We believe the love, the respect, the gratitude, of the people of the United States toward Mr. Jefferson will secure his re-election, as often as he will accept it, provided he pursues the same line of conduct as heretofore." The third term was not a very great bugbear to the democrats of 1804, provided the right man was elected. Would it be to the democrats of 1876, under like circumstances? GINGER.

Arthur P. Delvelin the "reformed Roman Catholic," will deliver a lecture on the Coming Conflict with the Roman Catholic Church," at the Temple this (Wednesday) evening at eight o'clock. Mr. D. has lectured with great success in other cities, and after being mobbed at Dover lectured on Saturday evening without being disturbed. The Gloucester Advertiser says, of his lecture there: "There was a large and eminently respectable audience in attendance, comprising some of our best citizens, and not one person left the hall during the entire lecture, which is something remarkable in this city."

The New York Tribune Almanac for 1876 is as all the old and many new features of great value. Its election returns are unusually full and accurate, and are accompanied by full statistics of the trade and commerce of the United States and Great Britain for the last twenty-one years, statistics of the iron manufacture, cotton product, shipping and railway traffic of the United States, all of which are specially useful in this Centennial and Presidential year. The Almanac is useful to every intelligent man in the country, is as trustworthy as in the old days, and much more complete, and may be obtained by sending 25 cents to the Tribune office, New York.

—A lean, hungry looking darkey debarked from the Macon train, yesterday afternoon, and, with a slab-sided carpet sack dangling in his grasp, approached one of the negro hackmen at the depot entrance:

"Pardner, kin yer tell me where I kin find a cheap boardin'-house?"

"How cheap?" asked the hackman.

"De cheapes' in de town; I isn't partikler what it am!" said the stranger.

The hackman eyed the slim negro a moment, and then gave an awfully audible guffaw.

"What's de matter now?" asked another of the jehus.

"Hyar's anudder member ob de legislature hab arriv'!" was the response.

Amid the laughter of the crowd, the death-like darkey disappeared.—Vicksburg Herald.

—They have some queer girls over in Colorado. One of them who resides in the Cache la Poudre valley had been receiving the attentions of a young man for about a year, but becoming impatient at his failure to bring matters to a crisis, she resolved to ascertain his intentions. When he next called she took him gently by the ear, led him to a seat, and said:

"Nobby, you've bin foolin' 'round this claim fur mighty near a year, an' hev never got shot off yer month on the marryin' biz. I've cottoned to yer on the square clean through, an' hev stood off every other gallant that has tried ter chip in; an' now I want yer to come down to bizness or leave the ranche. Ef yer on the marry an' want yer pard that'll stick rite to ye till ye pass in yer checks an' the good Lord calls ye over the range, justasqual an' we'll hitch; but if that ain't yer game, draw out and give some feller a show fur his pile. Now sing yer song or skip out."

He sang.—Laramie Sun.

AT —
HENDERSON'S.

The parties who had agreed to purchase my stock of Dry Goods on the first of January, not being able to meet their engagements, the stock is still left in my hands, which seriously interferes with the business arrangements I had made.

A Present to every Customer

buying One Dollar's worth of goods.

A Better Present to every customer buying Two Dollars' worth.

A still Better One to every customer buying Five Dollars' worth.

An Elegant Present to every customer buying Ten Dollars' worth.

Every customer buying One Dollar's worth or more, is sure of a Valuable Present.

In addition to all this, one in every twenty-five packages containing a present, also contains a check entitling the lucky holder to the

ONE-HALF BARREL FLOUR,

The Grandest Dry Goods sale ever heard of,—offering better inducements even than Lovering in his celebrated book sale.

READING FOR CHILDREN.
OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.
A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.
A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.
WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "trashy and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these maleficent issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic mind is under their baleful influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, John Hay, T. S. Nicholas, there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.0

Or, on $5.50, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound Volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.00 Or for $8.0, they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $14.00

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five superb art series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Castoria.

Cross, sickly babies and children may enjoy health and mothers have rest, if they will use Castoria. Worms, feverishness, teething, wind colic, sour stomach and undigested food make children cross, and productive wickedness.

Castoria will assimilate the food, expel worms, and correct all these things. For twenty years Dr. Pitcher experimented in his private practice to produce an effective Cathartic and stomach regulator which would be as effective as Castor Oil, without its unpleasant taste or recoil.

The reputation of his experiment extended. Physicians and nurses rapidly adopted his remedy, to which he gave the name of Castoria.

Castoria is as pleasant to take as honey, regulates the stomach and bowels, and does not gripe. It is so adapted to all ages, contains no alcohol, and is absolutely harmless to the most tender infant.

Try Castoria once and you will never be without it.

Prepared at the Laboratory of J. B. Rose & Co., 46 Dey Street, New York. 6t.p.p.90

Why will you suffer from Rheumatism, Sprains, Stiff Joints, Swellings, Burns, Scalds or Weak Back, when the Centaur Liniment affords certain relief. Many articles soothe pain to a certain extent, but the Centaur Liniment cures. The White Liniment is for the human family; the Yellow Liniment is for horses and animals.

Cross and sickly children

can be made healthy and strong by regulating their stomachs and bowels with Castoria. It is more effective than Castor Oil, and is as pleasant as take as honey. For Wind Colic, Sour Stomach, Worms and Constipation, there is nothing in existence equal to Castoria.

Harper's Bazar.
ILLUSTRATED.

Notices of the Press.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the child even by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by the patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its useful designs for embroidered slippers and innumerous dressing-gowns. But the reading matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment of families.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its story and essays, its poetry and jokes, are all invigorating to the mind. —Chicago Evening Journal.

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, and from that time to the present their success has astounded, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing.

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time life was one burden. For five or six years past have been growing worse, and in: Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took a box of pills, there I by several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and received one box. Soon I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one box more felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed find $1 for another box. Yours truly, SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and they have been worth ten dollars for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. I have taken two boxes, and now I can report myself cured. I have taken only three pills at a time entaring. In one of the testimonials I read that they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do with-out them. In one case they saved the life of one packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,
Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaint, causing me much pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the ground without lifting one by throwing a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your testimonial in the Chicago Republicanlist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to Lynn for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the Bowels and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without money enough to buy them, I think the must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages. Yours respectfully, MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take 'em until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute solely to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roxbindale, who are using them, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages. MRS. B. T. LANE.

FIVE AND A HALF--PATCHED.

I am a bachelor, an old bachelor; at least that's what my nieces—pretty, saucy, clever, lovable girls—call me; and no doubt they're right, though I can't go so far to agree with them when they declare a man owning to five and forty years and a dozen white hairs "decidedly venerable" and "fearfully gray."

However, an old bachelor I am dubbed, and I must confess, if to acquire that distinction one is obliged to enjoy life to the utmost, as I do, and be made much of by lovely women and charming maidens, as I am, I have no serious objection to the title.

In the first place, my home is a home in every sense of the word, although without a mother, or even a mother-in-law.

I copy, and have copied for the past year, a suite of remarkably pleasant rooms, the front windows looking on a city park, and the back on a garden made delightful by two fine old peach-trees, a heavy grapevine, and a sweet-smelling wistaria. The latter has climbed to my windows, and twining in and out of the slats of the shutters, effectually prevents my closing them, but gives me in recompense great fragrant bunches of purple flowers.

These cheerful rooms are part and parcel of Mrs. Midget's boarding-house. No, I am wrong. Mrs. Midget—Mr. Midget was lost at sea five years ago—does not keep a boarding-house, but takes a few select boarders, of whom she is pleased to intimate she considers me the selectest.

Wonderfully comfortable the "few select" find it in Mrs. Midget's shady, old-fashioned, neatly kept, three-story brick house.

"Every thing like wax," my eldest sister says when she comes to visit me, which is about once in four weeks—a day or two after my magazines have arrived.

"And the landlady," I invariably reply, "isn't she awful cunning?—so demure in her ways and speech for such a wee thing, and so pretty, with her bright blue eyes and yellow hair?"

But Maria, I can't divine why, pretends not to hear me, or else repeats, with scornful emphasis, "Awful cunning!"

The fact is, I'm so much among my kinswomen that I often find myself, when I wish to be particularly emphatic, borrowing their queer adjectives and peculiar forms of expression.

"Indeed, uncle," said Charley to me the other day—named for me, Charlotte (Charles, as near as they could get at it)—you're beginning to talk like a girl—and at your time of life, too!" And I didn't feel at all insulted; for if girls talk as well as my nieces, I consider Charley's remark rather a compliment than otherwise.

Mrs. Midget knows how to furnish a table, too; all sorts of little delicacies and unexpected tidbits, stews and hashes above reproach, bread and pies marvels of culinary skill, and tea and coffee—well, really coffee and tea.

As for Mrs. Midget herself, she's such a tot of a woman that I feel like laughing outright every time I look at her, perched on a pile of music-books placed on a chair—the chair itself taller than any of the "few selects"—at the head of the dining table. Indeed, only the other day, when she asked, in a solemn manner, fixing her blue eyes on my face, and lifting a large soup ladle in her mite of a hand, if I would have some soup, I did burst out laughing, she looked so very like a little girl playing dinner with her mother's dinner-set.

The miniature woman laid down the ladle and gazed at me in surprise.

"Mrs. Midget, I beg your pardon," said I; "I suddenly thought of a man I saw at the circus."

"Oh!" said Mrs. Midget, and returned to the soup.

I'm a romantic old fellow—there, you see how naturally I fall into my nieces' way—love, poetry, music, flowers—(Mrs. Midget always has a posy ready for me in Summer-time, which she pins into my button-hole with her own fair hands; and I assure you it's not at all unpleasant to have her standing on the tips of her toes to reach it, with her small round head just touching my chin), and the fair sex.

Yes, old bachelor as I am, I love, and always have loved, the fair sex; and I really think it is because I love them so well I remain unmarried. I never could make up my mind that one of all those I admired was prettier, brighter and sweeter than the others, and as I wanted the sweetest, prettiest and brightest, I have been in a dilemma all my life. But I've always meant to, and my intention is stronger than ever since the day I picked up that little patched glove in Broadway in front of Stewart's.

I feel convinced that the owner of that glove is the wife for me. I wear it next my heart. Silly? Not a bit of it. No single man could help wearing a glove like that near his heart.

Five and a half, a pretty mouse-color; every finger well filled out, scarcely a crease in them—she must be plump; a faint smell of rose, (as a general thing, with the exception of honest cologne, I detest perfumes, but if I can endure any, it is rose, calling to mind, as it does, bees, butterflies, flowers, and all that sort of thing,) and the cunningest patch in the palm of the hand.

Now I'd never seen a patch in a glove before, so it struck me as something odd, and I examined it critically. The manner in which that patch was sewed in told me the wearer of the glove was neat and methodical; the fine silken stitches used in sewing that patch in, that she was dainty; the fact that the color of the patch exactly matched that of the glove, that she was constant, true to one shade.

Then I imagined her personal appearance; soft brown eyes, chestnut hair, slight but plump figure, feet to correspond with her hands—decidedly graceful and altogether very attractive.

"I'll wager she sings, plays and dances well," I said to myself, in conclusion; "is not rich, or she would not patch her glove, or poor, or she would not wear 'kids.'"

I must find her!

All very well to say, but how to find her? A "pers-nal," if it met her soft brown eyes, would frighten so modest a little creature, and she would be likely to hide herself instead of allowing herself to be found.

Shall I show my treasure to my niece, and ask if they can give me any clew to the original possessor?

Pshaw! the teasing things would make no end of fun of me.

By Jove! where have my wits been? I'll see what Mrs. Midget says about it. She's by far the most sensible woman of my acquaintance, and very sympathetic, and is at this moment sitting alone in the dining-room in a low rocking-chair, with a giant work-basket by her side and a heap of stockings in her lap.

"There, my dear Mrs. Midget, is the glove. You will see at once that it is all my fancy painted it;" and I placed it in the landlady's little hand.

Over went the big work-basket on the floor, as Mrs. Midget, throwing herself back in a paroxysm of laughter, came near going over too, her absurdly small feet kicking wildly in the air for a moment, until I had restored the rocking-chair to its equilibrium.

"Shall I pick up the things, Mrs. Midget?" said I, as soon as she ceased laughing, rather put out, to tell the truth, by her strange conduct, so unlike the sympathy I had expected.

"Yes—no—if you please—I don't care," stammered Mrs. Midget, in a voice very different from her every-day one, and with the loveliest rose-color in her cheeks. As I thought so, I detected the fragrance of rose apparently emanating from a spool of thread I held in my hand, and remembered the glove.

"Did you drop the glove Mrs. Midget," asked I, seriously.

"No," replied she, opening a wee hand, and showing it, crumpled into a little heap. "Take it, and oh! please say no more about it. It's too—too—too ridiculous!" and off she went again.

"Mrs. Midget," said I, "what are you laughing at?"

"I suddenly thought of a man I saw at the circus," said she, with a saucy look I had never seen before in her blue eyes.

"I am convinced you know the owner o the glove," said I. "It's an old maid whom nature has sought to compensate for lack of other charms by giving her a perfect hand, or a grandmother who still wears a five and a half, though her complexion has fled and her hair departed. You know—I'm sure of it; and though you completely shatter my beautiful dream, you must tell me." And in my excitement I—quite unintentionally—put my arm around her slender waist.

"Well, if I must, I must," said Mrs. Midget. Prepare for a fearful blow. The glove is mine!"

Mrs. Midget has ceased to be a widow, and I am no longer a bachelor.—Harper's Bazar.

Gov. Cheney's Acceptance.

CONCORD, January 5, 1876.

DEAR SIR:—By a very fully attended republican State convention held here to-day, you have been unanimously nominated for re-election to the office of Governor of the State of New Hampshire, and the undersigned have been selected a committee to notify you of the same. Here ends our official duty, but permit us to refer to the fact that this day completes a century since the patriotic fathers of this State in that historic convention at Exeter boldly adopted the first republican State constitution in America, and set up self government six months before July 4, 1776. This action of our fathers was not only the precursor of the National Declaration of Independence, the Centennial of which we are about to celebrate, but also of the constitutions of the States composing the Union. We refer to these facts because we believe the proceedings of our convention consonant with the acts which make the day historic, and it gives us great pleasure to assure you of our faith that the people will ratify those proceedings at the polls. Nearly a century has elapsed since Meshach Weare became the Chief Executive of New Hampshire, and we know of no one who has discharged the duties pertaining to the office in a manner more unexceptionably to the entire people than has Your Excellency.

We enclose a copy of the resolutions adopted by the convention. Yours very truly, John D. Lyman, John R. Varney, Jeremiah W. Sanborn, Larkin D. Mason, Jesse Gault, Charles Wilder, Edward Gustine, Shepherd L. Bowers, George N. Greeley, E. O. Colby, committee.

To Hon. P. C. CHENEY, Manchester, N. H.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 24, 1876.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor informing me of the action of the republican State convention holden at Concord on the 5th inst.

I desire to express my obligations for the kindly manner in which the convention was pleased to renew its expression of confidence in me. This nomination, tendered with so much courtesy, I am impelled to accept, notwithstanding my preference would have been that the convention should have selected a candidate more especially fitted for the exigencies to which you so appropriately allude; but, should your action be ratified by the people, and I should be called to continue in the office I now hold, I shall endeavor to discharge faithfully and honestly its duties. The resolutions adopted by the convention have my hearty approval. Very truly yours,

P. C. CHENEY.

To Hon. John D. Lyman, John R. Varney, J. W. Sanborn, Larkin D. Mason, Jesse Gault, Charles Wilder, Edward Gustine, S L. Bowers, G. N. Greeley, E. O. Colby, committee.

News and Notes.

The bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the Centennial passed the lower House o gress on Tuesday by a vote of 146 to 130. The democratic members from this State, Bell and Jones, voted in the negative. Mr. Blair voted yes.

At North Hampton, Mass., Tuesday night, Jan. 25th, seven disguised men broke into the house of John Whittlesey, cashier of the Northampton National Bank, secured Mr. Whittlesey and family, obtained the keys of the bank and, leaving one of their number as guard, proceeded to the bank and attempted to break into the vault, but the door and the lock were too strong for them and they had to leave without accomplishing their purpose. Cashier Whittlesey, however, was robbed of his gold watch and what money he had at home. There is evidence that the gang had been planning the job for some time, making their headquarters in the attic of one of the town school houses. It is supposed to have been done by a party of five men who had been hiding in the garret of the Bridge street district school house, their retreat being accidentally discovered. The house of Mr. Whittlesey, the Cashier, was entered and seven people handcuffed and gagged. Mr. Whittlesey gave up the keys he had, but defied the villains. The lock of the vault was injured.

The Washington correspondence of the New York Herald says Mr. Blaine gets half a bushel of letters per day from all parts of the country, praising him for his recent performances in the House. He has certainly waked up the country.

J. L. Embree, one of the principal clerks employed by J. S. McKee & Co., agents of the Brazilian line of steamers, at New York, reports that E. D. Winslow went to the wharf where the steamer Nellie Martin lay. There he was told that it had been advisable to postpone the sailing of the steamer. The clerk at the wharf told him to go to the Pine street office and engage passage, as the Nellie Martin would certainly sail within a week or ten days. He started off, but did not put in an appearance at the Pine street office at all. It seems that the leaving of steamers for Brazil is somewhat irregular. Whenever a sufficient number of passengers and amount of freight, etc., to make the trip pay are secured, the vessel sails. Otherwise the leaving is sometimes postponed. The Line has a contract for carrying the United States mail. The Nellie Martin will leave for Brazil next week, and the postponement of her sailing on Saturday effectually prevented Mr. Winslow from going to Brazil, as there is no other line of steamers from New York to that country. A sailing vessel, however, left New York for Brazil last week, but she did not carry passengers.

The Hampshire Gazette, discussing the next Presidency, comes to the question of the republican candidacy as follows: "If we were to name the man to-day, we should say Washburn. We know what his record is. Bristow may be just as good, but we know less of him."

Rev. Dr. Buddington says there are probabilities of a Congregational Council which will not take up its time with considering Plymouth Church's administration of its discipline, although his might be considered. It would institute a searching inquiry into Mr. Beecher's guilt or innocence, such as has not been made. Dr. Buddington says: "If Mr. Beecher accuses Dr. Storrs and myself of being his enemies, by parity of reasoning he might say that all the members of the council of 1874 were his enemies, inasmuch as they thanked us for our course in maintaining church principles." It is believed that the movement will first take shape in New England.

The House of Representatives after a debate of an hour passed a bill restoring the old rates for postage on third-class matter.

General Hawley doesn't seem to be over pleased with the shape in which the Centennial bill passed the House. He is quoted as saying that it would be better to let the bill die, since the Board of Finance could easily raise half a million more from subscriptions and then borrow a million upon a mortgage, thereby making the stockholders better off by half a million than they will be under the pending bill.

Congressman Jones has introduced a bill to repeal all laws authorizing the appointment of Civil Engineers in the Navy.

The friends of General Forrest of Memphis, Tenn., who during the war acquired a bad reputation for his alleged connection with the massacre at Port Pillow, intend to bring him forward as a candidate for Governor of Tennessee.

The Cincinnati Enquirer puts it down as "a glaring fact" that Mr. Tilden could not come within 40,000 of carrying Ohio for the Presidency.

The tax resisters in Mississippi are in a fair way to control the State and defy all laws. The Natchez Democrat says: "If the legislature does not very soon devise some way to compel the payment of taxes, the army of non-tax-payers will, in another year or two, be greater than the army of tax-payers, and then there will be anarchy and confusion worse confounded. The non-tax-payers, counting delinquent sales of real estate for 1874 and 1875, already represent nearly one-fourth of all the property in the country."

Brownlee, who has been on trial in Indianapolis for several weeks for accepting bribes in whiskey cases, was acquitted.

In spite of the crimes of E. D. Winslow, the Boston Post says: The editorial conduct of the paper will remain unchanged; and, in short, the acts of the late treasurer, which were performed in his individual character and for apparently no other purpose than personal aggrandizement, will cause neither loss nor change, beyond his own removal in the establishment.

Come, gentlemen, what about a reduction in postage? The session is six weeks old, and the people are still licking Hamlin's highway-robbery postage stamps on papers and parcels.—Detroit Free Press.

State Attorney General Lewis W. Clarke has recently appointed Mr. Daniel R. Prescott, a State detective, and has given him power to proceed to the scene of any crime that may occur within the limits of New Hampshire and take active measures for the detection of the criminal. Mr. Prescott rendered very valuable assistance in the La Page trial, and also in the Goffstown assault case.

Governor Cheney and wife have returned from Washington.

It is rather singular that Gov. Tilden, who represents a party which believes in a State sticking to its rights, and in affairs of mere home rule, should have devoted half his message to National topics. Doesn't the State fool with the nation a little more than the nation bothers with the State, after all?—New York Herald.

The people of St. Paul, Minnesota, are too busy to ride in street cars. A local paper says: "It is a rarity to see a passenger in a car. This makes it easy for the horses, but hard on the stockholders."

Samuel Ellis, Jacob Louis and Max Rindskopf, members of the well known distillery firm of Rindskopf Brothers, pleaded guilty of whiskey frauds in the United States Court at Milwaukee, and appealed to the mercy of the Court.

It is claimed for Maine that it has less crime in proportion to population than any other State in the Union.

There will be no tickets at the Centennial. The price of admission will be fifty cents, and every visitor will have to provide himself with a fifty-cent piece, as small change and quarters will not be taken.

The House appropriation committee have agreed to cut down the pay of Congressmen to $4500, without pay or allowances.

Six hundred and seventy French pictures have been selected to send to the Centennial, including the "Declaration of Independence" and the "Surrender of Yorktown," and also 100 sculptures, besides sixty engravings.

Maine had twenty-one railroad accidents last year, fourteen persons having been killed and seven injured.

The whole expenses of the State of Vermont for the last fiscal year, including interest on the State debt, as well as payments on the principal, were $510,230.

Dartmouth has 479 students.

The President has replied to the resolution of the House, saying that no correspondence has taken place with any European Government except Spain in relation to the insurrection in Cuba.

P. T. Barnum says he won't be Mayor of Bridgeport anyhow another year.

John Rodgers, of Hopkinton, was seriously injured a few days ago by a barrel of cider rolling over him as he was putting it down cellar.

The Taunton Iron Works Company's foundry is stopped for the present.

The well-informed Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, speaking of the paralysis which seems to have settled on the democratic side of the House, says: "One of the felt difficulties of their situation is found in the fact that many of them were elected from republican districts by the votes of dissatisfied republicans, and, as a strong revulsion has passed over the country since, they are afraid to move in any democratic direction lest their first term should also prove their last. Such conditions are not favorable to the creation of bold policies, and the people are not likely to be astounded with any originating with that class."

The estimated value of the school buildings and sites in Great Falls is set at $80,000.

It is eleven years since the close of the war, yet a report comes from Tennessee that a former noted guerrilla chief, Dock Mangum by name, was murdered on his farm a few days since in revenge for some deed committed by him during the rebellion. The cowardly murderers, two in number, rode up near a field where Mangum was working and emptied the contents of two shot guns into his body. They were a long time in getting up sufficient courage to carry out their design.

The graduating class at the Manchester high school will wear calico in recognition of the Centennial year, when they leave school, next Summer.

The latest story concerning the Brydges-McKenzie couple, who eloped from Montreal, is that the parents on both sides have consented that the lady shall have a divorce, and then marry the young man to whose fortunes she has attached herself. The Montreal husband is said to be indifferent, and this course may bring the affair to what is called "a happy ending."

Everywhere, almost, the independents are wistfully feeling their way back into the republican camp.—Pittsburgh Commercial.

"Veritas," the Washington correspondent of the Bridgeport Standard, writes that the democratic Congressmen have gone crazy over investigations, and are fighting a myth. The correspondent says: "To witness these high-toned country gentlemen in their process of investigation would make an army mule laugh."

There will be no excursion of the New Hampshire Press Association this year.

Amerigo Vespucci, the last descendent of the navigator of that name, after whom America was named, died a few days ago near Florence, Italy.

Congress has been in session seven weeks, and not one measure of value or importance has yet become a law.

IT PAYS every Manufacturer, Merchant, Mechanic, Inventor, Farmer, or Professional man, to keep informed on all the improvements and discoveries of the age.

IT PAYS the head of every family to introduce into his household a newspaper that is instructive, one that fosters a taste for investigation, and promotes thought and encourages discussion among the members.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

which has been published weekly for the last thirty years, does this to an extent beyond that of any other publication, in fact it is the only weekly paper published in the United States, devoted to Manufactures, Mechanics, Inventions and new discoveries in the Arts and Sciences.

Every number is profusely illustrated and its contents embrace the latest and most interesting information pertaining to the Industrial Pursuits, and Scientific Progress of the World; Descriptions, with Beautiful Engravings, of New Inventions, New Implements, New Processes, and Improved Industries of all kinds; Useful Notes, Recipes, Suggestions and Advice, by Practical Writers, for Workmen and Employers, in all the various arts, forming a complete repository of New Inventions and Discoveries; contained in a weekly record not only of the progress of the Industrial Arts in our own country, but also of all New Discoveries and Inventions in every branch of Engineering, Mechanics, and Science around.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN has been the foremost of all industrial publications for the past Thirty Years. It is the oldest, largest, cheapest, and the best weekly illustrated paper devoted to Engineering, Mechanics, Chemistry, New Inventions, Science and Industrial Progress, published in the World.

The practical receipts are well worth ten times the subscription price. And for the shop and house will save many times the cost of subscription.

Merchants, Farmers, Mechanics, Engineers, Inventors, Manufacturers, Chemists, Lovers of Science, and People of all Professions, will find the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN useful to them. It should have a place in every Family, Library, Study, Office and Counting Room; in every Reading Room, College and School. A new volume commences on January 1st, 1876.

A year's numbers contain 832 pages and several hundred engravings. Thousands of volumes are preserved for binding and reference. Terms, $3.20 a year by mail, including postage. Discount to Clubs. Special circulars giving Club rates sent free. Single copies mailed on receipt of 10 cents. May be had of all News Dealers.

PATENTS. In connection with the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Messrs. Munn & Co. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, and have the largest establishment in the world. More than fifty thousand applications have been made for patents through their agency.

Patents are obtained on the best terms. Models of New Inventions and Sketches examined and advice free. A special notice is made in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN of all Inventions Patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. Patents are often sold in part or whole, to persons attracted to the invention by such notice. Send for Pamphlet, containing full directions for obtaining Patents. A bound volume containing the Patent Laws, Census of the U. S., and 145 Engravings of mechanical movements. Price 25 cents.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS TO-DAY.

Last Week at Henders n's.

N. Y. Industrial Exhibition.

Jottings.

The committee of ladies having charge the leap year assemblies well deserve ngratulations for their excellent arrangements on the opening night, when eighty-ree couples were on the floor. They re prompt in commencing the grand rch, lest no more time between the nces than was actually necessary for the isicians to get breath, filled up the "sets" edily, allowed no tedious "waits"—in t transacted the whole business of the ening so much better than any committee gentlemen ever have done, that we hope ir services will not be confined to leap ar tennial years. The quadrilles and and dances, ten each in number, were ished a half hour after midnight, and a ire pleased company never went home the cold.

U. S. S. Marion has carried away her ists—to Norfolk.

The Portsmouth Odd Fellows' Mutual Reof Association has elected the following ers for the ensuing term: Edwin L. F. lbrook, President; William Livingstone, ice-President; Robert G. Archibald, Secitary; Howard N. Dunyon, Treasurer. Dirctors, James F. Hartshorn, Isaac Dow, len A. Rand, for Piscataqua Lodge, No. John H. Rose, Leslie Whitehouse, Chas. bin, for New Hampshire Lodge, No. 17; as. W. Gardner, Thomas Bonser, Chas. Merrill, for Osgood Lodge, No. 48.

The Jubilee Singers with their quaint elodies, and the wonderful violin playing Mr. Goodall will doubtless draw a large udience at the Temple this evening.

Damon Lodge, No. 9, Knights of Pythias, ill dedicate the new hall, corner of Daniel nd Market streets, on Monday evening ext. The exercises are to be performed Acting Grand Chancellor Frank Rolins, of Exeter, assisted by other grand officers of the Grand Lodge; after which there ill be an address by Bro. Knight, Charles . Gardner. The brethren with their laies will then adjourn to Congress Hall, here a banquet will be served.

In the Massachusetts Senate, an order has een adopted directing the committee on ilroads to inquire whether the Eastern ilroad Company has complied with the ws in relation to the issue of bonds and otes and the making of liabilities.

Second Lieutenant Josiah N. Jones has signed his commission as an officer of the rtillery Company, owing to removal from e State.

A Little Personal.

Another of Frank Jones' lackeys, Josh oster, is in considerable of a perspiration cause the CHRONICLE calls on the Conessman to not neglect his facilities for vealing the truth about the mismanagent of the Eastern Railroad. Frank beends this half-starved edition of humanis, who is constantly beseeching people for uns to keep him from the nnshouse, and Joshua in duty bound feels at he best subserves the interests and easure of his owner by disseminating e most ridiculous of falsehoods, which their face bear their own contradiction. s latest (though not original) is that the cond clerk at the navy pay office this city never earned a dollar but s been paid $1200 or more per annum, th statements are barefaced lies, known be such by the liar who published them. uring the time the present second clerk in e pay office has held that position, bedes assisting in the routine business of e office, he has filled out, dated, backed d filed between 20,000 and 30,000 tripliate bills, and these bills are now on file at e Navy Department in Washington. The andwriting will speak for itself. It is safe say that the purchased tool of Frank ones, who crawls about with slavish subrviance to eject slime on his master's politial opponents, has not performed as much bor in his whole life-time of uselessness, hile the Congressman he so gushingly eugizes, and who draws with complacency e sum of $5000 a year and earns it by riving about the streets of Washington a 3000 span of horses, could not perform the ke services should he work ten hours a ay for ten years and think of nothing else. is Dover toady intimates that we think r. Jones endeavored to have the pay ofce abolished, which is a falsehood as abird as the first was malicious—for on the ontrary, we haven't an idea that Mr. Jones ould remove even such a minute specimen f human meanness as this Foster, were the atter to claim to be of republican antecents. Joshua is a beggar by nature and ractice and has cultivated the talent until very move he makes and every sycophanic lie he utters is only his manner of lookng out for the main chance. Frank Jones ows him nineteen cents for his latest, and he starveling will contract for the next dirty job for a dime.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brief demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that public opinion ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its sub stitute, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much or the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, fearless and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazines are required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and promises for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says: ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $4.0 .

Or, or $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.00 Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself, they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,700 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides short stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $3 .0 !!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

A large and beautiful stock, bought strictly for cash, for sale at extremely low prices

PIANOS and PARLOR ORGANS of the very best manufacture offered at greatly reduced prices for the Holidays. Now is the time to get a bargain. "Don't you forget it."

Daily Chronicle.

—It is the belief of the writer that many of the diseases incident to poultry are due to neglect in providing them with pure water; particularly do I believe such to be the case, in the majority of instances where chicken cholera prevails. The omission to furnish fowls with suitable drinking water is one of the worst features of cruelty to animals. It is a neglect that is decidedly adverse to success, hence tends to diminish individual fancy for fowls, and works detriment to poultry interests.—Fancier's Journal.

—Our statement that 116 pounds of an average man are pure water has led to several curious questions. Our authority for the 116 pounds was scientific. If it be correct, Alexander H. Stephens, who weighs only ninety pounds, would owe himself twenty-six pounds of pure water, and Zach. Chandler, who weighs 190 pounds, contains seventy-four pounds more pure water than he is entitled to. Science and religion always did conflict in this way.—New York Herald.

—"What will you have?" asked a waiter of one of the Indiana editors, at the dinner in Philadelphia, as he handed him a bill of fare. And the Hoosier with the high forehead leaned back in his chair, wiped his forehead thoughtfully with a napkin, and ejaculated sternly: "Gimme all!"

Where Does It All Come From?

Pints and quarts of filthy Catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane which lines the chambers of the nose, and its little glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life-liquid is needed to build up the system, but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which also acts directly upon these glands, correcting them, apply Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from. The instrument and both medicines sold by druggists and dealers in medicines.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but the sale of the drug was so rapid, their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and in the Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1 for three more packages.
SAMUEL PLAISTED, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and they have been worth ten dollars for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done me, and they say they will try the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but found no relief. I have taken only three pills as it can eat anything. In one of the testimonials you say they were worth ten times their cost; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this place find $1.5c for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—I have for about five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing me to gain in flesh so fast that I had to stop to rest every few steps to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, seven a great deal for medicine. Finally I gave up and concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Boston congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Condition Pills. Before I had taken eight of them I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, not well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. A few friends are also cured by the Pills, and they think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the Kidneys for years. I shall send her to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think Heaven gave you a blessing to those who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Pills, with the blessing of God, I attribute solely to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.
MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.
"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

MAGIC

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which promise to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administ ation, drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country, while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and reforms to be put to the test. In the adjustment of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our silver. In religion it promises to mark a revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the standing and to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and a closer inquiry in politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry, there is no doubt that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE stands ready to add to its long record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an honest newspaper, upon which he can rely as an impartial record of events, unsistorted by partisan zeal, selfish or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will as in the past, be found fervent in the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will re-hoe wherever those principles are vituperated under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of concealment or sophistry. It must speak what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust, to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as will lighten the burdens of private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the vindicated honesty of Dennison, and by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and is earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and saving the State from the loss of its and the people sustaining its position, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One count of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been and will be, unfortunately misunderstood. It has alienated some of the worst practicers of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and intelligent voters have time within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a semblance of honesty and decency, and we hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the several attacks the success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will strive to give the people the news.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor which it has so long enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long by foreign critics, the leading journal of American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most liberal expenditure to procure the fresh intelligence, vigorous and independent editorial comment, and the abest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished writers in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

a no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing to its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudoritic and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

CHEAPEST AND BEST!

Peterson's Magazine

For 1876, published steel engravings of Leutze's celebrated picture of "The Signing of Declaration of Independence." This will be "Peterson's" Centennial Gift.

"PETERSON'S MAGAZINE" contains, every year, 1000 pages, 14 steel plates, 12 colored Berlin patterns, 12 mammoth colored fashion plates, 24 pages of music, and 900 wood cuts.

Great improvements will be made in 1876. Among them will be a series of illustrated articles on Great Exhibitions at Philadelphia, which will alone be worth the subscription price. They will be appropriately called

THE CENTENNIAL IN PEN AND PENCIL.

The immense circulation of "Pete son" enables proprietors to spend more money on embellishments, &c., than any other. It gives more the money than any in the world. Its are the best published, and the most popular writers are employed to write originally for "Peterson." In 1876, in addition to the usual quantity of other stories, FIVE ORIGINAL COPYRIGHT NOVELETTES will be given, by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, Mrs. F. H. Burnett, and others.

MAMMOTH COLORED FASHION PLATES

ahead of all others. These plates are engraved on steel, twice the usual size, and are unequalled in beauty, truth, and style. Patterns of Dresses, Household and other receipts; in short, everything interesting to ladies.

N. B.—As the publisher now prepays the postage to all mail subscribers, "Peterson" is cheaper than ever; in fact is the cheapest in the world.

HON. MARTIN I. TOWNSEND, OF NEW YORK,
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
THURSDAY, January 20, 1876.

The House, as in Committee of the Whole, having under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 514) relating to the centennial celebration of American Independence—

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York, said:

Mr. CHAIRMAN: I use the language, slightly modified, that John Adams used a hundred years ago, when he said "I am for the Declaration." I am for the Celebration. A hundred years ago we were a feeble folk, scattered over a vast extent of country, and with a population of less than three millions. A hundred years have made us a nation of more than forty millions; a nation made up of material second to no nation now on the face of the earth, and second to no nation that ever existed. If there be a nation among the dominions of the earth that has hitherto been proud of its achievements that nation is the United States of America. We have just expended more than $5,000,000,000 to render it certain that this nation shall exist. We have spent $6,000,000,000 to have a centennial. That money is expended, and I put it to my side of the House to say whether we should grudge a million and a half of dollars to show to the nations of the earth the quality of our people and their progress in arts, agriculture, and manufactures. That is the way I feel in regard to this question. And when you come to the constitutional question, the question of right, I say, sir, that if a nation has a right to exist it has a right to show to the world that it does exist. That is the whole constitutional question that troubles me. [Laughter.]

Now, sir, we have had an appeal to-day in behalf of the poor. What has this nation as a nation to do with that question? Our strict construction friends on the other side of the House tell us that that belongs to the States. I join hands with them on that subject; it belongs to the States; it does not belong here. Gentlemen on the other side of the hall are eternally quoting the scriptures. My emaciated friend from New York [Mr. WILLIS,] who has appealed so eloquently in behalf of the poor, is a good, Christian man; I have known him a long time. And I want to call his attention to the fact that two thousand years ago a woman was wild enough to go and waste a box of ointment on the feet of a most eminent individual. One of those looking on, whose name was Iscariot, said that the ointment might have been sold for three hundred pence and the money given to the poor. [Laughter.] There is another verse which refers to this interference in behalf of the poor which I will not read. My friend may read it at his leisure.

Now, sir, I sympathize with the poor, and it is because I sympathize with the poor that I want this nation to flourish and be honored at home and abroad. The poor of this country occupy a position which the poor of no country before ours ever occupied since Adam and Eve, going on a falling expedition, emigrated from Eden. [Laughter.] I am for this appropriation for the benefit of the poor.

But I must refer to the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. REAGAN.] He is on my side on this question. In the most kindly and becoming manner he talked about the poor, as if Texas was poor. Texas poor? Good God! [Laughter.] There is not a gentleman on this floor who has not been asleep for the last fifteen years who does not know that Texas to-day has four times the material wealth that she had in 1860, and I was assured by a worthy gentleman on this floor from that State whose word I take as law that the population of the State has actually doubled since 1870.

Mr. REAGAN. Let me say to the gentleman that his information is not correct. There is now in Texas a degree of adversity and poverty rarely witnessed in the civilized world.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. The gentleman has the misfortune to suppose that I am nothing but a wild Yankee; but I can assure that gentleman that a large family, dear to me, nursed in my very bosom, are not only residents of Texas, but were there before the revolution from Mexico, and that their large landed property has more than quadrupled in value since 1860. I understand all about the present condition of Texas. I am a breeder of cattle in Iowa for the market, and when I go West to look after my flocks I find the Texas cattle which were rendered numerous by the events of the war now sent to feed and fatten in the parks of Colorado, on the plains of Laramie, and on the prairies of Kansas and Nebraska; and when I go there, the broad horns of those cattle are shaken in my face as a good strict constructionist sometimes shakes his head across this floor at us poor unhappy republicans. [Laughter.] And when the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HILL] shook his clenched hand at me I felt as I do when I meet a Texas steer.

The gentleman [Mr. REAGAN] wants to show how Texas is suffering. Sir, Texas has sent us one representative, apparently for the very purpose of showing her famished condition. She could not have shown her suffering condition better by sending a sack of three hundred and fifty pounds of sweet cream, and the Speaker has never done a more graceful or proper act than he did when he made that gentleman chairman of the committee on the suffering of Texas. [Laughter.] And now I am going further in this thing of talking about suffering. I know our southern friends are suffering awfully. They suffer as our northern financiers suffer. The suffering of the democracy of Pennsylvania and Ohio is for more money. The financiers of the cities are suffering from too much money. [Laughter.] But through our broad country, except in some branches of manufactures, there is very little suffering as compared with the catastrophies of other days.

And, sir, the cotton States are no exception to the general condition of the country. Sir, the production of cotton last year was within one-fifteenth of the largest in the history of our country. The largest production was in 1860, when God was good to us all and gave to the South its largest crop of cotton and to the nation Father Abraham. [Laughter.] If we can rely upon the reports of the production of cotton, this year the production will be equal to the best year in the history of the Republic. But that is not all. The production of bread stuffs in the cotton States is so much greater than it formerly was that I may safely say that last year the cotton States raised more what is for the comfort of man than ever before. I acknowledge that it was not divided as it used to be before the last war. When we started with this Republic we disregarded God's law, which He laid down for His own people, the children of Israel, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn." We left the muzzle on. But during the war the muzzle has dropped from the ox and never can be put on again. Now, in the division of the products of the cotton States the ox, that is, he that does the work, shares a little in the proceeds.

And let me say to our strict-constructionist friends on the other side that, if it should be the case in the cotton States that there is more attention paid to the Constitution than there is to the fields of cotton growing there and to the working people, there will be a mighty danger that these fellows who till the soil will become possessed of the soil itself and the defenders of the Constitution will grow poorer and poorer.

I have said this much about the alleged poverty of the country. I claim that the agricultural interests in the United States since 1872 have prospered equally with those of any other three years in the history of the Government. I say it because I am a farmer myself as well as a lawyer, and share in the proceeds of farms and in the suffering upon the farm, whatever that is. My constituents suffered some last year, and from what cause? My constituents who are farmers raised potatoes, and the difficulty with them was the abundance of God's blessing. He poured it out to us—in potatoes, [laughter,] in heaping measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, and consequently the price was low; otherwise there was no suffering with us. But those potatoes make an excellent substitute for food, and we do not starve. [Great laughter.]

Now I want to say a word in reply to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] who talked to us so long yesterday and so eloquently about the Constitution. He seemed rather to sneer at my friend from Maine [Mr. FRYE] who could not understand the quidalities of a strict constructionist's opinion of the Constitution. Now I acknowledge myself in the same category with the gentleman from Maine. As a lawyer, I should have confidence enough in myself to think that I could sit down and come to some sort of a conclusion about the Constitution, as to what you might do under it and what you might not. But in the school of strict construction God only knows—and it is only because I believe in God's omniscience that I can believe "that God knows"—what a "strict construction" of the Constitution would be. [Laughter.]

I must not say, Mr. Chairman, (Mr. WOOD, of New York,) that you and I have seen this out for a great while, for you are a young man compared with myself. [Laughter.] But I have seen this thing out certainly since 1830. The great apostle of strict construction, Mr. Calhoun, from 1816 to 1824 believed that the only true method of supporting this Government was by duties on importations. It happened that New England run all the ships while this part of the country did not run any. By and by it happened to be the fact that these unconstitutional Yankees took advantage of the state of things which the strict constructionists from South Carolina had created, and they went to manufacturing. By 1824 our great apostle of strict construction had his doubts, and by 1830 he discovered that this method of raising means of supporting the Government by duties on importations was altogether unconstitutional. He could not find anything about it in Madison's writing, and I presume he had the same manual the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TUCKER) read from yesterday. He was in as much trouble as a distinguished gentleman here a few years ago was about the proposition to pave Pennsylvania avenue. He declared that he could not find the name of Pennsylvania avenue in the whole Constitution from beginning to end. (Great laughter.) In 1830 Mr. Calhoun and South Carolina, his home, (it was a different South Carolina from what it is to-day and represented differently,) resolved to nullify the acts of Congress. Mr. Chairman, we, above all others, remember who was President then; it was not James Buchanan; it was Andrew Jackson. And he said, "By the eternal, I will hang every South Carolinian who undertakes to nullify the acts of Congress higher than Haman." Mr. Calhoun did not give up his opinions but he gave up the fight, as I think a certain other fight would have been given up had Andrew Jackson been in the presidential chair instead of James Buchanan.

From 1830 to 1860 we had it off and on, in season and out of season, and without any season and without cessation, arguing that we were not a nation, arguing that we had no power to live. But even during that time the great strict constructionist, Mr. Calhoun, had this question presented to him: "Shall this great nation suffer the people of Ireland to starve in their famine or shall the nation from its abundance send them food?" The great father of strict construction voted for that proposition. And I recommend to the future studies and reflection of the gentleman from Virginia, who addressed us so eloquently yesterday, (Mr. Tucker,) that vote of Mr. Calhoun. I am bound to mention incidentally that it would help the democratic party to conciliate the Irish vote. (Laughter.) I do not think that influenced his vote; no, he was above it, away up in the cerulean regions of the Constitution.

Again it happened that a Yankee adventurer up in the polar regions of the icy north found the Resolute, a ship which had belonged to the squadron of Sir John Franklin, and Mr. Mason, of Virginia, a great strict constructionist—and I believe it was the same one who went to Europe with Slidell to help the confederate cause—believed that it was his duty and privilege to move in the Senate to appropriate $40,000 to fit up that ship and send it home to England. That was all under strict construction.

I said I could not understand this constitutional question. I do not want my friends on the other side who participated in the "late unpleasantness" to suppose that in what I am going to say I intend to say anything unkind, for I am not; I only want to talk this matter over a little, and I do not want any gentleman to shake his head at me, because that scares me. I am simply trying to find what this constitutional question means.

About 1860 and 1861 it was held by some gentlemen that under the Constitution a man owed his first allegiance to his State, holding that we were a confederacy of States; and as one State after another went out officers of the Army and officers of the Navy "followed their State," because they thought they held they might under the constitution of their own State and in virtue of their rights under the Constitution of the United States. One gentleman after another left this hall because he thought it was his duty to "follow his State" under the Constitution. They went out and fought gallantly against our people. I say not a word in disparagement of them. I stand here to give the right hand of fellowship to any man who loves our political Zion and glories in the stones thereof, whatever may have been his past antecedents.

Robert E. Lee, whose body it seems rests in the district and in the town of the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. Tucker,] held an office in the United States Army. He resigned that position, and did so under a belief that it was his constitutional duty to "follow his State." Well, the fight began. But it was found as soon as the fight did begin that Harry Gilmore of Maryland, Blanton Duncan of Kentucky, John C. Breckinridge of Kentucky, and Humphrey Marshall of Kentucky, all felt themselves just as strongly bound to follow "the Constitution" and fight against their own States, neither of which ever went out of the Union, as Lee and the gentlemen above mentioned did to fight for theirs! Now, how can I, a poor unsophisticated Yankee, living up where the air is less pure, less cerulean, understand what the gentlemen mean by constitutional scruples? They must go out because their State goes out; and they must go out and fight because their State does not go out!

Mr. WILLIS. May I ask my colleague whether he concedes that there is no power in the Constitution to make the appropriation here asked for?

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. All I have to say is that I have here a record that on a certain occasion when a man undertook to look after the poor, [holding up the New Testament,] it was said that he did not care for them.] [Laughter.]

Mr. WILLIS. I will ask the honorable gentleman—

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I have not time to go into that question. I want my friend to get over his leanness, and "laugh and grow fat."

Mr. WILLIS. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he finds his rule of construction in the book he holds in his hand or in the decisions of the Supreme Court?

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I am not bothering my head with that. I am going on with my talk I came here to have it.

But I have another constitutional difficulty, and I want particularly to commend it to the strict constructionists of the other side. In the progress of the war that we had in this "unpleasantness" the Government of this country, administered by "black republicans" — fellows that have heads shaken at them as the gentleman from Georgia shook his head at us the other day,—found it necessary to issue greenbacks. Now I undertake to say that the tears that have been shed over the unconstitutionality of the greenbacks on the democratic side during the war, before the "unpleasantness" ended, and which have been shed by those who were against us since their return, would fill, if collected, not a lachrymatory such as they used to put in tombs in the olden times, but would fill the biggest demijohn that a democratic constituency ever emptied. [Laughter.] Their mourning was like the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon.

True, the Supreme Court by a majority decided that Congress did not act unconstitutionally in issuing greenbacks under the exigency of the case. But, my friends, I am an old Jackson democrat; a Jeffersonian democrat; and, but for that slavery question, I should be a democrat to-day. The difficulty with me was that I followed Jefferson; I read what Jefferson said in his Notes on Virginia; and, thank God, I believed it; and any country that would prosper must believe it. We held, and Jackson held, that the decision of the Supreme Court could not bind the conscience of a member of Congress; and therefore members of Congress are not bound on this question when new legislation shall arise.

Now time ran run on. The men who issued the greenback intended that at some day not far distant we should return to the old Bentonian and Jacksonian currency: hard money. That is what those who put out the greenback generally understand, though some do not. Now here in this House the other day I was mightily instructed to see the vote on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, (Mr. HOLMAN.) A few gentlemen from the Northern States voted with him; but pretty much the entire confederate phalanx, the whole body of Constitution-loving strict constructionists marched up as one man to the inevitable "deadly breach" and voted for greenbacks. Now, I say that, in view of these things, I cannot understand what a man means by strict construction of the Constitution. God bless us, who can understand it? (Laughter.)

I will tell you what from all this I understand a strict construction of the Constitution to be. I understand that, if a strict constructionist wants a measure to succeed, it is constitutional; and, if he does not want it, it is unconstitutional. (Great laughter.) I understand sir, that the legal position was perfectly expressed by an Irishman in my district. He bought a horse, and when a man owns property he thinks it is the best thing in the world. He led out his horse and showed it to his neighbors. One neighbor, wishing to worry him, asked him whether his horse had the glanders. "What is it you call the glanders?" asked the Irishman. "It is not for me to tell you, but I want to know whether your horse has the glanders?" "Well," said he, "if he is better for the glanders he has the glanders enough, but if he is worse for the glanders he has not the glanders at all." (Great laughter.) Now, the gentleman from Virginia must pardon me, but I think his question has not got the glanders at all. (Renewed laughter.)

But, sir, I stand here as a representative of the people of this country, however unworthily, and I am bound to take notice of another thing which dropped from that gentleman. That gentleman put forward the proposition, in substance, that this people are not a nation, that we were a confederacy of States. True, his more experienced northern democratic neighbor from Indiana begged of him not to open that question. Still it was put forward here. Now, sir, from 1790 and earlier, up to 1860 that question was debated in every assembly, in every meeting of Congress, upon the hustings, and in State Legislatures. It was argued as a man would argue with his brother, sometimes fiercely, sometimes in good temper, sometimes calmly, and sometimes in bad temper. In 1860 a constitutional majority of the country, in the way the vote was cast by the people, elected Abraham Lincoln and a Congress that held with Lincoln that this was a nation. An appeal was then taken from this decision of the people to the arbitrament of war, and from 1861 to 1865 brave men on both sides, noble-spirited men Americans—met in the terrible arbitrament of steel to settle upon the battle-field whether we were a nation or not. This was the question brought up in this court of appeal. I see the gentleman from Virginia is a lawyer; I am a lawyer; and we understand how questions of appeal are disposed of. It was argued on one side with apparent success on one field, and with apparent success upon the other side upon another field, from Gettysburg to New Orleans, from the ocean to the Sabine, from Belmont to the Gulf, and final judgment was rendered on the appeal in the gentleman's own district at Appomattox Court House. Final judgment upon that appeal was rendered and recorded there, and I wish the gentleman from Virginia had gone to Appomattox Court House and read up the record before he came here with a view to open that discussion again and throw this country into a new turmoil.

Does anybody think we are not a nation? Is this any less your nation, my Virginia friend, than mine? Have I any more glory in this nation than you? If you are to prosper, are you not to prosper through this nation? If you are to go abroad, do you not go with the passport of this nation? If you are to blush in Europe for your country, is it not for this country? And if you are to be proud in Europe, and step two inches higher than any other man, do you not do it by virtue of the fact that this is your country? [Laughter.] Let alone the great "unpleasantness;" that is over. If we are honest men, kindly men, that is all over.

I tell you, gentlemen, that this is your nation and my nation. We are all one. I do not know how it will be up at Philadelphia, but I will talk about that by and by. Here it is our country, and our capital. My district is part of your country, and your district, my friend, whether you feel good-natured or ill-natured, is part of my country. It is so under the Constitution.

Now, sir, I have said thus much, let me say further. Shall we be honored; shall we be respected? Is England going to get any advantage of us? Are you going to have John Bull shake his head at you and say things are done a great deal better at "home?" What did we have this fight on our side for? I am willing to refer it to the other side. It was that we should be a great country, big enough to meet all the world, and to fight all the world if necessary. We wanted you side by side with us—just the men who are here, for we knew you were brave before the war, but you did not know we were, and there was never a more disappointed people in the world than you were. [Laughter.] I will confess here before you that the miserable creatures we sent to Congress, who always yielded everything when you clamored, cheated you into that struggle. [Great laughter.] You found that we are as brave as you are yourselves, and we and you always respect a man who has the courage of his opinion, while we despise a sneak.

Now, having gone so far, I stand here to make a confession. I am bound to do it. The other day I heard that dreadful cry come up from the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. HILL.] I heard his indictment read against us. And I am sorry to say that although most of the speech of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WADDELL] was honorable, high-toned, and magnanimous, there were a few words which I did not like, and which grated on my ears. Centennial and amnesty have been made to run together. I am not going to say much about amnesty. I am going to make confession. The gentleman from Georgia arraigned us republicans and told us, with his closed hand shaking at us, that we, a whole hundred men of us, had violated every oath and had committed every crime. Now, I am going to confess that we have been guilty of several things. And, first, I confess that we sat here when he was gone and tried to save this country so that there should be a centennial. We were "fanatical" about it. We were "mad." We were "crazy." And our fanaticism did not stop on this side of the House. On the other side of the House, if I am correctly informed, the chairman of the committe on appropriations, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. RANDALL,] so far partook of the fanaticism as to buckle on his knapsack in this fanatical cause; and many another brave man now voting on the other side was led, beguiled, cheated, into joining us in our "fanaticism." We fought the fight out "wickedly," "madly," "maliciously," and we say we were guilty of it. We have to own it before God and man.

But, Mr. Chairman, it was the fanaticism of those men over there and here and their associates which saved this country. But for that we should have been in a beautiful condition now, split in two in the middle, and God knows in what condition the inside would have appeared. [Laughter.] But, secondly, I am bound to make further confession to the gentleman from Georgia. We were guilty when we had two-thirds of both Houses of Congress of doing away, by a vote of two-thirds of both Houses, all the disabilities of every member on this floor who participated in the confederacy. Being "madly," "wickedly," maliciously determined to injure these men and not let our hatred die out, we let them in here—these men, the sixty-one fine-looking gentlemen who walked up here together the other day, unable to take the full oath. We were guilty of letting them all back here and of not saying and of never having said an unkind word of them or to them since they returned. We do not think quite kindly of Jefferson Davis, but he is not here. This kindness to our sixty-one associates is a piece of wickedness which I know should not be forgiven in this world or the next. I know it is unchristian.

Why right here sits the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. SEELYE,] although he is not in his place just now. He made a beautiful speech here the other day. But, Mr. Chairman, what long days of Summer have I passed in the old church in Troy, listening to line upon line, and precept upon precept, from that gentleman telling me that there could not and there should not be any pardon except upon confession and repentence. I know we have not lived up to that doctrine. [Laughter.]

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] quoted scripture here on one of the first days of the session, and again we had the scripture brought in here yesterday afternoon—the Old Testament both times. They went back to the old dispensation; to Greece and Rome and the Old Testament; and Elijah, and the Lord knows what. I was taught to read that book in my boyhood, and saw then the terrible things narrated in the Old Testament. I remember that the people of God when in the wilderness murmured against him, and that he announced the decree that, of all who came out of Egypt and murmured against Him, from twenty years old and upward, no man should ever enter the promised land but Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua, the son of Nun. And it did occur to me the other day when gentlemen were quoting scripture that it would not have been injurious to the gentleman from Georgia if he had been left a little longer in the wilderness. [Great laughter.] But we let them come out of it. I own and confess it before God and man and the other side of the House and the country.

Nor is that all the wickedness we have committed. We have done more. What have we done to a portion of these men of the South who went to Brazil after the surrender at Appomattox? Those men said "this is not our country; we won't live in it; we will go to Brazil, where in its jungles we can enjoy the benefits of the 'unbroken constitution' and the 'principles of '98.'" They went there, and they had just as good a time of it as their friends have had here during the unpleasantness—only for a little longer period. And now this miserable republican party and republican administration have violated the Constitution by sending "maliciously and fanatically" a ship of war to Brazil to bring these fellows home at the expense of the Government. [Laughter.] And when I confess these things I do not much wonder at the feeling of horror and detestation that seemed to fill the bosom of the gentleman from Georgia the other day. It is almost too much for poor human nature to bear, but I hope he will live through it.

There is another confession I want to make here. The dropping off of the muzzle of the ox that treadeth out the corn, the dropping off of the muzzle from the working population at the South has rendered it possible for seven colored men to occupy places on the floor. They represent just about a million of the forty millions of the people of the United States. Now I am bound to say that these men during the time I have sat here have come into this Hall well dressed; they assume the carriage of gentlemen; they insult no man; they encroach upon no man; and in the few instances when they have arisen to address the House, it has been done with an intelligence, a deference, and consideration that might do credit to any statesman in any land. But I acknowledge for them, in response to the jests thrown out against them by the member from New York (Mr. Cox) the other day, that their faces are not quite so light as the brilliant Saxon color of the gentleman from New York. (Laughter.) They are guilty of that, and I hope they will not be punished for it. I hope that gentlemen on the other side of the House will treat with deference these colored men just struggling into political existence, standing here, as they do, as the representatives, not merely of their direct constituencies, but of four million people their kindred. I hope that no gentleman will again, while I have a seat upon this floor, pain me by alluding to the fact that they are colored men.

Now, sir, I have gone over this matter and I want to make another point in reference to it. I want to beg the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. HILL) that if in future discussions he finds me so wicked, to spare me. I am young and timid. (Laughter.) And when a gentleman in the zeal of his advocacy tells me what has never been told me before, that I "have violated every oath and been guilty of every crime," and advances a half step toward me shaking at me his closed hand, it frightens me. And in the evening and in the night I do not see the lovely countenance of the gentleman from Georgia, but I dream of Preston Brooks and that terrible bludgeon that he used to carry about the Halls of the Capitol. I hope that in the future the gentleman will confine himself to debate and not to threats, and not go to war for the next half century, whatever else he may do. [Laughter.]

Jottings.

Mr. Clarence B. Mason of this city has cently been appointed by the Grand Mas- r of the State Grange, Deputy Master and pecturer for the counties of Rockingham nd Strafford. His duties are manifold and sponsible, being that of a general super- sor of all subordinate granges in the two unties mentioned, instruction in work, nd keeping matters straight generally. Good sleighing Thursday for the first me this season.

The humorous and effective speech of ongressman Martin I. Townsend, of New ork, on the Centennial bill, which we blish to-day, will well repay perusal.

—The Chinese quarter of the city is be- g rapidly rebuilt. The pig-eyed and pig- tailed sons of Confucius work like beavers. hey are busy early and late, and both nderground and on the surface. In their art of the town the Celestials have kept pace with the march of rebuilding in that art of the burnt district which is in the nds of the whites. In ordinary times no e ever hears of a Chinese carpenter, but ow all appear to be carpenters. One ould suppose that "John," the manner in hich his eyes are set in his head being nsidered, would never be able even to aw a plank square across; yet he manages make all manners of joints and bevels. hen a house much above the ordinary ze is to be built, they precipitate them- elves upon it in hosts. They go at it much s they set about tunneling through a ountain. They swarm like ants, and like nts each is doing something. When a rge building is being roofed by them it eems, at a little distance, to be covered ith a flock of giant crows, each pecking ith all his might and squawking with all is "main." When a Chinaman is excited nd is rushing things, he is very unhappy nless allowed to "give tongue." To sud- enly cut one of them short when in full ocal blast would be as difficult as to silence donkey when in the midst of his bray. We have hinted at the underground labors f the Mongolians. It may be necessary to xplain that once John Chinaman has come nto possession of a piece of ground, he not infrequently builds both up and down. He has an innate love of subterranean dens nd caves. In Chinatown, as it is being ebuilt, the underground apartments are ikely to be even more abundant than in Chinatown as it was. The rice-eaters are rowing dirt down in their part of the own like so many badgers. In the "bomb- roofs" and other holes they are digging nd building, they will have their gam- ling and opium dens down below the sun- ight, underneath, the ground.—Virginia Enterprise.

—Some negroes were listening to one of heir color, as he read to them the proceed- ngs of the legislature from the Constitution recently. When he got down to the bill "to protect and preserve unimpaired the ight of trial by jury," old Si spoke up and aid:

"What's dat mean? Who's a-gwine to urt de jury?"

"Dat means a heap, I'm a tellin' yer! Dat's a good thing!" replied Pete.

"Splane it den! Whar's de nessersary- uss far it?" urged Si.

"Wy dis way," said Pete. "Dar's a gemman down dar at de depo' whar was on le jury de odder day, an' I hear him 'tellin' how dat he didn't want ter 'gree wid de est ob 'em, when a big feller came up and ole him ef he'd didn't 'gree in 'bout two econs' dat he bust him wide open! what You t'ink ob dat?"

The bill then received unanimous approv- al.—Atlanta Constitution.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even more than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for it would carry its own antidote, while what we have here unfits for the duties of life, groups the exciting and distorted pictures of life, and drops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, designed for curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the character of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference to those monthly magazines for children which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If we have spoken of them as being very good, we do not as able, truthful and devoted as Mr. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits "ST. NICHOLAS,) there would be nothing to complain of. The N. Y. Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, so strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive as required to meet it, has reached a higher standard than for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has a wider range of its predecessors in literary merit, purer, more trustworthy in tone, and more comprehensive in its range of subjects than any of its predecessors."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is to be encouraged, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 12 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.0.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS, of which is 7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send any one of the bound volumes, as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid chromographic pieces, shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 30 volumes of other children's books at a cost of 5,000 book pages.

Two specimens numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Where Does It All Come From?

Pints and quarts of filthy Catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane which lines the chambers of the nose, and its little glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life-liquid is needed to build up the system, but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, give health and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which also acts directly upon these glands, correcting them, and apply Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from. The treatment and both medicines sold by druggists and dealers in medicines.

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first month their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the testimonials were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have been unfitted for work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my last dollar and bought one of your packages. About this time I saw your Pills highly recommended in the Manchester papers, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I first benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took, I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package for my friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL FLANDERS, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir.—I received your package of Pills, and can say they are worth ten dollars for me. I have given away a few and those I gave away have ordered more for me. I have told many what good they have done and are taking. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried almost everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills as does not anything. In one of the testimonials you have said that you would give ten dollars for one pill, if you could not get more, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for one package. The package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as much as I want to. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will soon blast. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would send for more, but I am so poor I can't do it now, I think the most prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Trouble Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your Pills. I am much better than Neuralgia or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. I feel well, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Reelendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefitted. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of power and resources, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall witness a Presidential election under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration which have drawn to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy for which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and put down the rebellion is to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national issues as the year may see them the crisis of our affairs in religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and to a share in the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are no signs that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support and patronage of the intelligent class of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, which he can rely for an impartial record of events, unbistorted by partisan colors or by personal hates or attachments.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through America in conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions. It must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of Democrats, and condemn the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to unforth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics it will support the best men, whom some, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as will enable us to compel from private claimes, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. This is the course which THE TRIBUNE has pursued for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering the cost of the city. Success has been its reward, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One crisis of the policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been thus both justified and vindicated, forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system, but forward into yet more vigorous support of some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have done within two years great and very gratifying forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to I bor for this end with the unabated energy and ability it commanded in its popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for matter more valuable.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor to their homes, THE TRIBUNE asks and hopes a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position claimed for it by its foreign and home critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most untiring energy to procure the most intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors are numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luny trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the choice of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so dose the possession of this Family Medicine prevent its spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

THE LAST BISCUIT.

[Rural New Yorker.]

Prudence Holmes sat alone in the wide, shady kitchen, busily engaged in picking over whortleberries. Without, the sunshine of an August afternoon bathed the green fields and dusty road that wound away to the village, and touched with richer color the nasturtiums, sweet peas, geraniums and zinnias in the tiny garden, and the heavy Virginia creeper that climbed and blossomed above the door. Prudence made a pretty picture as she sat on a low cricket, with a big calico apron spread over her blue-sprigged muslin dress to defend it from the stains that had soiled her little brown hands. She was a petite, dantily-rounded maiden of eighteen, with great dark eyes, and glossy curls shading a fair brow and cheeks that had a touch of wild-rose bloom upon them. The kitchen, too, such a pretty picture, with its well-scoured floor and dresser, its asparagus-topped clock, its shining stove, with bunches of herbs hung behind, and the great bouquet of vivid cardinal flowers set on the snowy table. The kitchen was perfectly still save the buzz of the flies and the click of the clock; and outside the cricket and the locusts alone had disturbed the peace. Prudence believed that every one in the house was a-leep but herself, and yawned somewhat wearily as she tossed over the berries, finishing the yawn with a bit of a soliloquy uttered half aloud:

"Oh, dear! this having Summer boarders isn't very nice!"

"Miss Prudence," said a voice in the doorway so suddenly that Prudence nearly upset her berries in her surprise.

"Oh, Mr. Wentworth, is it you?" she said, bashfully, bending down to pick up a few berries that had rolled from her apron.

"I'll pick 'em up!" exclaimed the new comer, a tall and rather aristocratic looking youth of twenty-one, with merry blue eyes, short auburn hair curling closely under a straw hat—diving for the missing berries with ungraceful dexterity. "Yes, it is I, of course. Have you forgotten your promise to go after lilies with me, this afternoon?"

"Oh, but I didn't say this afternoon, you know; only some afternoon this week," responded Prudence, demurely.

"Well, we will call it this afternoon, won't we?" was the persuasive rejoinder, as the straw hat was tossed on the chair.

"I can't; I've got these berries to pick over."

"I'll help you. Lend me half that spoon, and we'll have them done in a trice."

"But I shall have supper to get, Mother's away, and there are biscuits to make," insisted Prudence, turning her face away to hide a smile that would curve her lips.

"Never mind that," responded Mr. Abbott Wentworth, bringing a chair to her side. "Tea's at six, isn't it? and it's now only half past two. We'll be back at five, without fail, and have time to get half the lilies in the river," and he began to assort a handful of berries with much earnestness.

"W-e-l-l," assented Prudence, after a pause for consideration and a glance at the clock, "I can go for a little while, perhaps. Oh! don't stain your coat, Mr. Wentworth."

But Mr. Wentworth was sublimely indifferent to his coat, and worked with such a good will that the berries were soon picked over, and Prudence and himself on their way to the river. Five minutes later Prudence, with her draperies daintily bestowed around her, was seated in the stern of a little boat, which, propelled by Mr. Wentworth's practiced hand, shot swiftly down the stream. Although Mr. Wentworth said to Prudence five times within an hour that it was a lovely day, and although Prudence assented every time, I hardly think they appreciated the beauty around them, for Prudence was quite absorbed in the lilies and the reflection in the water, and Mr. Wentworth looked more at his companion than at the aspect of nature. They had gathered enough lilies to satisfy them, and Prudence was leaning backward and idly trailing one hand in the water, when she suddenly uttered a little scream, and sat erect, with white cheeks, from which the color had been frightened.

"Oh, I almost lost it. How careless I am," she exclaimed, replacing an old-fashioned ring, set with a tiny circle of rubies, on her finger.

"Did the water sweep it off your hand?"

"I suppose so. It's too large for me. I'm always losing it and finding it again. I wouldn't lose it entirely for the world, because it used to be grandmother's. She gave it to me."

"What a curious old ring it is!" said Mr. Wentworth, with interest. "May I look at it? Don't trouble yourself to take it off," he added, drawing his oars and leaning toward his companion. Prudence allowed her tiny brown hand to lie in his aristocratic white one a moment, then coquetishly withdrew it.

"Isn't it pretty?" she inquired archly.

"Very pretty. Shall I tell you how to guard against losing it in the future?"

"Oh, yes, if you please."

"Wear this little ring of mine to guard it; or better yet, exchange with me. Give me yours and take this instead," said the young man daringly. Provoking Prudence looked at the heavily chased gold ring he held out to her, and then looked back at the water with an innocent, "Oh, I don't think it would fit."

"Try it," suggested her companion, softly.

Prudence shook her head, but finally agreed blushingly, that it would do no harm to try, and slipped the ring on her forefinger.

"It's a perfect fit!" cried Mr. Wentworth, delightedly. "Nothing could be better. Why, Miss Prudence, you surely don't mean to give it back?"

"Of course I do," was the saucy rejoinder. Why not?"

"Because," said Mr. Wentworth, speaking very earnestly and disregarding his oars altogether, while he tried to get a glimpse of the face hidden by the flat hat, "because I meant to ask you to wear it always for my sake. I meant to ask y——"

"Oh, Mr. Wentworth," cried his listener there, "do you see that lily on your left—won't you get it for me?"

"I'll get you that and twenty others, if you'll listen to me first. Do you care for me, Prudence? Will you marry me?"

Prudence's face was turned away and her head bent lower. A crimson flush stole over her ears, neck and chin.

"Prudence."

No answer. Her companion leaned over her and took her hand again venturously.

"Prudence, will you wear the ring?" he questioned, softly.

But the hand was hastily drawn away; a pair of saucy black eyes flashed into his own, and Prudence's merry laughter ran over the water.

"I'd rather have grandma's, please. I ought to go home, Mr. Wentworth, for I know it is almost tea time."

Mr. Wentworth put his ring in his pocket and took up his oars again energetically, without a word. He was fresh from college, and held the stroke oar in many a race, but he never made better time than he made that afternoon in rowing up the river. The light boat shot along with the rower's brow knitted and his teeth set. Not once did he look at Prudence, who sat in a half-puzzled, half-alarmed silence, now and then stealing sidewise glances at the offended young Hercules from under her hat. Mr. Wentworth drew a breath of relief when the boat at last grated on the sand, and having assisted Prudence to land, and curtly offered to carry her lilies, he shouldered the oars and marched grimly toward home by her side. Prudence, somewhat bewildered and more angry, made no effort to break the silence, and studiously endeavored to keep from crying. When he at last left her at the door, with a cool "Thank you, Miss Prudence," and departed to carry the oars to the barn, it was well he did not look back, for Miss Prudence tossed the lilies aside with a petulant gesture and had a fit of crying with her head on the kitchen table.

When Mr. Wentworth returned from the barn half an hour later he did see a picture that comforted him a little through the wreathed pantry window, It was Prudence, with her sleeves pinned up, molding biscuits in desperate haste, while the tears fell thickly on the high calico apron. This picture so amazed Mr. Wentworth that he retreated hastily behind a lilac bush to observe it, and lingered so long that he was late at tea. This was a model supper. There was a great dish of berries, with snowy cream beside, flanked by cheese and raspberry jam. There were two mountainous plates of snowy biscuit, contrasting with the sponge cake and the richer gold of the butter. Mr. Wentworth, who had supposed he should never have an appetite again, felt quite revived by the sight of this table and the memory of the picture. The rest of the boarders seemed to share the sensation, for the group of muslin was very hilarious, and the eatables disappeared rapidly. Prudence, presiding between the pots, seemed rather out of spirits, but farmer Holmes atoned for her silence by unusual jollity.

When the biscuits passed a second time to Mr. Wentworth he saw that only one was left, and would have decorously refused, but the hospitable farmer pressed it upon him. "Don't be afraid of it. There's plenty more in the kitchen; ain't there Prudence?" Thus pressed, Mr. Wentworth accepted the biscuit, and Prudence disappeared to replenish the plate. Mr. Wentworth divided the biscuit, then dropped it suddenly, with an exclamation that brought every eye upon him. There, imbedded in the light, white bread, lay Prudence's ruby ring.

Such a shout of laughter arose that brought Prudence back from the kitchen in haste, just in time to see Mr. Wentworth coolly remove the ring from the biscuit, amidst the merry chorus, and drop it into his waistcoat pocket, to "be kept till called for," he said, with a significant glance at her scarlet face. Poor Prudence! There was no peace for her after that. An army of jokes quite overwhelmed her protestations and disclaimings, and she was thankful to beat a hasty retreat to the kitchen when the meal was over. But even there she was pursued by a laughing trio of the ladies, harrassed with questions, and wonderment and merriment, until the last dish was set away, and she had seized her hat, with the excuse that she must go to the village for letters. Instead of going to the village, however, she stole along the hedge, climbed the wall, and ran to the furthest end of the orchard, where she flung herself on the ground and cried as if her heart would break. She had, perhaps, cried half an hour, when a step crushed the dry grass at her side, roused her, and the very voice she most dreaded to hear said:

"I've come to return your ring, Miss Prudence."

Poor little Prudence sat up hastily, and took the unfortunate ring with a faltering "Thank you," then immediately hid her face again.

"You needn't thank me; I should have brought it before, but I couldn't find you. I hope you're not troubled about those ridiculous jokes," he added, dignifiedly.

"N-o," responded Prudence, miserably, between her sobs; "I—I thought you'd think I did it on purpose."

"How could I have thought so? It was a mere accident, my getting that particular biscuit. I'm very sorry you've been so annoyed in this way. I'm going away to-morrow, Miss Prudence."

The sobs partially ceased, and Miss Prudence said, surprisingly. "Are you?"

"Won't you bid me good-by?"

Prudence said "Yes," unsteadily, but did not raise her head.

"You will shake hands, won't you, Miss Prudence?"

No answer.

"I can't go away while you are offended with me. Won't you at least tell me why you are crying?"

"Because I—I lost my grandmother's ring," sobbed Prudence, making a great effort for composure.

Mr. Wentworth laughed in spite of himself. "Why, it's safe on your finger, and not a whit the worse for its baking. Is there really no other reason?"

"N-no."

"But there is. I shall never have another happy moment if I've offended you," said Mr. Wentworth, tragically. "I was a brute to treat you as I did this afternoon; but I'm going away, and I shan't annoy you again. Won't you forgive me now and shake hands?"

Another long silence. Mr. Wentworth turned away in despair, but was detained by a faltering voice, "I—I'll forgive you if ——"

"Well?" was the breathless interposition.

"You—won't—go—away."

The more observant boarders noticed at breakfast the next morning that Mr. Abbott Wentworth wore the ring that he had found in the biscuit on the little finger of the left hand, and that Prudence wore a heavily chased gold circle in the place of her lost ornament. To use the words of one of the before-named boarders, "that tells the whole story."

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from the speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

The republicans are quite elated over the fact that all of the liberals or independent republicans, elected outside of the caucus rule at home, appeared in the Congressional caucus here and took seats among the regulars. Even Senator Hamilton of Texas, who has not been in a republican Senatorial caucus for two years, once more enrolled himself. Senator Cameron of Wisconsin, elected by the democrats' coalition; Senator McMillan of Minnesota; and Senator Paddock of Nebraska, were present. Senator Christiancy, of Michigan, alone was absent of the number, but will act with the republicans. The republican leaders state that what is left of the liberal element will be back in the party by the time the convention meets.

At the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce, of Sheffield, England, the President referred to the startling decline of American trade, and said neither Sheffield nor Birmingham will ever have such an American trade as formerly. American and German manufacturers were pushing goods into the corner, and by introducing machinery for the production of articles of equal quality to those made by hand had become successful competitors.

The Patriot has received the following from Rev. Robert W. Trimble, of Pine Bluff, Ark., and if any of our readers know anything of the following they will confer him a favor by addressing him as above:

In the year 1819, James Miller, of Temple, N. H., was appointed by President Monroe, Governor of the Territory of Arkansas. For several years, that is up to 1824, Gov. Miller administered the affairs of the territory and at the same time represented the affairs of the general government as agent of Indian affairs. In 1824 he was elected to Congress from his district in New Hampshire, subsequently he resigned both the gubernatorial office and his seat in Congress, and accepted the position of Collector of Customs of the port of Salem, Mass. There are but two persons now living in this country who knew Gov. Miller personally and they are not prepared to give any particular facts relating to his biography, except such as pertain to his administration. It is supposed that Gov. Miller still has some descendants living in New Hampshire who could give some information regarding him, and who may have in their possession important papers, letters, etc.

Jonathan Earle, treasurer of the Norfolk and New Brunswick Hosiery Company, New Jersey, is a defaulter to the amount of $142,000. Johnson Leston has been elected treasurer in his place. Earle made a statement acknowledging the deficiency and turning over property and stock sufficient to cover the amount. From his statement it appears that his son, G. B. Earle, of New York, who kept his bank accounts, was given blank checks, signed by Earle as treasurer of the company, to fill out when required to meet bills and liabilities of the company coming due, and that in having the blank checks signed at his command he has overdrawn the account to the amount stated. It is said that young Earle speculated in Wall street and lost it all.

A Post dispatch says: There has been a laborious attempt at the State Department to conceal the excitement occasioned by the receipt of important despatches from Spain, the purport of which cannot be learned. Jovellar shortly after his arrival in Cuba, sent despatches to Madrid which are said by competent authority to have produced a profound sensation. We are evidently on the eve of new and important developments in this regard. The purport of Jovellar's despatches to the home Government was that he found himself unable to carry out the instructions that had been given him in the way of instituting reforms and setting on foot conciliatory measures in the island. The volunteers he found were beyond his control, and too numerous to be despised. The Casino it is evident is too much for him. Mr. Fish is therefore preparing a new circular note, calling the attention of the Great Powers to this state of affairs, in which the Spanish Government finds it impossible to fulfil pledges made to this Government.

There is no doubt that the less partisan managers of both political parties would feel easier in their minds if they could put a gag upon the bumptious brethren in Ohio and Indiana. As the Springfield Republican puts it: "If both parties could fence them off and fence them out for the next year, things would go along very smoothly. But between Hendricks and Morton and Pendleton and Thurman and Hayes, and the continued loval tenderness for the rag-baby, after everybody else is pretty much weaned, they are making a mess of it in both camps. What gives them power to do this is that their votes are likely to be necessary to elect a President. Nobody else can stand either their candidates or their platforms, yet, if they can't have them, they threaten to play the very devil with the result."

The express train coming east from Chicago, over the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, on the night of Jan. 26th, when near Edgerton, O., was boarded by four men, who located themselves between the baggage car and sealed express car, and succeeded in sawing a hole in the door large enough to admit a person. The detectives were on the watch for them and they were allowed to proceed with their work until the train was between Warren and Delta, when the train was suddenly stopped and all four men were arrested and held in custody by the officers.

On the Brooklyn ferry boat, sitting bolt upright, as if she had fed on starch the past forty years, stern and implacable, there was Emma, the rib of Henry Ward Beecher, and who should come in, just as the boat started, but Mrs. Tilton. She has a depreciating fashion of sidling along, looking askance at everybody with her little bead eyes. That she saw the white-faced grenadier was evident in an instant, as she flushed up and dropped in an embarrassed way into a vacant seat. Mrs. Beecher turned her rabbit face toward her with a freezing expression, but gave no sign of recognition.—N. Y. Cor. St. Louis Repub.

The San Francisco Alta notices the grand scheme of Messrs. Flood & O'Brien, managers of the Consolidated Virginia and California Mining Companies, who have announced their determination to send a specimen of the product of these mines to the Centennial for exhibition. They have under consideration a plan to exhibit the product of one month's yield of gold and silver from their mines, which it is expected can be made to reach $10,000,000, made up in 3500 silver bricks, weighing 150 tons, and will require fifteen cars for transportation. It is stated that the plan will be carried out if arrangements can be made with the Government to purchase the bullion. This will be a chance to get rid of gold and silver bullion for bonds of the Government, which with the discount on silver bullion, would leave a handsome profit to the Comstock lode.

The Centennial committee of New Hampshire have adopted a plan for a building to be erected on the Centennial grounds. The main building is 50 by 40 feet, two stories high, with two projecting and spacious piazzas on three sides. The first floor will be used for a reception-room. The second floor will be devoted to a ladies' drawing-room, press and committee room, etc. The location is one of the best and commands a fine view of the grounds. The committee are short of funds, and it is proposed to appeal to the citizens of New Hampshire to contribute to the erection of the building and in making a creditable exhibition of the various industries of the State.

Says the Chicago Tribune: "If the democratic convention comes to Chicago, we'll lodge all the confederate delegates on the former site of Camp Douglas."

Mr. Byington writes from Washington to the Norwalk Gazette: "The papers of late, have been making much ado over the circumstance that the clerk of the leading committee of the House named his son after Wilkes Booth. He comes out in a bungling card in the New York Tribune and denies that he did so. But his statement is false; yet is not even the lie measurably creditable to him? A gentleman of undoubted reliability, who knows him intimately, told us recently, that he had heard the fool and brute boast that he had so named the child, more than a dozen times. The same gentleman assures us that scores of witnesses to the same fact could be furnished any day if desired."

A FIGHT WITH A BURGLAR.

The particulars of the desperate encounter with a masked burglar in Binghamton, N. Y., are of singular interest. Shortly after midnight Mr. George A. Kent, whose residence was the scene of the struggle, thought he heard a noise in the house. Mr. Kent slowly raised up in bed and stepped out on the floor. He walked into the sitting room and deliberately turned up the light which was burning in the chandelier in the middle of the room. He looked around, but there was no sign of any intruder. Mr. Kent thought he had been alarmed without cause, and turned around to re-enter the bed-room. As he did so, the form of a masked burglar appeared in the doorway, between the two rooms. In a moment the thought flashed through Mr. Kent's mind that if he surrendered he might get a chance to reach his revolver, which was on a shelf in a closet at the foot of the bed. He threw up his hands and exclaimed, "All right. Take what you want. I won't disturb you." The burglar lowered his arm, and Mr. Kent said, "Just let me get back into bed, and then go to work." The burglar evidently supposed Mr. Kent had given up, and at once turned his attention to business. He took up Mr. Kent's clothes, which were lying on a chair near the bureau, and ransacked the pockets. A few small articles he threw on the floor, but transferred a gold watch and chain and a pocket-book to his own pocket. The bureau drawers were next opened and a few articles taken.

As may well be imagined, Mr. Kent found it very hard work to lie still and see his property appropriated. It required all his self-possession to keep quiet, but he could do nothing without his revolver, and that was out of his reach. Mrs. Kent, who had borne up bravely, began to show symptoms of alarm and fright, and Mr. Kent requested the robber to be quick and get through. "We will be quiet," said Mr. Kent, "if you will only clear out. Go quietly, and shut the door behind you." At last the burglar finished his work and went into the sitting room. In an instant Mr. Kent put his foot on the floor, intending to get his revolver, but the burglar opened the door in an instant. Mr. Kent laid down and the door was closed again. How to get that revolver without giving notice of his movements Mr. Kent could not think. But a bright thought struck him. He reached out his arms and pinched the baby, who was lying in the crib at the side of the bed. The baby began to cry, and Mr. Kent sprang from his bed and seized the revolver before the burglar was aware of it. He threw open the door into the sitting room. The burglar stood in the middle of the room. Mr. Kent fired instantly, and the burglar at the same time raised his arm, exclaiming with an oath, "Now I've got you!" The burglar then rushed behind the stove and succeeded in dodging the bullets of his would-be captor. After Mr. Kent had fired three shots he rushed from behind the stove and grappled with Mr. Kent, trying to get his revolver away from him.

Then began a hand-to-hand fight. The two men rolled around on the floor in a desperate battle for life. Mr. Kent tried to use his pistol, and fired two more shots, one of which struck the stove, and the other struck the robber in the right arm, just above the elbow, and lodged in the fleshy part of the limb. Mr. Kent exerted all his strength to throw the man and despatch him, his own life depending on his killing his assailant. He called to Mrs. Kent to get the poker or stove-lifter, and break the rascal's head. Mrs. Kent rushed to her husband's rescue and caught the man by the hair, in an effort to distract his attention and save her husband. She tried to find the iron handle used for shaking down the stove, but the burglar had placed it on the table when he first entered the room, evidently intending to use it as a weapon. At last, after a struggle which seemed endless to Mr. Kent, he got his antagonist at an advantage, and throwing him upon the sofa standing near the kitchen door, pressed the revolver against his side and fired the sixth shot. The bullet entered the body of the desperate and defeated villain, just below the right breast, passing upward. The wounded man fell over on the sofa, and Mr. Kent, exhausted with the struggle, let go of him. Mrs. Kent approached him with the poker, and he sprang through the dining-room door. Mr. Kent followed him, but did not fire again, although he had one shot left. The burglar escaped through a side kitchen door, which he had unfastened when he went in.

The wounded rubber went through Mr. Kent's yard, and that of C. H. Conklin, on Pine street, and walked down Pine street to Division street. He then hurried up to Henry street, and going to a house, asked admission. He was told to go away, and walked up Henry street for some distance, asking admission. His wound began to pain him, and his course was marked by drops of blood. At length he reached the house of John Dunn, 105 Henry street. He knocked at the door, and Mr. Dunn inquired what he wanted. He said that he had been stabbed in a row up at the depot and wanted to be taken in. Mrs. Dunn urged her husband not to admit him at that time of night, and he replied that he could not let him in. The fellow begged hard to be admitted, and Mr. Dunn, at last consented, against the remonstrances of his wife. When the burglar got into the hall he asked for a chair. Mrs. Dunn objected, but her husband said that he would never refuse a chair to a poor, homeless man. Their visitor was a well-dressed, respectable-looking person, and Mrs. Dunn began to think that perhaps she had been judging him too harshly. He asked for a doctor, and appeared to be in great pain. A neighbor living in the house came in and made up a fire in the front room, where the unbidden visitor was sitting. When he first came in he had thrown a pocket-book and watch on the table, but Mrs. Dunn would not allow any one to touch them, believing that there was something wrong about the matter.

Mr. Dunn went to the Post Office, and the first person he met was E. L. Phelps, the mail agent employed at the depot. He told him of his nocturnal visitor, and asked him to go back to the house. Several policemen were notified, and the party returned to Mr. Dunn's house, bringing Dr. Ely with them. By this time Mr. Kent had arrived, with a number of neighbors, who had turned out on the alarm being given. The stolen property was identified by Mr. Kent and recovered. The burglar was very reticent, and refused to reply to most of the questions put to him. He said his name was John Hasting, of Oswego. His real name, as afterward ascertained, is John Hayden. He said he had an accomplice in the house, who had a pistol, but refused to tell his name. Had the accomplice of Hayden been as brave as his principal, the affair might have resulted in a more serious tragedy.

The prisoner was taken to jail about six o'clock. He was able to walk out of Mr. Dunn's house with support, and appeared to suffer very little from his wound.

THE CHICAGO ROTHSCHILD.

He hadn't any baggage, and after one look at him the brush-boy walked away and sat down. The average brush-boy of the average hotel knows when he can brush a quarter out of a guest just as well as if he were a lawyer. The stranger wrote his name on the register with great deliberation. It was a long name. It read: "Herbert Henry Washington, Chicago, Ill." The clerk regarded him for a moment with a keen glance, and then asked:

"How long will you remain here?"

"About a week," was the reply.

"Shall I credit you with $10 paid in advance?"

"Who are you talking to?" demanded the stranger as he stepped back a little.

"Strangers generally pay in advance," replied the clerk.

"Well, sir, I'll be hanged, sir, if I was ever insulted before! Ask me for money in advance! Why, sir, do you know that I could buy this hotel and still have millions left?"

"I have my orders."

"Am I to be treated like a dead beat?" continued the stranger. "When a man comes to Detroit to lend $200,000 on mortgage, do your people look upon him as a skulk and a thief?"

"My orders are positive," quietly replied the clerk.

"I want to see the owner of this hotel, and I want to take him to the Board of Trade, the Mayor's office, and the Waterworks, and I want him to find out what kind of a man I am."

"The proprietor isn't in."

"You don't know me—you don't realize who I am!" exclaimed the stranger, tapping the office counter with every pause. "I didn't care to be known, but since you have insulted me, I want to inform you that I am the Rothschild of the West!"

The clerk started off with a letter to his girl, but had not got as far as "beloved Sarah" when the stranger yelled out:

"Who advanced money to Chicago to complete her Water-works? Who owns twenty-eight steamboats and six tugs? Who owns six elevators and one hundred miles of railroad?"

"I don't know," was the reply.

"And yet, when I come into this house I am insulted as if I were a loafer!" continued the stranger. "Why, sir, come to the bank with me, and see if my check for $50,000 will be dishonored!"

"I go!" said the clerk, putting on his hat.

"You will, eh?"

"Yes, sir!"

"You needn't go. I wouldn't stop here if you'd give me a thousand dollars a day. I'll go to some other house, and when Spring opens I'll buy a site next to you and build a hotel of my own and run your house out of sight!"

"Call an officer!" said the clerk to one of the boys.

"That's the crowning insult!" shouted the man. "But I'll bide my time. I'll go over to the other tavern and send over a $50,000 check for you to look at, and no matter how sorry you feel, sir, I'll not accept an apology, sir—blast me if I do!"

He went out and at noon was last seen eating crackers and cheese in the Post office.

Remember the Poor.

Editor Chronicle: There are now a great number of men in the city out of work, and who are very anxious to obtain it. In many cases their families are suffering, and have to be aided by private and public charity, when if work could be provided, they would be able to keep above want. The sudden exigency has in Boston caused the establishment of what is called a co-operative wood yard, where work is furnished at very low rate of wages for all who apply. Why cannot the same thing be done here, by concerted action? It is not only the poor who are poor this year; these who have moderate fortunes are poor, too; and cannot give work, or have jobs done, at the usual rate of wages when they might do so if they could hire men at a dollar a day. Could not some arrangement be made to bring both employers, and the needy workmen together? Let me suggest one idea: If all those are willing to give work of any kind for a dollar a day for the rest of the Winter, or for less wages even for a shorter time would publish their names, or have a kind of intelligence office at one of our stores, where men could seek work, I think that hires would apply at once. Could the Board of Trade not act on this subject, or the City authorities? As soon as the ice in the ponds melts, could not the city have them dredged out at a cheap rate? I hope these communications on this subject, suggesting some feasible plan, will appear in your paper. F. S

A BOOTBLACK CONGRESS.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Saturday, when the "Big English" saw that it was going to be a lonesome day for the bootblacks, he set his head to work to devise something to break the monotony. About ten o'clock he got a number of boys into the alley behind the Post Office, and organized the "Forty-Fifth Congress." "Big English" is a regular reader of the daily papers, and he is a great organizer. It took him but fifteen minutes to get the House" and "Senate" running so smoothly that lawyers and others looked down from their windows with great interest.

"Who's a liar?" yelled a white-headed boy as he jumped up.

"Oh, dry up!" shouted "Sixth Ward Tom."

"Put him out—he was in the rebel army!" yelled a boy from Grand River avenue.

"Some one clubbed my dog fifteen years ago and I can never forgive him," howled Cawberry Bob.

"Git out the records and let's see who was the bull," put in King's boy.

"Big English rapped on his box to restore order, but King Tommy threw up his hat and yelled:

"I moves for the aizes and nozes."

"He can't gag me," shouted a lathy boy from Windsor.

"Let's have a salary grab," piped a Congress street boy.

"The peepul won't stand it," whooped another.

"Hain't we the people?" demanded a boy on the railing.

"Are we one country?" asked the speaker as he rose up.

"I are, but you haint!" yelped "Nickety Nick."

"Doesn't one flag float for us all?" continued the speaker.

"It does about tax-time!" screamed a boss-eyed youth from Springwells.

Somebody kicked the honorable Speaker, and then struck the honorable gentleman from Wisconsin. The honorable gentleman from Wisconsin smashed at the honorable gentleman from Georgia, and hair stood and coat-tails stood out. When the row had quieted down the honorable Speaker remarked:

"It was pretty good for the fust time, though you didn't abuse each other enough.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "vapid and sensational." He thinks that 50 cents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debauches the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press, we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the character of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful, if all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says:—In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this purpose wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc., more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Where Does it All Come From?

Pints and quarts of fishy Catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane which lines the chambers of the nose, and its little glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life-liquid is needed to build up the system, but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which also acts directly upon these glands, correcting the disease, and purging Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from. The treatment and both medicines sold by druggists and dealers in medicines.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the chil ren by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in colors, patterns, and the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its useful designs for embroidered slippers and fixtures, dressing gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a vile popularity for the flexible entertainment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaints, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their astonishing virtues became known, and everyone who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from all parts of the U. S. unsolicited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, and I have taken pills and pills, a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. During this time I read your pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any good from them. I have now taken one box, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can repeat my self-cure. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained orders for them. I have procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, M.D.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have taken a dozen of your pills, and gave to my, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills at a can each anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do with-out them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. Yours truly, H. D. LEONARD.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered with Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months at a time to get out of bed, and I suffered from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal of money for medicine, but no good, and I concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist, and thought I would make one more trial, and sent to you last April for a package of your pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, and have not had any Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends have noticed the improvement, and among them it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your pills. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be benefited by them. Enclosed is $1 for which I send you three more packages. Yours truly,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than at 16. Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 16, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—Write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two more packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political contest bitter and exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Covered during the next six months will doubtless be policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke much discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and production the industry there are hopes that it will witness the long desired revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its proven performances, as constituting its claim for continued regard of all old readers, and the access also of many new readers, intelligent citizens can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an honest, fearless, and uniformed, by partisan sect, selfish or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles, of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will replace whenever those principles are traitorous under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of cuucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good and reject what it finds bad of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country may hope and trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard money triumphs won by the Republicans and independent allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people determined to support what it knew to be the clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the past, and to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have in no within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with its political zeal; it will keep its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the abuse which attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

Even those who believe from a journal which is a welcome visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the peaceful years of the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, of "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the utmost watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh and intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting and instructive news, and the most able in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished writers in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the humid trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As a stitch in time saves nine, so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent its spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking, pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the prevailing suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Stereoscopes and Views,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PATSEY'S GOAT.

When Mr. Terence McFadden died his widow made a raffle of her household goods. Out of all the collection Patsey Conley drew a three-weeks-old Billy goat. Patsey saw nothing extraordinary in the goat at first; but when, before it had been a member of his family two days, it butted the baby down cellar, ate up the week's wash that was spread on the grass, and climbed to the top of a fifteen-foot board pile, when Mrs. Conley came out at it with the clothes pounder, and looked calmly down at her as it chewed the last ruffle on a night-gown, Patsey set his heart on the kid and took it under his special protection. He named it Beelzebub.

As Beelzebub increased in size and age, he made it extremely lively for the Conley neighborhood. He was always ready for a fight, and would eat anything that he came across, would go a mile out of his way to lunch off a door mat, and it would never do to hang a carpet out. He took special delight in butting school children over in the street, and eating their lunches, books and satchels.

Finally the people got out of humor with Beelzebub, and they told Patsey he had better keep him in. So he tied a long rope to one of the goat's legs and fastened him to a post. But Beelzebub quietly butted the post down, and then deliberately proceeded to take in the rope. He swallowed it all up to his leg, and was beginning on that when Patsey discovered him, and cut the rope.

On another of his holidays, a few weeks ago, Beelzebub acquired an accomplishment which for a time gave the most unmitigated pleasure to his master. Laborers were engaged in enlarging a cut on a railroad a mile down the track. The goat, hearing the noise of the blasts, went to see if there were anything in the job for him. Some of the men lived a long distance away and carried their dinners with them. The bright tin lunch pails standing here and there along the track struck the eye of Belzy. He had smelt of one, pranced about it awhile, and at last with one grand butt, sent it flying down the track, scattering its contents along the route and giving it the appearance of a flattened oyster can. The result of this so delighted Beelzebub that he forsook all other pleasures and laid in ambush about the cut, waiting for dinner pails. Patsey became aware of his amiable pet's new diversion, and daily bore him company to the spot to enjoy the fun. By and by the men took to hiding their pails and Beelzebub grew morose and low-spirited. One day last week Patsey and his pet walked down to the cut. Beelzebub seemed more than usually sad. He hadn't seen a dinner pail in some days. Suddenly, as they neared the cut, Belzy became strangely elated. Ahead of them, near the track, stood a pail. It was a beauty, and had been placed on a stone, affording a splendid mark for the goat. Patsey rolled on the ground, he felt so good. Belzy fairly gloated over the prospect. He stopped within a few paces of the pail. He reared up on his hind legs and pranced about in a perfect frenzy of joy. He shook his head and made several feints of bearing down on the pail, as if revelling awhile in sweet expectancy. Presently Belzy waltzed back a little further. He threw his head down, and, with a blast that expressed all the unadulterated cussedness of his nature, went for that pail as if he had been shot out of a cannon. He struck it like a battering ram. There was a sound as of a thunder clap, and by the pieces of goat, rock and earth that fell thickly about, Patsey knew that Beelzebub had been deceived, and would never, never butt dinner pails more. Belzy had butted a can of nitroglycerine.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

BARNUM AS A YOUNG LOVER.

That was a big book P. T. Barnum wrote about himself. It is very complete, too, but there is one little incident which he either forgot to mention, or which got pied when the forms went to press. It occurred when the Great Showman was a young man, and a resident of this section. He was paying impetuous attentions to a young lady living in Newton. Being a son of poor but honest parents, he was obliged to walk over to the village which contained his adored, on the Sunday nights he visited her. When there he labored under another and more awkward disadvantage. The young lady's father conceived a singular and most violent dislike to the amiable embryotic showman. This necessitated extreme caution on the part of the lover, and he was equal to the emergency, as a matter of course. His egress to the house was by a window on the second floor, which he reached by springing from the cover of a cistern curb, and catching hold of the window ledge. His egress was effected by hanging full length from the ledge, and then dropping to the cistern cover, a fall of about six inches. One Sunday he took with him on the visit a young man who now carries his silvered hairs behind a Danbury grocery counter. They reached the place, the young lady saw the signal, opened the window, and the famous Barnum sprung up into bliss. The young man was to amuse himself about the village until the hour of departure. He amused himself. It don't seem possible that anybody could be so brutal, but that young man actually removed the cover to the cistern. Then he sat down by the fence and ate currants, and calmly waited for the result. P. T. finished his sparking, and backed out of the window the full length his hands would permit.

"Good-by," he gasped in a whisper, as he prepared to drop.

"Good-by, Phinny," she whispered back.

Then he let go, and instantly shot from sight into a yawning abyss of darkness and rain water, and if he had been of solid iron heated to a white glow he could not have created more of a commotion in striking the water. It is not necessary to repeat what Mr. Barnum said, both when crawling out of the cistern and during the eight miles' walk home, but shortly after he became a Univer-alist.—Danbury News.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who reverse the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and depravity."

The above are extracts from the speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

Mr. Barclay's Resignation.

Mr. John M. Barclay, Journal Clerk of the House of Representatives and author of Barclay's Digest, has resigned the position which he has held for more than a quarter of a century. The following is his letter:

Mr. Adams Clerk—Sir: Your treatment of my old friends, Mehaffey and Clayton, both of whom had assurances from your friends of retention, is so suggestive of similar treatment of myself, that I prefer to select the time myself, and hence I hereby resign this day as the day of my resignation. JOHN M. BARCLAY.

Jan. 26, 1876.

Mr. Barclay is now sixty years of age. The removal of Mr. Clayton, his assistant, whom he had trained to the difficult work of the position, was the occasion of his resignation, as it was impossible, in the nature of his business, to train another to do the work acceptably at the present busy season, and he preferred not to be responsible for any imperfect work. To train an assistant would require the presence of Mr. Barclay at the desk all day, labor which he is not able to perform. Mr. Barclay has been the leading authority on parliamentary discipline for a long series of years, and he has been regarded by Mr. Banks, Mr. Grow, Mr. Colfax, and Mr. Blaine as the best parliamentarian in the United States. He has been officially connected with the House of Representatives since 1847. He began under Speaker Winthrop, on the recommendation of Caleb N. Smith and the late President Lincoln, who were members of that Congress. By his aptitude, ability, and education he became so useful that he has been retained in office continuously ever since through the personal solicitation of the following Speakers: Howell Cobb, Linn Boyd, N. P. Banks, James L. Orr, Aaron Pennington, G. A. Grow, Schuyler Colfax, and James G. Blaine. His removal was once attempted by John W. Forney, when he was Clerk of the House, on account of political pressure; but the Speaker interfered and prevented it. Mr. Barclay, although never obtruding his political principles, but making the discharge of his duty paramount to every consideration, has been an acknowledged republican, and his usefulness to the House cannot be overrated. Speaker Kerr referred to him in the following terms during the Jefferson Davis debate on the 15th Jan.:

The Speaker—The Chair overrules the point of order made by the gentleman from Maine (Mr. Blaine.) The Chair desires only in addition to say, and he is glad to be able to say it, that in this ruling he is upon all points sustained by the venerable Journal Clerk of the House, the author of our Digest, who has had experience of twenty-eight years.

—"It is not our fault," says a Milwaukee editor, "that we are red-headed and small, and the next time that one of those overgrown rural roosters in a ball-room reaches down for our head and suggests that some fellow has lost a rose-bud out of his button-hole, there will be trouble."

—Ten mills make one cent—but not any ten mills in this section.—New Bedford Mercury.

Congress.

The House debated the military academy bill on Friday and grew hilarious over a personal tilt between Messrs. Hale of Maine and Cox of New York. The bill as reported proposed to reduce the pay of cadets at West Point from $600 to $450 per annum. Mr. Hamilton moved to strike out "$450" and insert "$540." Mr. Hale moved to amend the amendment by striking out "$540" and inserting "$600."

Mr. Durham, democrat, of Kentucky, spoke against a reduction of the pay of cadets. He said he was in favor of legitimate reduction, but he would not be led into reduction by any party or leaders of party. (Applause on the republican side.)

Mr. Hale's amendment was rejected, 68 to 96.

Mr. Cox said reduction was needed and that men in New York are going from house to house begging for bread, men willing to barter their muscles and sinews for work who are unable to make the exchange; aye, even in New England, where the question is work or steal, with the preference for (a comical pause) work. (Laughter.)

Mr. Hoar—That is the difference between New England and New York. (Laughter.)

Mr. Hale, of Maine, said the gentleman from New York arrogates to himself and his party the credit of first seeking to lessen the burdens of the people. "Mr. Chairman, that gentleman knows that we are to-day two months gone in this session. He knows that the main time of this session has been taken up in the introduction of bills by himself and friends on that side of the House, making fresh demands upon the treasury. He knows these claims are coming up from the South in demands running from $10 to $60,000,000, and that they aggregate ten times as much as the republican party has saved heretofore. He knows there is not a man in the South who lost a mule through advances of the federal army that is not coming up here and clamoring for pay from the United States. (Applause on the republican side.) He knows there is a claim here for $60,000,000 to pay the cotton tax. The point of all that I am saying is, that when these claims come up and are pushed from that side of the House, he will not dare to vote against them.

Mr. Cox—I have voted against them.

Mr. Hale—I will submit to the record when it comes up. I do not care what the gentleman has done in the past.

Mr. Cox—I do.

Mr. Hale—I know that now he is drawn along in a current which he cannot resist, and that when these claims come up and a word is said to him by his masters, he will not care to vote against them, and that these claims will be sustained (with some exceptions, it may be) on that side of the House, and I say now that I do not believe he (Cox) will be in that exception.

Mr. Cox—The gentleman cannot find anything in my record or votes either for retrenchment or prodigality to justify him in saying I have any "masters" except the people, my constituents. What did he mean by "my masters?" On what meat does this our Cæsar feed that he is grown so great as to talk in that way to me? (Laughter and excitement.)

Mr. Hale—Does this gentleman wish me to answer?

Mr. Cox—Yes, and promptly.

Mr. Hale—I mean the leading, dominating influences of the party of which the gentleman is an active and honored member, influences which he will be bound to follow (so far as I may say without being offensive,) to obey.

Mr. Cox—That belongs to the future. The gentleman (Mr. Hale) has been known in the last three or four Congresses as "Blaine's little bub." (Laughter and increased excitement and confusion.)

Mr. Garfield rose to a point of order, but Mr. Hale got in in the uproar and confusion his retort in these words: "I will put against it the buzzing fly that was shooed out of reputation and fame by the late member from Massachusetts." (Butler.) [Laughter and loud raps to order by the chairman.]

Mr. Garfield again called the gentleman to order, and Mr. Cox asked him (in a tone of injured innocence:) "Why did you allow him to put me in that predicament?"

Mr. Hale (defiantly)—I do not call the gentleman to order. I hope that he will be allowed to go on, and that I shall be allowed to explain.

Mr. Garfield—I call the gentleman (Mr. Cox) to order and insist on the words being taken down (the allusion to Mr. Hale as "Blaine's little bub.")

Mr. Cox (in a pacific mood)—I withdraw them. It is not worth while to take them down.

Mr. Hale (in a belligerent mood)—I am willing to put "shoo fly" against them.

Mr. Cox—That is a small business; it is only copying an old joke.

The chairman inquired of Mr. Garfield whether he withdrew his call for the offensive words to be reduced to writing.

Mr. Garfield said he would not insist.

Mr. Hamilton's amendment was finally adopted.

—Last evening a man was walking along on John street, near Bleecker, in Utica, musing on general amnesty, when he slipped and struck a man ahead of him in the small of the back with his feet. The man said "Oh," and went waltzing boomerang fashion into three young ladies ahead of him. Each of the three sat down on the nice sidewalk with thanks. The man who started the casualties came forward and said he was "so sorry." Then each of the three, not to be outdone, exclaimed in a breath, "not at all," and further intimated that it was "just splendid." The first man said it was "so slippery," the three all chorused "so slippery," and the man who had done the waltzing had made up his mind to say "so slippery" too, or die in the attempt, when he slipped again and sat down. He then concluded he had nothing to say about it, but had better let the thing speak for itself.—Utica Observer.

News and Notes.

The republicans will distribute the speeches of Blaine, Hill and Garfield in this State, and the presses are rapidly turning out hundreds of thousands of copies. We would suggest that they also send a few thousand copies of Townsend's speech into the State. Having published it in full, we found a great and increasing demand for it

Mr. D. W. Bartlett writes from Washington to the Independent: "The Northern democrats, in both branches of this Congress are literally 'dumb dogs' before their Southern masters; and to-day the state of things would be unendurable here but for the fact that the administration is republican, and the Southern members are held in check by their intense desire to get control of the government through the Fall elections. No democrat ventured to reply to Hill. None will grapple with Tucker. The Southern members are used to governing, and they will have no trouble in controlling the 'doughfaces' of the North, as they did in the years before the civil war."

And at the very time Marcy was voting in Congress against every measure calculated to bring the war to a successful close, Cheney was wearing the blue, and doing all in his power to aid the Union cause.—Concord Monitor.

Parson Brownlow says in the Knoxville (Tenn.) Whig: So far as the speech and conduct of ex-Speaker Blaine are concerned, I have read it carefully, and indorse it throughout. He made a speech on the floor of Congress, last week, which has never been excelled in any debate that has arisen out of the question of the late war. I thank God that we have men in Congress able and determined to meet these fire-eaters of the South and copperheads of the North in debate and vindicate the Union and its friends. They are much mistaken if they expect to cover up the butcheries of Andersonville and Libby prisons.

It is said that Gen. Butler will run for Congress again next Fall. But you a quarter he will be elected if he does!

We learn that the Indian mound on Murphy's Island was opened, or rather entered by a party on Wednesday last. This mound is one of the largest on the river, and has excited more than ordinary interest among our scientific visitors. But Col. Hart, proprietor of the island upon which the mound stands, heretofore persisted in his refusal to have this relic of the past ages disturbed. On Wednesday, however, it was resolved to inspect thoroughly this monument of prehistoric age. A party from the Putnam, with others, took a steamer for the island, where they arrived in good time. It was agreed to open the mound at its base. After making a breach of thirty feet, they discovered a hard wall made of coquina or shell rock. This wall was cemented, and was ornamented with various figures of warriors with bows and arrows, and various reptiles. After much difficulty a breach was made in the wall, and by the light of a torch, several of the party entered; much surprised, they found themselves within a vault eight feet high with room twelve by fifteen feet long, with armed warriors encased in niches, all in a state of petrifaction. This is certainly a most wonderful discovery, and has produced a profound sensation. In view of this important discovery, Col. Hart has stationed a guard to prevent parties making way with these wonderful objects. Murphy's Island will, no doubt become the Mecca of the St. Johns river.—Palatka (Fla.) Herald.

John Dolan, the murderer of Mr. Noe, has been refused a new trial by Judge Brady.

We have never yet reached the point of absolute conviction that Mr. Blaine was either the fittest man of those prominently talked of for the presidency, or the one most likely to be the republican nominee. Despite all the loud assertions of opposition papers to the contrary, however, it is undeniable that his chances have been greatly improved by the amnesty debate, which has also brought out into clearer light his political soundness and his executive abilities. Parliamentary execution, certainly, in the interest of truth and justice, was never more admirably and effectively done, in any legislative body of this country or Europe, than by the ex-Speaker in that memorable encounter.—Cin. Times.

The results of an experimental test to determine the relative cost of gas and kerosene is given in the New York Tribune, as follows: An ordinary "student's lamp," burning oil, was compared with a bat's wing burner consuming six feet of gas in an hour. First, the amount of light was compared, by holding a lead pencil at a distance from the two flames and observing the two shadows. By pushing the gas burner farther back than the lamp, a point was at length reached where the shadows were equally dark. The gas was then seven feet from the pencil; the lamp was 5.3 feet. The comparative light of the flames was as the squares of these two distances; i. e., as 49 to 28, or 7:4. The lamp burned oil (as was ascertained by weighing it at intervals) at the rate of about one gallon in seventy hours. To get as much light from oil as from the gas burner, one gallon would of course, last only forty hours. This oil was bought at retail for thirty cents. It gas costs $3 per 1000 feet, the six-foot burner would consume seventy-two cents' worth in the forty hours. If the price of gas were reduced to $2.50 per 1000 feet, it would still cost twice as much, light for light, as the oil.

A convict in the South Boston House of Correction killed a fellow prisoner named Mann on Friday, by striking him on the head with a glass bottle.

A Catholic priest of Lawrence, the other Sunday, said that his people in the past year had paid thousands of dollars for funeral carriages, when many of them didn't know the persons buried, and some of them depended on charity for bread; and he gave them notice that such senseless action must be and should be stopped. Protestants as well as Catholics might learn something in this matter. It costs so much now for the cheapest funerals that some die in bitterness to think of the sufferings their deaths will cause their friends.—Newburyport Herald.

The Worcester Gazette quotes a well-known bank president as saying the other morning, on hearing of the great bank robbery at Northampton: "I'm sick of this rascally world. Don't want to see or do business with anybody. I'd rather be an old farmer, living on a cross-road, four miles from the sight of everybody, with a barrel of cider and two hogs, than to have anything to do with banks, money or men."

Sermons from the Sea.

White Island, Jan. 26.

My last newspaper mail from the United States gave me two items of very interesting and pleasing information,—that LaPage is convicted and sentenced to die the dog's death he deserves, and that amid all the gush and sentimental balderdash about the "era of good fe-ling" in the centennial year, one republican leader was found with pluck and common sense enough to insist, on the floor of the National House of Representatives and in presence of the sixty-odd who rule the democratic majority in that body, that a traitor is no better than a patriot and that a cold-blooded murderer is a murderer even though he be a traitor as well. The insolent charge of the rebel brigadiers, that Confederate prisoners were treated with cruelty or even neglect in Northern prison-camps, they very well knew was as false as their assertions that Union prisoners were not deliberately murdered by thousands in the Southern prison-hells; but it must have been very like when a democratic member of the House arose in his place and announced that from his personal knowledge the stories of the ill-treatment of Confederate prisoners were wholly false and unfounded as regarded one camp, at least. Sam. Cox's admonition to Mr. Blaine, "dry up," had better have been addressed to Ben. Hill, so far as the interests of Cox's party are concerned; for the arraignment and denunciation of the party which saved the Union, by a set of rebels who have not only been pardoned for their treason but allowed to take seats in the National councils, will certainly not help place the entire control of the country in the hands of the party of the rebellion. The present Congress is of which a rich specimen was given in the officious meddling with a matter with which the House of Representatives has no more to do than the British House of Commons: the selection by the people of their candidates for President; but the putting on of the martyrs' crown by the rebel brigadiers, and their lofty tone in declaring that they are ready to forgive the North (oh, lordy!) and mean to preserve the Union and Constitution from future danger, is much richer. Before these gentry blather any more about being "oppressed," it would be well for them to remember that had their treason been directed against any other nation on the face of the globe save this, their necks would have commenced to elongate the moment their treason was crushed; and some folks may think that had less money been laid out for paper on which to write pardons, at the close of the war, and the money thus saved been judiciously treason would to-day be more odious and patriotism no less honorable, the Union quite as safe, the real "era of good feeling" nearer, and the rights of all citizens much more secure than they are. For these pardoned rebels to blast of "forgiving" patriots for their "tyranny," is about the same as it would have been for a certain thief, who was pardoned years ago, to have demanded that his pardoner, after abdicating his throne in the thief's favor, should acknowledge that the command "Thou shalt not steal" was oppressive and tyrannical, before the thief would "forgive" his pardoner. I notice that some papers lament that Mr. Blaine has ruined his presidential prospects by his action in Congress; but I also notice that such papers are not the ones which give a staunch support to the principles for which the war was waged; so I guess Blaine can stand it if they can.

REBEL BRIGADIER-GENERALS

A SHELL IN THE MAGAZINE

EXPENDED FOR HEMP ROPE,

CONVICTION OF A BRUTE.

LePage is convicted and condemned. That is good. The evidence for the State, and the incidental disclosures of his previous doings, show him to be a monster who richly deserves many hangings even though he were innocent of the murder of Josie Langmaid. But one thing in the published reports of his trial struck me forcibly, from the contrast between the rulings of the New Hampshire court and the rulings of courts in other States under similar circumstances. I allude to the admission of the testimony of the ladies from Canada on which account a new trial is asked for, I believe. Neither justice nor common sense offer anything against the admission of such evidence; and if the law opposes it then the law is an idiotic fool, and needs overhauling right away. It might be unfair to a man on trial for horse-stealing, to introduce evidence to prove that he once set a house on fire; but there would be no unfairness in proving that he had stolen other horses. So with Le Page: the State was able to prove beyond a question that the scoundrel had previously assaulted, maimed and ravished women; such evidence was of great importance (not to the protection of the criminal and the encouragement of crime, to be sure,—which is all the law seems to aim to do, in many instances,—but to the finding of a just verdict by the jury,) and was very properly admitted, whatever the law may say about it. A similar case with a different ruling by the court recently occurred in Massachusetts, where one Piper was tried for enticing or carrying a little girl into the belfry of a church and there murdering her. At the trial several little girls were present to testify that Piper had at various times enticed them into the fatal belfry and taken improper liberties with them, the theory of the prosecution being that he had attempted the same thing with little Mabel Young, and murdered her when she cried out—a most probable theory, certainly; but their evidence was excluded on the ground that Piper was on trial for murder only, and not for any other crime—though their evidence must have had a direct bearing on the question of Piper's guilt of the crime he was being tried for. This over-nice care in ruling out of court as unjust and improper all evidence save such as will not tend to convict an accused person, has well-nigh made the law contemptible—neither feared by rogues nor relied on for protection by good citizens.

WHAT IT COSTS TO LIVE.

I have been reading the patent medicine advertisements in the papers, and am astonished when I reflect on two things, viz: that anybody will be so foolish as to die now-a-days, when infallible remedies abound for every disease on the list, from cataplasm to phlebotomy; and—more wonderful still—that the whole human race didn't go up (or down) millions of years ago, seeing they then had no patent medicines to keep 'em alive. I made a record of all the different medicines I must get, (according to the advertisements,) or else die right away with hundreds of diseases I never heard of before, much less felt; and I find that at twenty-five cents for each bottle or box, I shall have to invest $2281.75 before my life will be worth a day's purchase. I wouldn't mind it so much if all one had to do was to purchase the medicine, but it all has to be swallowed, and any man of taste would much rather die than do that. "Cut this out—it may save your life," is a favorite heading to some of the ads., and it is no doubt true—if only it leads you not to take the medicine.

DEAD-HEADS.

No more editorial passes over the New England railroads, I see. Good. No class of business men suffer so much from the dead-head system as newspaper men; and if they will only abolish it altogether, and insist on being paid for their work as other business men are paid, it will be much money in their pockets. Much of the very best advertising—"local" editorial notices—is never paid for, except (in the case of shows) by a few tickets of admission to some entertainment which perhaps the recipient does not care to attend, and even in these cases the gratis notices, if paid for at regular advertising rates, would enable the printer to pay for his own tickets and have left a bigger surplus than some railroads. Deadheadism was spoken against from a Portsmouth pulpit, some time ago. Very proper; but every newspaper man knows that the churches are the most extensive and persistent dead-headers on the columns of newspapers. [That's so.—Ed. Chron.] Notices of sermons, church meetings, festivals and jamborees "in aid of the church" are handed in for the local columns in generous profusion, but no idea that the printer is worthy being paid for his labor, time and outlay for materials, seems ever to enter the heads of church managers. Consistency, thou art a jewel! but it looks as though your owner didn't care to display you before the public to any great extent.

New Hampshire Fire Insurance Co.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of this corporation was held at the office of the company Tuesday, the 25th inst., and they re-elected the old Board of Directors and officers.

The New Hampshire Fire Insurance Company, of Manchester, was the first stock fire insurance company incorporated in the Granite State, and so far it is the only one. It possesses however a higher distinction. It was organized by a number of the most prominent business men of New Hampshire; men "whose names are household words," and they continue to the present time to direct its fortunes. Ex-Governor Straw is president; Ex-Governor Weston is vice-president; John C. French, one of the best practical underwriters, is secretary; and among the directors are President Currier, of the Amoskeag National Bank; Congressman Bell; Ex-Mayor Joseph B. Clark; Ex-Mayor Scripture, of Nashua; Hon. Geo. B. Chandler, cashier of the Amoskeag National Bank; C. E. Balch, cashier of the Manchester National Bank. These names are a guarantee to the people for the stability, careful management and permanency of this company. The annual statement shows an unprecedented success during the past year, notwithstanding the depression in general business affairs. The finance committee reported that the assets at the close of the year were $429,362 00; the receipts from premiums and interest, $198,087.40; the losses paid during the year $80,812.11; and two semi-annual dividends of four per cent. each paid to the stockholders.

The percentage of losses to receipts is remarkably small, and indicates great care and scrutiny in the selection of risks. Another test equally favorable to the company is the ratio of assets to liabilities. The cash assets reach $429,362.00, and the total liabilities $102,239,00, giving over four dollars of assets to pay each dollar of liability. With this record the New Hampshire Fire Insurance Company enters upon its seventh campaign and cannot fail to preserve the confidence and patronage of its old customers and win the business of a host of new ones. The dedication of the new hall of the Knights of Pythias, corner of Market and Daniel streets in this city, will take place this evening. The dedicatory exercises will be conducted by the Grand Officers, at the conclusion of which, an address will be delivered by a member of Damon Lodge. A banquet at Congress Hall will supplement the dedication, and doubtless a little dancing will follow. Supreme Chancellor S. S. Davis is expected to be present.

Last Friday was our only day of good sleighing for the Winter, thus far.

The fees of the Collector of the port of Portsmouth last year amounted to $839.16; commissions $171.04. At Newburyport, Collector Huse received $363.77 in fees, and $2312.99 for commissions, while $171 were allowed for storage.

Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, have in press and will soon issue Mrs. Oliphant's new novel, "An Odd Couple," printed from advance sheets; also "Married Beneath Him," by James Payn, in uniform style with "Lost Sir Massingberd," and "The Clyffards of Clyffe," by the same popular author, published by them.

Have you examined the splendid oil paintings advertised in Mr. Burleigh's Art Union? The distribution is to take place in a few days.

Schooner Eddie E. Minot, Captain James Burke, made quite a large haul of fish on Friday. Mr. Daniel Clark, one of the schooner's crew, while hauling his trawls brought to the surface a large ground shark estimated by the fishermen to weigh about twenty-five cwt. The monster was taken alongside the schooner and hooked on to, the crew then "bowsing on the burton" until the schooner heeled over as far as they dared to heel her, when the shark was not much more than one-half out of water. He was then cut open and a barrel of liver taken out, nearly as much more being left in the carcass, which the crew were obliged to cut away on account of approaching bad weather. From the size of the liver we imagine the fishermen's estimate of his weight is rather low; but what a lot of liver complaint that fellow could have stowed away!

Chief Engineer John W. Moore, U. S. N., is ordered to the navy yard at Washington. Assistant Paymaster Z. T. Brown is ordered to the iron clad Nantucket.

The following petit jurors from this city were drawn for the second and third weeks of the Circuit Court in session at Exeter: John Ellison, Oliver Adams, Amos Pearson, James W. Nutter, Elisha Tripp and George W. Plummer.

Schooner Mary Elizabeth, of this city, has been sold to William H. Davis, of Bristol, Me.

Steamer J. Todd, of Gloucester, which has been bringing stone from Gloucester for the new bridge at Dover, is loading ice at the Eastern Railroad wharf, for Star Island.

Mrs. Charles Sinclair of this city owns a mocking bird which sings two lines of "Molly Darling."

Citizens of Portsmouth desiring space for the exhibition of articles at the Centennial exhibition who have not yet obtained an allotment of space, may apply to the centennial committee of the Board of Trade, on or before Tuesday evening, February 2d. Persons having valuable relics of the Revolutionary times are requested to add them to the Portsmouth collection for exhibition, immediately. Proper care will be taken of all articles entrusted to the committee, and will be returned to their respective owners at the close of the exhibition.

T. E. O. MARVIN,
Chairman Com. Board of Trade.

The case of Elias P. Wentworth vs. Town of Stratham, for bodily injuries sustained on December 12th, 1872, while riding over the highway from Adams' Corner in Stratham to New Market Bridge, was on trial at the Circuit Court in Exeter on Friday, the plaintiff having appealed from the referee's award of $1000, to a trial by jury, their verdict givinghim $1400. Frink for plaintiff.

Death of Hon John Elwyn.

We announce this morning the death of Hon. John Elwyn, who departed this life, at his room in the Rockingham House on Sunday at eleven o'clock, A. M., at the age of seventy-six years, the immediate cause of his death being pneumonia, induced by carelessness in exposing himself in all weathers without taking any precaution against unfavorable results.

Mr. Elwyn was a native of Bristol, England, being born Feb. 2, 1803, of Portsmouth residents travelling in England. He resided here with slight intermissions throughout his life. He inherited large landed estates here, and has passed the same property—some eight hundred acres—to his heirs; except the incumbrance of a few leases of small lots recently made, and a lot set apart for a public mall. So far as we know, he was never engaged in any business; but has throughout his long life enjoyed his property, his leisure, and his books. He was never married. He was devotedly attached to the Protestant-Episcopal Church, and of late years at least was a constant attendant upon its ministrations. He has voted with the democratic party ever since it had an existence, and we think served in the legislature two years, and afterward was elected a member of Governor Page's Council, in 1838. He declined a re-election, and thereafter refused to hold office.

Mr. Elwyn was a kind and fast friend when ever he formed a friendship. He was charitable and benevolent, but chose to exercise his feelings in his own way, and to choose his subjects himself. In his dealings with his tenants and others, he was extremely liberal, but excessively indignant at any attempt to impose upon him.

Some years ago he decded to several gentlemen, as trustees for the people of Portsmouth, a tract of land on the hill at the southerly side of the South Mill Pond for a public mall; and had any steps been taken to improve that tract, he declared his willingness to add to it larger and more valuable lots. He was anxious to devote a portion of land adjoining Richards Avenue for the same purpose when the Cutts improvement was carried out, but the conditions imposed were such that the plan could not be adopted nor the land accepted.

Mr. Elwyn was a lover of books; he bought a great many, and generally gave them away as soon as read. He had the tastes of a scholar and a gentleman, and the means to gratify them. He published two or more books for his own library, refusing to allow others to have copies, and insisting on the destruction of printer's proofs. One of the works was a volume of original and selected Spanish poems, Mr. Elwyn being a master of that and other languages. He was very eccentric in dress and manners, and a thorough aristocrat in feeling. At church, he was excessively independent, as elsewhere, sitting while the congregation stood, frequently, and standing while they sat. He had a great appreciation of ceremony descending from ancient and established forms, and a thorough contempt for the wi-dom of later years; enjoyed keenly discussion on ancient matters and never spared his opponents' opinions while expressing sententiously his own. He was a noted pedestrian, believed religiously in the motto: "Mind your own business," and viewed with disdain the building of railroads and like enterprises, remarking that "once all New Hampshire was a beautiful park which modern improvements had ruined."

As a Hebrew scholar he had no superior, and was a walking encyclopedia of knowledge. His quaintness was a matter of general notice and he was emphatically as much a relic of the old school as are the numerous ancient buildings which are pointed out to strangers as landmarks of the Revolution. He was esteemed and respected by all people, and every citizen will miss the familiar form which for more than a half century strode along our streets. Although he had but few intimate friends, every citizen will feel a personal loss by his demise, that can be explained by the respect silently and half unconsciously accorded to him as a citizen who while living seemed an inseparable adjunct of society.

Free Speech Denied.

Mr. Arthur Develin, the lecturer on Romanism, was very anxious to test his right to free speech here, after being mobbed in Dover. Hiring the Temple for Thursday evening, he obtained an audience of about forty persons, some of whom paid their admittance for the purpose of contradicting his statements, which they did freely. The police expelled two of them from the building, a crowd of several hundred people having gathered in the expectation of mobbing him. Most of them had, however, dispersed before the close of the lecture, but the police force escorted him from the Hall. Mr. Develin made arrangements to speak again at the same place on Sunday evening, but on Saturday Mr. Stavers, the owner and manager of the Temple, was notified by City Marshal Marden that the city would not be responsible for any damage to property were any trouble to result, the protection afforded at Mr. Develin's first lecture having cost the city eight dollars. Mr. Stavers then notified Mr. Develin that he could not have the Hall. Although Mr. Develin is reported to be an excitable and abusive lecturer by his enemies, the pitiable failure to protect free speech is a crushing commentary on the beauties of democratic ascendency. We have no sympathy with the conduct of Mr. Develin. If the country is in danger from the plottings of Roman Catholic agents, his manner of opposing it is too virulent and his talk too intemperate to help the matter, just as the pouring of kerosene on a flame is not the speediest way of checking a conflagration. Mr. Develin should, however, have the right of free speech accorded him, as it should be accorded to any other man, and the city government is legally bound to protect life and property. No one was obliged to listen to him, and we have no doubt that the lawless men who worked themselves into a passion while listening to his diatribes and denunciation, attended his lecture for the purpose of mobbing him. That such an element of our population should dictate the action of officials sworn to fulfil their duties is very unfortunate and to be regretted by all thinking men, but it seems an inseparable condition of things that the democracy who depend so largely on this element for success should cater to it even to the extent of failing to do justice to the public or to any individual claiming the rights that every one should possess. The plea made is that Mr. Develin is crazy, but if crazy he is certainly harmless, and it isn't always safe to make "martyrs" of crazy people, who are liable to suffer less than the sane by any act of injustice.

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Billiousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon secured some for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden. Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and for Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I had purchased by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I am as well as ever I expect to be. My health has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have taken away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills at a time and anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this phrase find $1.35 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaints for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing me to bend like a bow and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for words, at least, ten dollars a bottle, finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight pills I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in my whole system. It will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammatory Rheumatism and Consumption, and I wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think the medicine proves a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Troubles, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute to your medicine. I have two tri-ds in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, on a far grander scale than ever before seen on this or the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and is expected to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the first six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great issues to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the adjustment of the national mean as the year may mark the crisis of one, and in religion it promises to mark a great revival, and perhaps some important decisions of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In industry and commerce, undoubtedly, business interests or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will in unison with the old fervor and patriotic business principles of 1861 it was the champion at through the American conflict, and is will re-ho whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what is held good and right, and condemn what is either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure honest men, administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from politicians, and a sound currency, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pen sylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be as clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to its equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere partisanship, is that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of their worst men and most vicious measures and to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have in all within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a more lofty purpose, and to a higher duty, that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the innumerable attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From the above it will be seen that a journal adaptable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the kind and high favor so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1873 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has kept this position by its closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh news, the most reliable information, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the country, and many of its outside contributors is numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxurious climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

THE BELL OF SAINT JOHN'S.

In a large and smoky foundry close by the wharves in the town of B——, a gang of workmen were getting ready to cast the largest bell of the St. John's Cathedral chime. Only an hour more, and they would let the glaring, bubbling metal flow from the huge furnace into the mold which was buried deep in the black earth close by.

It was just at evening, and, in the gathering twilight, the lurid blue flames that burst from the top of the tall chimney, flashed unearthly gleams upon the neighboring windows and house-tops.

The scene within the foundry was weird and almost awful. The swarthy forms of the workmen, partly lighted by the yellow glare, moved about like Tartarian shades, and the sooty beams and ponderous chains, crossing half black, half golden, under the golden roof, recalled the engines of Cyclops under Mt. Ætna.

The clock struck six. It was time for supper. All the men threw down their tools, and ran and put on their outer clothing.

"Be back in half an hour, sharp!" cried the foremaster. "We shall make the cast at a quarter of seven."

"All right, sir!" cried the men in response.

"I hear some of the town folks are coming down to see the work," said one.

"Yes," said another, "and it'll be something to open their eyes. There was never such a bell cast in the whole State as this one will be."

In a moment more only one workman and the master were left in the foundry. The former was to stay and watch the "blast." He had brought a double allowance of dinner, and he would make a supper of what remained.

"Perhaps we can get the 'inventor' to stay with you, George," said the master, laughing, as he prepared to go.

"Yes, where is he?" returned the man in the same jesting tone.

"He's been around the works long enough to know when anything goes wrong. Hollo? hollo! I say! Where's the 'inventor?' Come here. Ah, there he is." And in silent answer to the summons a shock-haired fellow, with large gray eyes, and a pale, vacant face, appeared from behind a pile of castings. He had on his back a gray shirt, much soiled with dust, and he wore a pair of huge pantaloons, held up by a single suspender.

"Well, Moques," quoth the man George, slapping him rather roughly on the shoulder; "suppose you've got wit enough to help yell if anything's the matter?"

The young fellow looked stupidly around and nodded his head.

"Then sit here and look at that furnace, and don't take your eyes off."

The poor lad smiled meekly and did as was ordered, just as an obedient dog would have lain down to watch his owner's coat.

A queer fellow was this "Moques;" stupid enough in ordinary things to need a world of watching, but withal wonderfully fit to watch a furnace. He knew all the workings of the foundry by what seemed a sort of brute instinct, though really his strange sagacity in this was a remnant of a once bright mind.

If anything happened, or went in an unusual way, he would always notice it, and say what ought to be done, though he could not tell perhaps, why it ought to be done.

Two years before he had been an intelligent, promising lad. He was the son of a designer connected with the foundry company, and had always been allowed free access to the shops, and to mingle with the men and watch the work. But one day a great lifting chain broke, with its load, and an iron fragment struck him on the head, inflicting a serious injury. From this he partially recovered, and only partially, for his reason was impaired. But his natural love for machinery and mechanical experiments remained, and as he regained his bodily strength, he spent most of his time making small wheels and shafts, and putting together old contrivances, which he would exhibit with immense pride and satisfaction.

The peculiar trait in the young fellow gained for him the humorous title of "inventor." All the men felt a great kindness for him, even though their manner toward him was occasionally harsh and impatient.

Such was the person left to help watch the great blast for the casting of the king bell of the chime of St. John's. Faithfully he kept his place before the furnace, while the man George sat down at a little distance and began his supper. Doubtless the latter intended to keep a general oversight, but he certainly made the inventor's eyes do the most of the looking. Whether he felt a kind of reckless trust in the instinct of his half-witted companion, or indolently concluded that nothing wrong could happen, he was sadly to blame for charging himself so little with the important duty before him.

Not a word was said by either watcher, and only the deep roar of the furnace was heard through the vast foundry.

George finished his supper, and sauntered into one of the tool shops to find his pipe. "Inventor" sat alone before the great blast. The one rational faculty of his feeble mind enabled him to comprehend what it meant, and even something of the magnitude of the enterprise that was ripening inside those burning walls. He knew that the furnace was full of valuable metal, and that close beside him, buried out of sight in the deep sand, was the huge mold, so soon to be filled with the precious cast. He knew and could see that all the chanuels for the flow of the fiery liquid were ready, and that near the mouth of the furnace stood the long iron rod that was to be used when the moment came to let on the molten stream.

All this his limited thoughts took in by habit. Dimly conscious that something was soon to be done, he sat with his eyes on the furnace absorbed and intent.

Suddenly something startled him. There was a sight noise, and a burning crack appeared near the top of the furnace. Then another crack, and a scorching brick fell out and rolled to the ground at his feet.

The lad opened his mouth to shriek, but so terrified was he that the sounds stuck in his throat, as if he had been in a fit of nightmare.

A thin red stream followed the fallen brick, and trickled down the furnace side like running lava. Then came another alarming noise, and a thin gap half way down the masonry let out more of the hissing metal.

Where was George? Was the unfaithful fellow still hunting for his pipe? The furnace was bursting with only a poor, half-idiot lad to guard it.

What could he do? He did what perhaps a lad in his right mind would not have dared to do. Rushing to the mouth of the furnace, he seized the long iron rod that stood near, and tapped the vent. One desperate thrust with a sharp point up the terrible funnel—a few quick prying strokes. Stand back now. The confining clay fell away, and the yellow-white flood spurted out with resistless force. It leaped into the clay-lined troughs, and hissed its way, foaming down to the mouth of the bell-mold.

The "fool" had done a deed worthy of a general on the field of battle.

Was it too late? Every moment new fissures opened in the doomed furnace. Some of the upper stones toppled over. Still the metal poured out into the mold. But the waste was great from those gaping flaws. The pressure was relieved by the open vent, but the leaks multiplied continually. It was art running a race with ruin.

Poor "Moquos" stood powerless before the coming catastrophe. His knees knocked together and his head swam. A great heap of red hot bricks and rubbish fell at his feet. He had barely thought to get out of the way and save his life. He heard a wild shout of human voices in the distance, then an awful roar behind him, and he saw and felt himself pursued by surges of seething fire. Sharp, blistering pains pierced his flesh at a hundred points. The rest was all a horrible, unintelligible dream. It was as if he had suddenly sunk into the earth and had been swallowed up forever.

By seven o'clock comparative quiet reigned again on the scene of the disaster. Ruins lay everywhere. The engines had quenched the flames that had caught the building, and the men, blackened with smoke, stood in silent groups around the remains of the furnace. It had fallen to pieces and nothing was left but heaps of steaming rubbish.

Poor "Inventor," who had been found with the tapping-rod in his hands, lying on his face in the sand, frightfully burned, had been carried to his home.

Little was said, but the few words spoken uttered with no mild emphasis the natural wrath of the master and hands against the man George, whose excuses for himself only exaggerated his offence.

"See what he's done," said they, a few days later, as they stood in the half-burned foundry. "Five thousand dollars gone to waste in a minute! The best job in twenty years spoiled! The rascal, to go hunting for his pipe, and leave that stuttering idiot to watch! Is that all he can say for himself? Out upon such carelessness! Why, the boy didn't even know enough to bawl out when he must have seen the furnace tumbling to pieces!"

The master, who had more at stake than the men, of course felt the loss more keenly than they. He almost wept with mingled grief and rage. Suddenly something peculiar caught his eye among the debris, and he cried out in a startled voice.

"Hallo! What's this! what's this!"

He snatched up a fragment of one of the troughs which had led from the mold. There were traces of the stream of bronze still running in it. Then the possible meaning of the iron found in the injured boy's hand flashed upon him.

"Bring me a shovel, quick!" he shouted.

A spade was put into his hands, and he began nervously to heave away the hot mass that lay piled over the bell mold. It was a Herculean task, but he worked like a giant, and three or four of his men took hold and helped him.

Brick bats, ore, slag, and ashes flew in every direction. Presently the master's spade penetrated the sand and struck something hard. He stooped down. Then he leaped up like one half frantic, and plying his spade with redoubled energy, tore away the remaining sand, disclosing what looked like a great metallic ring.

"Men," he cried out, lifting his flushed face, "the bell is cast!"

"Who did this?" asked every excited voice, as soon as the cheering died away.

"Come with me, two or three of you!" cried the master. "I think I know who did it. It's a miracle!"

They hurried away to the home of the half-witted boy. The attendant met them with his finger on his lips.

"The poor boy is in a brain fever," said he.

"Does he say anything in his delirium?" whispered the master.

"Oh, yes, he raves all the time about the big bell mold. 'I hope it will fill—I hope it will fill,' he says."

The men exchanged glances. It was indeed true. The idiot had cast the great bell of St. John's. Just then the physician came out. "Perhaps he will recover his reason by this shock and sickness," he said. "Such things have happened."

"Do you think so? Pray heaven he may!" solemnly ejaculated the master and his men; and turned away deeply moved.

Two months later the great bell hung from a huge derrick in the lathe room of the factory, and beneath it stood a truck upon which it was to be lowered. A silence fell upon the group of workmen as the pale face and feeble form of "Inventor" appeared, borne on a small reclining chair. He had recovered his reason, and was fast getting back his strength. His large gray eyes instantly fastened themselves on the bell, that splendid masterpiece, whose making meant so much for him. They had told him the whole story of the casting, and the disaster in the foundry, but it sounded like a wild romance to him.

"I remember nothing that happened," said he, shaking his head with a smile. "It's new to me; all new and strange—so strange!"

"Yes," said the master devoutly; "it was God's hand."

Every eye turned upon the invalid. Some of the men felt almost afraid. It was so much like a resurrection to have him there among them, the boy they had known so long underwitted, now a young man, keen, intelligent, as if changed into another being.

"I should like to strike the bell once." Two men lifted him up and put a small hammer in his hand.

He struck one gentle blow. A deep, sweet, mournful tone, solemn as the sound of distant waterfalls, rolled from the great bell and echoed through the foundry. Tears filled the eyes of the rough men as they heard it.

"Ah!" said the master, "there's a hallelujah in that, and it may well begin here. Long may this bell praise God! He saved it in the ruins of the furnace by one wise thought in the ruins of a human brain. Our furnace has been rebuilt, and behold, this dear boy has his reason again! This bell and the boy shall glorify God together.

"Amen!" murmured the listeners.

Then the great bell was lowered, and as the truck was rolled away with its melodious burden, the boy was lifted and carried after it, and both went out into the sunny day together, the rough men standing in the doorways waving their hands.

"Little Inventor" afterward well proved his claim to the title so lightly given him in his unfortunate boyhood. His name is now read on many a bell whose matchless richness of tone his genius and skill in metals alone created.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from the speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

The republicans of the sixth Senatorial district have nominated Woodbury L. Melcher, Esq., of Laconia, as their candidate. The nomination is one of the best yet made in the State and will strengthen the ticket. Mr. Melcher is largely interested in the banking interests of Belknap county, and is one of the half-dozen plucky republican leaders who resolved a year ago that the town of Laconia had been long enough in the hands of the democracy and should be redeemed—and then went and did it!

A Great Falls firm, which failed recently, offered the creditors eight cents on a dollar.

The actual amount embezzled from the National Granite State Bank three years ago by the then cashier, Shute, has been ascertained to be $97,000. On the first day of May following the bank made an assessment of 60 per cent., to make its capital good. The ensuing July dividend was passed but since that date the bank has paid ten per cent. per annum, besides taxes and expenses.

Edgar Wheeler of Fisherville has been arrested for committing assaults on young girls at Concord. He has a wife and one child.

The idea of Ben Butler as Moulton's counsel, cross-examining Mr. Beecher, causes cold chills to run down the average Plymouth spine. Being struck by a pile-driver and run through a sausage machine would be child's play compared to it.—Bos. Globe.

T. J. Lasier, formerly of the Claremont Eagle, has obtained a clerkship in the Naval Bureau of Construction and Repairs, at Washington.

Tilton's daughters side with him in the difference between him and their mother. He insisted that they should call upon their mother, New Year's, and take gifts to her; but suspecting they came at his instance, she refused to see them. Mrs. Tilton is very bitter, and I can't blame her. She is the chief sufferer in this miserable affair. She is wretchedly poor, and has a hard time to live.—New York Letter.

The Post thinks that the election of Daniel Marcy as Governor of New Hampshire would be a sign of progress. So it would, about the same as if the Post should go back and print itself on a Ramage press.—Lowell Courier.

Mrs. John West, mother in-law of Hon. E. H. Rollins, died at her residence in Concord, on Thursday evening, aged eighty-three years and ten months. She was the daughter of Gen. John Montgomery of Haverhill, and was a woman of rare executive ability, and of literary turn of mind. It is said that she could repeat Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake" and "Marmion" with great accuracy, and it was a favorite literary amusement for her to commit to memory and recite poetry.

A Chicago special says that there is more excitement in the whiskey ring, the United States grand jury returning indictments against eleven of the distillers whose places were seized during the last raids in December. The bail of each was fixed at $5000.

On Saturday, a resident of Greenpoint, L. I., found the head of Wm. W. Simmons, of Derby, Conn., in a ship yard. Simmons had been missing since Thursday. Victor Kretz, an intimate friend of the murdered man, on being examined told lies that led to a suspicion that he might be the murderer. A watchman was found who remembered seeing a man resembling Kretz about the dock on Saturday morning. Kretz, while being conveyed to the police station, purposely cut his hand. It bled freely and he kept rubbing it on his pants. When this was observed, an examination of his clothing was made, which revealed a large spot of dried blood on his pants. The detectives then visited his house again and found his trunk locked and nailed together so tightly that it was opened with great difficulty. In this they found packed the legs and arms of the murdered victim, and in the boiler they found the trunk of the body skinned and cut up; the entrails had been removed and quick lime put inside so as to cause speedy decomposition. There had been a pool of blood on the floor, but efforts had been made to obliterate it by scraping until the boards were almost white. Upon the dress of Mrs. Kretz, which had just been washed, were stains of blood. She said she scraped the floor at the request of her husband; that Simmons called at the house on Thursday night, and they all had drink together, Simmons' drinks being made stronger than those of the others, and that when he was stupefied with liquor Kretz took a hatchet and chopped his head off; the act was witnessed by his little step-daughter. Mrs. Kretz said that she herself was then up stairs. When Kretz heard the body was discovered, he admitted his guilt and said he had done it because he had found the victim in criminal intercourse with his wife; but this Mrs. Kretz denies. The murder was, no doubt, committed for robbery, as Simmons was known always to have money on his person. The prisoner was also found in possession of Simmons' watch, and the little girl says her father took three dollars and some cents from the pockets of the murdered man. Mrs. Kretz was taken to the station-house and confined in a separate cell. The prisoner is an Alsatian by birth, and speaks both French and German. He is about forty years of age.

The Davenport Democrat says it is a foregone conclusion, almost, that the legislature will restore the death penalty for murder in Iowa.

Judge Van Cott, Mrs. Moulton's counsel, says that he will not make any response to Mr. Beecher; if a minister of the Gospel was inclined to make a "holy-bully" of himself, and be guilty of so purely beastly a speech as Beecher had made in responding to his letter to his client, he (Van Cott) would decline to present any rejoinder, for the reason that it is beneath his notice. Capt. Duncan has sent in his resignation as a member of Plymouth Church, and the other members of his family, to the number of six, have followed his example because they cannot conscientiously belong to a church in the pastor of which they have no confidence.

Republican journals of Ohio are dropping Gov. Hayes' name to the second place on the national ticket and putting Mr. Blaine's first.

In New York, U. S. bonds are strong and generally a fraction higher. There are large orders in the market from banks, insurance and trust companies. We hear of one insurance company (life) which has been working to get a line of $2,000,000 and have succeeded in the past two weeks in getting a little over $1,200,000. We also hear of a large discount bank which is still buying, having within a week taken between $350,000 and $450,000. These circumstances throw light on the character and demand for this class of securities.

The following is the union republican Congressional committee as agreed upon at the republican caucus: Alabama, Representative Chas. Hayes; Arkansas, Senator S. W. Dorsey; California, Senator A. A. Sargent; Florida, Senator S. B. Conover; Illinois, John A. Logan; Indiana, Representative M. C. Hunter; Iowa, Representative Jas. Wilson; Kansas, Rep. W. A. Phillips; Kentucky, Rep. Jno. D. White; Louisiana, Rep. J. R. West; Maine, Rep. Eugene Hale; Massachusetts, Rep. Henry L. Pierce; Michigan, Rep. Jay A. Hubbell; Minnesota, Rep. H. P. Strait; Mississippi, Sen. Jas. L. Alcorn; Nebraska, Sen. P. W. Hitchcock; Nevada, Rep. Wm. Woodburn; New Hampshire, Sen. A. H. Cragin; New Jersey, Rep. C. H. Sinnickson; New York, Rep. Thos. C. Platt; North Carolina, Rep. Jno. A. Hyman; Ohio, Rep. Chas. Foster; Oregon, Sen. Jno. H. Mitchell; Pennsylvania, Sen. Simon Cameron; Rhode Island, Rep. L. W. Ballou; South Carolina, Rep. A. S. Wallace; Tennessee, Rep. Jacob W. Thornbury; Texas, Sen. Morgan Hamilton; Vermont, Rep. C. H. Joyce; Virginia, Rep. Wm. H. H. Stowell; Wisconsin, Rep. J. M. Rusk. Territories—Idaho, Delegate Thos. W. Bennett; Dakota, Delegate J. P. Tilden; New Mexico, Delegate S. B. Elkins; Washington, Delegate Orange Jacobs.

Two sporting men have hired James Blanchard, alias Charlie Ross, who created such a sensation at St. Albans a few weeks ago, and propose to exhibit him through the country.

An Indiana editor says spring is approaching because he saw two snakes recently. But when an Indiana editor sees snakes it is a stronger sign of a fall than spring.—Norristown Herald.

The Washington correspondent of the Detroit News writes of Congressman Townsend, whose speech has pleased our readers so much: Martin Townsend's speech made a good many laugh. It was no doubt a very "palpable hit." Townsend is an old codger from Troy, N. Y.; and his snow-white head is a very conspicuous object from the galleries. He is a lawyer by profession, but runs a stock farm out West, and looks like a plous drover. He is a square built man of about medium stature, with a large, cube-shaped, dogged-type of a head. Hair white and rather closely cropped. No whiskers; face broad and cheery, and rather pinky in color. He might be classed (in the absence of Elisha and the bears) as an "old buffer;" indisputably one of the "hard heads;" but is said to be a most companionable and worthy old gentleman. When speaking he teters a good deal on his feet, and emphasizes his points with an indescribable wiggle; and after a shot is fired, he comically clasps his hands over his bosom and placidly awaits for the effect to subside. Sometimes he enlarges the effect by spreading his chest, and sticking his thumbs in the arm holes of his vest. Quotes Scripture plentifully, and looks as though at one period of his life he might have been a Baptist deacon. He is not much on an argument, but is good on "drives;" and is a fellow who will draw a good house whenever he again speaks.

What a howl there would be if President Grant and Secretary Bristow should delay the prosecution of the whiskey ring, as Gov. Tilden and Mr. Fairchild are delaying the trials of the canal ring thieves, and what a shout there'd be in all the democratic papers of the land for the impeachment of the President and his secretary.—Troy Times.

U. S. Senator elect Kirkwood, of Iowa, has the honor of having been twice elected to his responsible post although he has never taken a seat. After his first election the legislature discovered that their election of United States Senator was held one week too soon, and that its legality might therefore be brought in question, so on the following Tuesday the election was held a second time with the same result as before.

Speaker Kerr has written a letter to J. H. Reall, of Philadelphia, in which he says it is not his desire that his name shall be used in connection with the National ticket, this year. He recommends Mr. Hendricks as the most available and best democratic candidate for President.

The steamship "Alaska" has brought to San Francisco fifteen car loads of material for Japanese houses to be erected on the exposition grounds. Ten Japanese carpenters accompany the wood, which is in the main bamboo. It is already prepared in a great measure; all the hewing, the dressing, etc., has been done, and no labor remains for the carpenters excepting the task of finishing the material and putting the frames together. Several styles of houses will be on exhibition. They are entirely devoid of nails.

The statement is authorized by parties personally cognizant of the facts that Bristow has agreed to support Morton for the Presidential nomination, and will not be a candidate himself under any circumstances.

Mr. R. F. Doten, a member of the Paris, Me., Flouring Mill Company firm, has eloped with Mrs. Skillings of Paris, the wife of his partner. She left home Thursday night and met Mr. Doten, and they at once started for New York. Mr. Skillings has received a letter from Doten in which he gives a full account of how the business of the firm was left. She drew $3300 from the Canal Bank before she started, but this is not the amount of his interest in the firm. Mr. Doten formerly resided at Paris, but since last spring has had charge of a branch office for the firm in that city. Mrs. Skillings has always borne an excellent reputation, and the elopement causes great excitement.

After for years heaping contumely on the ladies' fashions, such as their wearing of big lumps of false hair on their heads and French heeled boots on their feet, and growling as much at their tight-fitting pullbacks as he formerly did at their huge hoops—and with exactly as much effect—the man of the period puts on an "ulster" and fancies he looks about the correct thing. Consistency, etc.

The population of Texas has increased 33 per cent. in five years.

A bill has been introduced into the Pennsylvania legislature making it a penal offence to "point" a pistol or gun or any firearm at a person, whether in jest or in earnest. What'll the newspapers do "for didn't know it was loaded" items?

Charlie Ross has been discovered again, at Tiffin, Ohio.

Congressman Jones' private secretary, Chas. H. Smith, has been waiting ever since the House organized for Mr. James Clayton's clerkship. When Clayton was removed, however, Mr. Barclay, the veteran clerk of twenty-eight years' standing, resigned, and Smith was called to do his duty. "Parley" writes the Boston Journal: "The bouncing of the veteran officers of the House will not expedite business, and to-day, after the opening prayer, the journal of yesterday's proceedings could not be read, simply because it had not been written up by Mr. Smith, who has the place so long occupied by Mr. Barclay. How different from the Senate wing of the Capitol, where an avowed democrat, who sympathized with Andrew Johnson, has been left undisturbed in the place which he held when the republicans came into power in 1861, and where at least a dozen other democrats hold offices.

The Western democrats urge a restoration of the income tax on all incomes over five thousand dollars, and a gradual abolition of the national banking system.

The Baptist church at Chester was burned Sunday afternoon, just after the services were closed. The fire took from the furnace. The building was ten years old, was worth about $5000, and was not insured.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS TO-DAY.

Personal Notice.
A Lady Sold at Henderson's.
Oil Paintings at Auction.

Jottings.

Mr. Israel P. Miller has returned to editorial labor on this paper.

On Sunday evening, shortly after nine o'clock, a man was seen to jump over a fence from Alderman Hennessey's yard at the foot of State street and run out to and up Daniel street in great haste. A few minutes afterward a little boy discovered that Mr. Hennessey's barn was on fire, an alarm was given, and the neighbors succeeded in extinguishing it without calling the fire department. An extensive conflagration would have resulted had the flames got under good headway, as there are several old barns and sheds in close vicinity to the one set on fire. The fires that have occurred in that vicinity for a year or two past seem to be the work of a determined fire bug, who should be shot on sight when caught in his fiendish work.

Among the curiosities of old-time news we find in the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE of Feb. 17, 1807, the following among the list of marriages: "In Philadelphia, Mr. Moses Coffin, to Miss Caroline Graves—This may literally be termed, a dead match!!"

On Wednesday last a gentleman of color made his appearance in Valley Falls, R. I. He pretended to represent a colored church in this city, and was soliciting subscriptions in its aid. He had for credentials an ordination certificate signed by Rev. Dr. Bosworth of Massachusetts and others, and letters of commendation from Rev. Mr. Jones of Bristol, and Rev. Mr. Sampson of Newton, Mass., which, with his honest appearance, served to completely win the confidence of some benevolent people. He had been collecting for the church in Central Falls, Pawtucket and other places in Rhode Island, obtaining considerable money from clergymen and others as well as securing their indorsement. Two days later another genteelly dressed colored man turned up as a solicitor for the same church, presenting the same book of certificates and credentials generally, but knowing nothing of the first-named. The church had changed its location, however from New Hampshire to Rhode Island, and such was the mixed up and suspicious character of the whole affair, that collector No. 2 was dismissed with the injunction to buy a ticket at once for Brazil or Holland.

The York county (Me.) tax for 1876, according to the estimate of the county commissioners, will be $25,000. This is $5000 less than in 1875, and $10,000 less than from 1870 to 1874.

The Times says: Owing to a bodily affliction, which at times was acute, Mr. Elwyn was obliged to seek relief by constantly rising and sitting, this alone, rather than any eccentricity, causing him to be nearly always moving while attending divine worship. * * * The deceased has a brother, Dr. Alfred Elwyn, residing in Philadelphia, and a sister, Mrs. Col. Irving of New York, and two nephews. His mother was the only daughter of Gov. Langdon and his father, Thomas Elwyn, a native of Kent, England. He left a will. * * * His birth in England occurred in this singular way: His parents were in France just previous to his birth, and his mother declaring that she never would be the mother of a Frenchman, a small vessel was engaged to convey the expectant parents across the Straits to England. The coast was guarded by the French fleet and a passage from France to England was then almost impossible to be obtained. The admiral in command had, while at Portsmouth, enjoyed the hospitalities of Mrs. Elwyn's father, Gov. Langdon, and at once granted the necessary permission to pass the lines of the fleet.

Only 335 days more, girls.

The Sunday evening meeting of the Reform Club was held at Mechanics' Hall. Mr. Nathaniel K. Raynes made an earnest and able address of half an hour, and was followed by other speakers. The hall was crowded and many went away who could not gain entrance. Should the interest continue it will be necessary to secure a larger hall for the meetings.

Ye Silhouette.

Mr. Joseph L. Harlow, who is achieving fame in silhouette pictures, is the only person we hear of who practices the art. In 1807, however, it was a recognized business, regularly advertised. We find in the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, bearing date Feb. 3d of that year, a five-inch advertisement surmounted by profile cuts similar in looks on paper to those which Mr. Harlow produces in plaster. The advertisement reads as follows:

Correct Profile Likenesses taken in a new and elegant style.

DAVID HUBBARD,

RESPECTFULLY informs the Ladies and Gentlemen of Portsmouth that he has taken a room at Mr. Dustels, second house west of the bell tavern, where he will stay a few weeks, for taking Profile Likenesses, if meeting with liberal encouragement. Those Ladies and Gentlemen who wish to have their Profiles taken in a new and elegant manner, may now improve the opportunity, and perhaps the only one they will ever have.—For cutting in paper and hair finished, 25 cents; also, done in gold and painted on glass at different prices. He constantly keeps a handsome assortment of frames suitable for the Profiles, with elegant gilt glasses.

SECRETS OF THE SANCTUM.

"Macaulay," the New York correspondent of the Rochester Democrat, furnishes the following interesting gossip concerning New York newspaper men:

The Herald in former days was in no small degree under Roman Catholic editorship. Old Bennett, though a scoffer at all forms of religion, had a liking for the faith in which he had been educated, and he gave a good chance to those who maintained it. Among these was John Mullaby, who was an able writer, and since then have come Tom Connery, managing editor, and Flynn, the city editor, both of the same class. What is remarkable is that one of the leading minds now at work on the Herald is a genuine Methodist, being the first time a man of this persuasion has got an important berth on that paper. I refer to Charles Nordhoff, who is not only Washington correspondent but also, when in this city, assists in editorial writing. Mr. Nordhoff wrote a very careful and interesting sketch of the Moody and Sankey meetings in the Brooklyn rink and this was the longest religious article that ever appeared in the Herald. Mr. Nordhoff has, in cooperation with John R. Young given tone and dignity to the Herald, and Mr. Bennett has shown good judgment in selecting such a high order of talent. Nordhoff is remarkable for writing the largest, coarsest, and most clumsy hand of any member of the press. It is not as illegible as that in which Greeley used to conceal his ideas but it is much rougher in appearance. Nordhoff will use up more paper in an article of given size than any other writer in this city. There has been a kindly feeling between Nordhoff and John R. Young for many years. When Young made his explanation to the public after Dana's attack upon him, it appeared in the columns of the Evening Post, of which Nordhoff was then manager. The removal of the Post establishment to the corner of Fulton street and Broadway brings it within a few doors of the Herald, and thus Mr. Nordhoff is near his old employers. It was on the Post that he first reached editorial distinction and won a name which has since then grown in importance.

How editorials are written affords a curious and amusing range of observation. Horace Greeley was so intense in his powers of abstraction that he could write while others were talking to him. It could not be said that he carried on a conversation, but if anything was uttered that required a reply he could give it. In this manner the bores were entertained until their patience was exhausted, and then they departed. Bennett, senior, on the other hand, kept himself very close and allowed no intruders. While writing he required solitude, and if the door of his den was opened he would slam it in the visitor's face. This habit grew upon him as the paper increased in importance. Another reason for his keeping close was his liability to severe castigation, which was inflicted nine times during the course of his newspaper life. He was led to create the editorial council some years after the Herald was established, and it has been maintained until the present time. At one o'clock the leading men assemble, and for an hour discuss the matters of the day. A course of policy is decided on, and each man takes his theme, on which he writes an article which is to be as brief as the nature of the subject will admit. This system is a feature peculiar to the Herald; but this paper indeed has always differed from any other institution of the kind, though of late years it has conformed more accurately to the best standard of journalism. A very serviceable writer on the Herald is Mr. Chamberlain, who has had much experience in journalism, and indeed is one of the veterans of the profession.

Montgomery Schuyler, the manager of the World, is of fine personal appearance, and has maintained his difficult position with great success. The day editor, Mr. Wilson, has for a young man had a wide variety of experience. He was a theological student at a first-class seminary, and subsequently, being a good phonographer, he reported the Surratt trial for some of the New York press. He went then to New York and was invited to his present position on the World. He is probably the youngest day editor in the city. Mr. O'Conner, formerly of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, is also engaged on the World, and has the important field of state politics. William H. Hurlburt is one of the oldest members of the staff and has as wide a reputation as any journalist in the city. His classic style and his powers of sarcasm have given him a well-deserved distinction. The care which Mr. Marble has manifested in selecting the very best talent is evident. The World is noted for the elegance of its editorials. Mr. Hurlburt is a Southerner, and has reached a little more than middle age. He is unmarried, unless it be to his profession, and lives up town in handsome bachelor life. Many of his articles are written at the Manhattan club, of which he has long been a prominent member. At this institution Mr. Marble meets the prominent politicians of the day, and having a telegraphic line to the office he can maintain constant communication with the working editors. Mr. Hurlburt's leaders are sent down in time for the next issue, but he frequently comes down and does his writing in the office.

As I have been referring to the method in which different writers produce their editorials, I may go on to say that one of the peculiarities which marks Mr. Hurlburt is his habit of writing a number of articles at once. It is his custom to begin a subject, write a page, and then another and write a page. When this is done a third article will be started, and when the bottom of the page is reached he may begin the first article and go the rounds, or he may begin on a fourth subject. These pages are, as soon as written, given to the copy boy, who takes them to the compositor, and Mr. Hurlburt presumes that the latter will know enough to get the slips properly connected, for they have no heading or any mark of identity, except the subject. This peculiarity once occasioned a very peculiar blunder. Hurlburt came in one day and began an article on the pleasures of youth and sent out one page. He then began another on the elbows of the Mincio, in which he discussed the fortifications of that famous spot with all its military detail. These, with other matters, were sent to the compositor, who, being ignorant of the writer's method and having no guiding mark, set them up in the wrong connection. The blunder escaped the proof-reader's observation and the next morning the article appeared beginning with a paragraph on the elbows of Mincio, and closing with another on the flowery pleasures of youth. Some humorous criticisms were expressed by the press, and Hurlburt was of course annoyed. He cut up the column, and pasting the paragraphs in their proper connection, the reading was accurate. As Mr. Hurlburt indulges in the eccentricities of genius, he must pay the penalty, and such mistakes are inseparable from them.

A lady bought a dollar's worth of Dry Goods, in my Store and got for a Present a four-pound Bar of Soap. Strengthening the Hold on Life.

Life is dear to most, if not all of us, and those whose tenure of it is rendered uncertain by feeble health, would gladly strengthen their hold upon existence. The best advice that can be given to the debilitated is to invigorate with that sovereign vitalizer, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which fertilizes the blood by ensuring complete nutrition, and is an excellent remedy for those maladies which are the main causes of physical weakness. Indigestion, inactivity of the liver, urinary troubles, rheumatic complaints, and many other ailments and infirmities are speedily conquered by this safe, prompt and agreeable corrective tonic, which is, besides, a reliable preventive of chills and fever, and other malarial disorders, counteracts the effects of fatigue and exposure, and is a beneficial solace to the aged and infirm.

—I did not love him. Long ago
Instead of Yes, I gave him No.
I did not love him; but to-day
I read his marriage notice. Pray,
Why was I sad, when never yet
Has my heart known the least regret
Over that whispered No? and why,
Reading the notice, did I sigh?

No analyst can guess the cause:
A woman's reason laughs at laws.
Sure, I am glad to know the wound
I gave is healed, that he has found
Love's blissfulness and peace; and yet
A woman never can forget
The man who once has loved her; and
To-day I seem to see him stand,
With every glance a mute caress,
Still pleading for the longed-for Yes.
His early love for me is dead—
Another lives in that love's stead;
And if he loves her well, as men
Should love their chosen ones, why, then,
He must be glad that long ago,
Instead of Yes, I gave him No.
Perhaps that is the reason why
I read the notice with a sigh.

Where Does It All Come From?

Pints and quarts of filthy Catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane which lines the chambers of the nose and its kindred glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life-liquid is needed to build up the system, but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which alters acts directly upon these glands, correcting them, and apply Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from. The instrument and both medicines sold by druggists and dealers in medicine.

MAGIC
CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrotula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon entered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been troubled with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have become growing worse, and the last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report no self cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I receive your package of Pills, and say they have done more good to me than all other medicine I have taken. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried almost everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills so I can eat anything. In one of the testimonials you have given it was worth ten dollars a pill to me; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In conclusion find $1.5 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,
Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and sides, making life for months to sleep to pick up any small article from the floor I have been a sufferer from Dyspepsia for great deals, for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Daily Bulletin, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I have entirely finished it felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop and tie my boots. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Kidneys and Constipation for years, and to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would send them to Ireland if money would do them, I think the most precious blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Pills, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

WHAT WAS HE MADE FOR.

Such was the question which every right hearted inhabitant of New Rochester had asked himself about Sam Minney many times during the twenty odd years which had elapsed since New Rochester was first settled. In Rochester proper, from which the colonists of the new town had labored through several hundred miles of wilderness, it had been the common impression that Sam was made to be either a preacher, a lawyer or a member of Congress. Both his parents were intellectual, and their only child had inherited their talents so completely that when he was four years of age he occasionally stood upon a table in the minister's parlor and read aloud "Paradise Lost" with evident feeling and appreciation, although greatly to the disgust of many larger boys, who had been dragged away from their favorite sports to behold this model for Rochester youth. As he grew in years and intelligence, and his parents were too poor to complete his education, some wealthy persons supplied the money which enabled Sam to graduate, at nineteen, from an Eastern college.

After he graduated however, Sam did not at once begin to give practical evidence of the ability which he was supposed to possess. In fact he developed no special ability at all, except as connoisseur in smoking tobacco. The ministers all liked him, for he enabled them to recall their own college days; but the other citizens began to remark to each other that Sam Minney wasn't doing much.

At last, after receiving several hints on the subject of unused talents, Sam became clerk in a store. All his customers liked him exceedingly; perhaps because he was too good-natured to stand out against an ordinarily vigorous beating down. His peculiar sort of ability gained Sam an early release from the thraldom of the counter, but no lawyer stood ready to seize him as a student and prospective partner; not even a Rochester editor seemed anxious to secure Sam as an assistant.

"He ought to go West," was the final decision of Rochester. He needed something to stir him up, and in the West he could get it. Sam himself had much the same idea; he had read a great many novels, so he was fully convicted that he was not appreciated, and that it needed only a great occasion to enable him to display his exceptional powers. So Sam joined a party of colonists who were about to leave Rochester for the far West, i. e., Indiana. As every other man was obliged to designate his occupation, Sam called himself a land surveyor, and actually traded away a great many books for a second-hand theodolite. Experience proved that he had reasoned rightly, for his services were not required more than an hour in a week during the first year of the colony, and the schoolmaster, who was employed by the people in the following year, proved as capable a surveyor as Sam, and a great deal more trustworthy in point of time.

What Sam did after that it is doubtful whether he himself could tell. He seemed to get a sudden start in the world when a new and well-to-do storekeeper employed him as private tutor to his half-dozen little children. We say advisedly that this employment gave him a sudden start, for it enabled him to obtain a much-needed suit of clothes on credit—an achievement which would shortly before have been impossible. The merchant's children made considerable progress, but hardly in the direction contemplated by the parents; the boys learned more college songs than mathematics, while the oldest daughter found Sam so agreeable that she exhibited symptoms of falling in love with him.

For a long time after Sam's discharge by the merchant, his only business efforts consisted in running in debt for his board. As a dollar per week was the price of board at New Rochester in those days, his transactions in this line were not large, but he could conscientiously say that in this respect, at least, he did his best. But, after receiving notices to quit from every one at New Rochester who ever took boarders, Sam conceived a desire to visit the sunny South, in which land he understood existence might be maintained without labor. He embarked for New Orleans on a flatboat, or rather he became one of the crew of such a boat, and for five weeks told jokes in the little cabin, and grumbled when he was called on duty. After he parted from his mates at New Orleans, the citizens of New Rochester heard no more of him for a year, when suddenly he reappeared just after an upward-bound steamer had left New Rochester. His clothing was not over neat and the shoulders of his coat were rubbed through in the manner peculiar to the "roustabout" (deck-hand). He brought no baggage ashore with him, and made no secret of the fact that he had been very hard up, and had learned to work.

But the good-hearted storekeeper who employed Sam immediately on hearing the ex-surveyor's story, soon found that his new clerk had forgotten the excellent habits he had learned, but had not been so successful with certain other acquired accomplishments. He had learned to drink, and he parted with not a fragment of his knowledge on this subject; he had learned to make palatable beverages from raw materials, and he freely imparted his knowledge to the customers of the single liquor seller who had crept into New Rochester. He had profited so liberally by the free lunch attachment to the Southern oar-rooms, that he suggested the idea of free lunches to the liquor dealer, and the experiment resulted so profitably that the grateful bar-keeper made Sam welcome whenever he called. Later, when Sam's patronage seemed rather expensive, the vender of poisons remembered that Sam had never been suspected of theft, so he employed him as bar-keeper. Poor Sam was already so far gone that he could not understand why, after his taking this new position, the non-drinking inhabitants ceased to recognize him respectfully. But he had his revenge, although he had not the slightest idea of taking any; his beautiful store of jokes, and his fine assortment of funny songs drew into the back door of the liquor shop many likely young men whose parents supposed their sons were visiting their neighbors' daughters.

At last Sam became too much of a drunkard to mix liquors correctly, and he lost his professional position. But Bayne, his late-employer, was not a man to go back on his friends, so he let Sam sleep on his bar at night, fed him with his own hired man and woman, and occasionally gave him cast-off clothing, in return for which kindness Sam took down and put up the shutters, made the fire, chopped wood, and made himself incidentally useful in other ways. His principal occupation, however, consisted in rambling about aimlessly, and chatting in a desultory manner to whoever would listen to him. He delighted in children, and they in turn loved him, as the little Dutch boys and girls loved Rip Van Winkle. Occasionally an observing parent would notice that while Sam could have the society of children he never asked for liquor, but no parent ever thought of making practical use of his observation.

All the ministers tried their hands on Sam, and he cordially agreed with every proposition they advanced. Once, in the midst of an earnest sermon by the Methodist pastor, the subject being "Our Home in Heaven," poor Sam burst out crying, and his conversion which took place soon after, was the precursor of a mighty revival. But the brethren were so busy in rejoicing over the reclaiming of Sam's soul, that they forgot all about the needs of his body, until one of that peculiar class of benevolent people who must be Satan's especial darlings offered him his board in return for a steady job of wood-chopping. The new doctor took it upon himself to visit some of the faithful, and saw that Sam's system could not meet the demands made upon it, and that he must return to his cups if something were not done for him; but the new doctor, besides being a sort of an interloper, was not a religious man, and could not be expected to understand the things of the spirit. So his prophecy was permitted to be fulfilled.

After this relapse Sam went to the dogs. To be sure, the New Rochester dogs never lacked food. Sam hung about sugar camps, loggers' huts, soap-boilings, and other places where small services would earn a full meal and a bed of leaves. Sam appeared at every temperance meeting, and always signed the pledge; and no one who ever looked into his eyes when he did it could ever accuse him of insincerity.

A curious citizen once gave Sam a quarter to publicly put himself under the fingers of a lecturing phrenologist, and the lecturer said something about congenital lack of vitality and imperfect nourishment in early years. For a few moments all the good people in the audience thought that something should be done for Sam, then they wondered what it should be, and they never reached the end of their wonderings.

And yet there was good blood in Sam. It was not until he was very far gone that he began to boast of such virtues as he had remaining, and then the inhabitants discovered to their astonishment that Sam said what was true when he claimed that he never lied, stole, or was unchaste. To be sure, he did not always pay his board bills as promised, and to accept credit when he was not certain of paying was an offense which some honest people class with theft; but these faults were, at New Rochester, as well as elsewhere practiced rather as business virtues than as misdeeds. Sam boasted, too, that he wasn't a coward, and, in the absence of any proof to the contrary, people believed him; but they agreed among themselves that he might with propriety exchange his courage for some more useful virtue.

The only business to which Sam devoted himself with any earnestness was that of catching saw logs. About twice a year White river would be suddenly filled by a freshet, and then, with the drift-wood, fence-rails, and other wood which the waters found on the bank, would be an occasional fine log which had been cut for the saw-mill, but which the cutter had been unable to get to his raft. These were claimed by whoever could find them adrift, and they brought a dollar each at any mill on the river.

The catching of these logs was work which exactly suited Sam; it consisted in sitting in a skiff behind a point where there was dead water, and looking up the surface of the stream. When a log appeared in sight he rowed into the stream, drove into the log a spike fastened by a rope to the stern of the boat, and towed it to shore. The active exertion required per diem to catch several logs did not consume an hour; the time thus left for smoking, drinking and reflection, was considerable. Then the same freshets were the signal (and the only means) for the start of many flat boats for the south, and it was a poor boat which, on being boarded, could not supply comfort to a thirsty man.

As Sam was log-catching during a spring freshet he saw coming down the river a very queer looking little craft, which seemed to be manned by only a single, very small person. The rapid current soon brought the craft near enough for him to see that it was a small bridge, made of two logs and several planks, and that the occupant was a little girl, who was crying piteously, and when she saw Sam she held out her hands appealingly. Sam had her in his arms in an instant, and exclaimed:

"Where did you come from, little dear?"

"Way off to Raysville," she sobbed, "and I want to go back to mamma."

"Well, don't cry," said Sam. "Raysville is only two miles up the river, and I'll take you home in the skiff right away, after I've towed the bridge ashore. How did you get afloat?"

"Why, papa caught the bridge," said she, "and 'twas tied near to the fence where the river was overflowed, and I was playing house on it, and then the next thing I knew it was broke loose and floating off again. And papa will be awful sorry to lose the bridge, too, 'cause he said it was worth six bits."

"Well, he shall have the bridge again if he'll come after it," said Sam. "But he shall have his little girl first."

Sam had hardly noticed where his heavy prize was causing him to drift to, and when he looked ahead he saw he was half a mile below his lookout place, and opposite a portion of the bank which was overflowed. To tow the bridge against the current would be an impossibility, so Sam pulled toward the shore with all his might, desirous of tying that bridge to some one of the trees on the bank. But the trees, when he reached them, proved to be all large sycamores or cotton woods, about which Sam could not easily put his arms and rope.

Suddenly, while making a violent effort to throw the end of a rope around one of the trees, his boat careened so much that both the occupants were thrown into the water. The child screamed, but Sam seized her in an instant, and was delighted to find the water was only waist deep. But in the meantime the bridge and boat were both moving away with the current, and, as is always the case with drift in a freshet, moving toward the centre of the river.

"This is a bad fix to be in," remarked Sam, holding the child above water, "but I'll wade to where there's dry ground, and then we'll find some house where we can dry ourselves."

But Sam did not find it easy to reach dry ground. Behind him the top of a small cane-brake showed above water, indicating that the ground there was higher than that on which he stood. He moved cautiously down stream, but was stopped by what seemed to be a small ditch or hollow running at right angles with the river. Then he retraced his steps, and moved toward the little point beyond which he always established his lookout, but a thicket of young cottonwoods, eight or ten feet high, barred the way.

"I'll tell you what we'll have to do," said he; "I'll stand in front of the trees, and put you on my shoulders, and we'll hail the first flat-boat that comes along. There's been two or three gone by already this morning, and there will be plenty more."

"Let's climb a tree," suggested the child, "and then you won't be in the water. I can climb as good as brother Ben."

Sam looked about him; probably the weight of a healthy child even so small as this one was a severe tax upon his feeble body, already chilled by the water.

"There's no trees small enough to climb," said he. "Twould take two men to reach around any one of them."

"Then let's holloa," said the little girl. "That's the way folks do when they want the ferryman to come over."

"That's a first-rate notion," exclaimed Sam, and he at once delivered several vigorous and prolonged howls. Then the little girl gave vent to some shrill shrieks, but no one answered. Sam began to tremble and bend under the weight of the child, who perceiving his uneasiness, exclaimed:

"I wish the water wasn't so deep, so I could stand up in it, and not hurt you," she said.

"Oh, you don't hurt," said he. "Can you sing?"

"Oh, yes—lots of things," answered the little child, promptly. "What do you like the best—'Tommy Green' or 'Happy Land?'"

"Well, whichever is liveliest," replied Sam, shifting the child to the other shoulder, while she sang "Tommy Green" with the best spirit a soaked child could command.

"Tha-at sounds che-ery," said Sam.

"Why, how funny you talk!" said she; "what makes you say things so shaky-like?"

"Oh! I just felt cold for a minute," replied Sam, very hastily. "Wouldn't it be very nice if we could warm the water some way?"

"To think of warming all the water in a big river!" said she; "how funny!"

"'Tis nonsensical, isn't it?" Sam admitted. "Well, 'twould be nice if somebody was making soap, and we were standing by the fire, wouldn't it? What was the biggest fire you ever saw?"

"'Twas old Bretzger's barn," said she promptly. "It burned away up to the sky, and made my face warm way off on the fence, so far as from here across the river."

"Did it roar, and crackle, and look red, and comfortable?" asked Sam.

"Yes, indeed!" said the child.

Sam shifted her from one shoulder to the other again, and once more gave vent to several calls, but no one responded. There was dead silence for a little while, and then the child remarked:

"It's kinder lonesome here—why don't you say something?"

"I—I'm kind of sleepy," replied Sam, straightening himself a little.

"Why, it's early in the morning!" exclaimed the child—"the idea of you being sleepy!"

"I guess I was up very late last night," said Sam, in explanation. "Aren't you glad I caught the bridge and kept you from floating way down the river—nobody knows how far?"

"Oh, ain't I glad!" replied the little girl.

"Then couldn't you give me a kiss?" asked the rescuer.

"I'll give you a thousand," said the child, impetuously, as Sam lifted her off his shoulder and in front of him, carefully holding her so high that her feet should not get wet.

"Why, how blue you look!" she exclaimed, as she saw his face.

"It's the reflection of the water makes one look that way," explained Sam, pressing her tightly to his breast, and kissing her many times. "But you think I'm good for something."

"You're gooder than anybody in the world but my papa," replied the child.

"That's a darling," said Sam, putting her back on his shoulder. Then he took from his pocket a long piece of a "trout-line"—a heavy fishing line made to hold forty or fifty hooks a yard apart—and managed to throw the end round a tree by which he stood, and catch it again.

"Now hold tight to my head," said he; "I want to use both hands a moment. Why didn't I think of this line when the skiff floated off? I might have caught it. O God!"

"Oh, you swear!" exclaimed the child.

"Not—exactly," said Sam, hesitatingly, though he did not explain. He tied the line tightly around his body, so that he was fastened against the tree, with his face toward the river. Then he bent his head forward and said:

"See if you can sit on my back, now, with one foot over each of my shoulders."

The little girl wriggled about a little, and then exclaimed:

"Oh, yes; it's just like a chair, with the big tree for a back—it's awful comfortable."

"Well, when I go to sleep," said Sam, "you can sit there without my holding you; do you see?"

"Yes," replied the child, "but I don't want you to go to sleep—I'll be so lonesome."

"Oh, no; you can keep a lookout for boats," said Sam. "Have you got a handkerchief?"

"No."

"Then wave my hat and holloa, if you see a boat; do you understand?"

"Yes, I understand."

Two or three moments passed in silence, which the child broke by asking:

"What are you whispering about?"

"I was thinking about the only friend I've got left, and I was whispering just what I'd say if I saw him," replied Sam, not overloud. "Do you ever say your prayers?"

"Oh, yes; every night and morning."

"Can you say a little prayer for me? I don't like to go to sleep without praying, and the Lord might hear two people better than one. Do you ever tell lies?"

"No—never at all."

"Then you ask the Lord to let me wake up in the right place."

"When the boat comes, you mean?"

"Yes; and ask him to let the ferryman take me where my mother is."

The child was silent for a moment; then she said:

"Dear Lord, let the man that's been so good to me wake up in the right place when the boat comes, and be took right to where his mother is, and let her love him awful much for taking me off the bridge. And I'll be a real good girl if you will. For Christ's sake. Amen."

"Thank you," said Sam, hoarsely, reaching up a wet hand and clasping the child's little fingers. "Now sing 'Happy Land.' And don't—forget—to wave the hat and holloa."

The child began to sing, and Sam's head drooped. It fell lower and lower, until, when the song was finished, the singer had a good broad seat.

"Don't it hurt you to lean over so?" she asked. But she received no answer.

* * * * * *

On the same morning, as the cook (for the day) of the flat-boat Rough-and-Ready was taking a doomed chicken from a coop on deck, he heard a shrill scream, and, looking up, saw a little girl sitting upon something where the bank should be. He hastily called up one of the crew, took the boat's skiff, and rowed off to the child. She was glad enough to be released from her position, and begged the men to wake up the dear good man who had taken her off the bridge.

"Who tied him that way?" demanded the old man who was the cook's companion.

"He did himself," said the child. "He said he was so sleepy, and he tied himself so's not to fall in the water and drown us both. And then he went to sleep."

"I hope," said the old man, who was a Methodist class-teacher, "that he fell asleep in Jesus, for he'll never wake again in this world."

The flat-boat was worked ashore at the next town, and the dead man was soon identified. It was proposed by some of the residents to leave the remains, under suitable guard, in a barn not far from the river, until the coroner should arrive, but when the wife of the owner of the barn heard how Sam came to lose his life, she caused him to be laid upon the best bed in her house, and she, with her own hands, threw a snowy spread over the dead man. The coroner soon came, with all New Rochester at his heels, and after the crowd came Bosier's hearse, with Bosier himself, the well-to-do cabinet maker, driving. The coroner's jury rendered the only verdict which was possible under the circumstances, and then Sam was escorted back to New Rochester by a procession which would have done his soul good to see, could he have sat up in the hearse and looked through its glass sides. Everybody at New Rochester went to the funeral; there was some objection made to the appearance of Bayne, the liquor dealer, in the church, but when he reminded the faithful that he had been the only person in the town who had been practically kind to Sam, the objectors were silenced. As for the Presbyterian pastor who preached the funeral sermon, he was so moved by Sam's conduct that he twisted the passage "Who gave himself a ransom" into a text appropriate to the occasion, and he spent so much time in calling attention to Sam's heroism that he was unable to warn young men against Sam's ruinous habits of life.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from the speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

William McKee, proprietor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, was found guilty of whiskey frauds on Monday. Ex-Collector Maguire's trial then commenced, after which comes that of Gen. Babcock.

A dispatch dated Biddeford, Jan. 31st, says: Arthur P. Devlin, formerly a Roman Catholic, who has been lecturing in New Hampshire and elsewhere against Catholicism, has reached Maine, and made his first speech yesterday. At the close of Burnham Wardwell's lecture in the City Hall last evening Devlin announced that he would lecture in Saco, Thursday, on "The Coming Conflict," and was greeted with applause, hisses, cries of fire, etc. Considerable excitement prevailed, and more is anticipated.

A Berlin telegram says the Spanish Government has intimated to Great Britain that it undertakes to end the Carlist war in a week or ten days, after which it will have more troops disposable for Cuba. It is understood that the practical grievances specified in the American note are in general not denied, nor is any counter-complaint against the neutrality of the United States alleged. The final defeat of the Carlists is expected in Berlin, but it is doubted whether Spain will be able to pacify Cuba, whatever number of troops she may send there.

A new light has dawned upon the Presidential candidate makers. It is that of Washburne. The plan of the Washburne men is to bring Carl Schurz and the Germans back into the republican party, with Washburne for President and some good Eastern man—like Wheeler, of New York—for Vice President. It is believed that an understanding was arrived at between Washburne and Schurz during the visit of the latter to Paris last Summer. One of the features of the Washburne movement is the return of John W. Forney, in February, to the editorial charge of the Philadelphia Press again.

Sunday afternoon, Jan. 27, 1867, nine years ago, the 27th of last month, the first meeting was held in South Seabrook which resulted in the formation of the Congregational church, in the July following. Appropriate services were held Thursday evening at the church, the pastor alluding to the reasons for thankfulness that the church had for the blessings of God, in the past year. At the close of the meeting several young men came forward for prayers. A congratulatory letter was received from Rev. Edward A. Rand of E. st. Church, South Boston, who was settled nine years ago at Amesbury, Rev. William A. Rand, his brother, being a student with him at the time. There is a debt on the meeting-house of one thousand dollars, and Mr. Rand is canvassing the churches of Newburyport to get help, and he spoke at the North Church Wednesday evening.—Herald.

So many of the parties interested in the Northampton Bank robbery have gone to New York that it is surmised that negotiations are already or soon to be opened for the return of the stolen property. There is a growing suspicion that the robbers may have had a local accomplice, as was the case in the Holyoke robbery a few years ago. This is based upon the fact that no bank in the State outside of Boston had so great an aggregate of deposits.

The house of D. H. Skidmore, a wealthy farmer, about a mile from Deer Park in Suffolk County, L. I., was burned Sunday night, together with all the out buildings. No attention was paid to the fire by persons living in that vicinity, as it was thought to be a fire in the woods. Monday, search was made, and the remains of Skidmore were found, together with those of Fleet Weeks, an old man living at the house, and Mr. and Mrs. Titus, a young couple lately hired to do the work about the house. The bodies were more or less charred. It is supposed that Skidmore, who was always engaged in law suits, had been murdered out of revenge, and the fire kindled to hide the crime. The death of the other persons in the house, however, is not accounted for.

Naval officers say there are many signs of renewed activity at Port Royal rendezvous, where so many of our ships are now gathering, and that warlike stores are rapidly going forward to that point.

Mr. Blaine is a Presbyterian.

There is nothing fresh about E. D. Winslow, the forger.—Worcester Gazette. That's a fact! But how about his victims?

If oranges are not golden apples, and the groves of Florida a new Hesperides, there are indications that the culture of this fruit is coming to be very profitable. A Palatka paper mentions that Dummett's grove, which only cost $1000 a year, yielded last year 600,000 oranges, for which the proprietor received $11,000; and that with proper care it would give $50,000 to $75,000 yearly. H. L. Hart's grove at Palatka yields him an income of $15,000 to $20,000 per annum. Arthur Glenn's grove at Mellonville, of 11,000 trees, pays him $12,000 to $15,000 yearly and is worth $100,000. Mr. DeBarry of New York has a grove near Enterprise of 20,000 trees. It will be strange if the handsome profits of the business do not stimulate the culture of a fruit which is always sure of a near and ready market.

Jottings.

The Rockingham House was built for an elegant private residence by Hon. Woodbury Langdon, great uncle of the late Hon. John Elwyn, and was afterward purchased by Mr. Elwyn's father, so that the deceased spent his boyhood and youth in the house where he died.

We are informed that a pocket-book containing $800, the property of a storekeeper of this city, was lost recently, and picked up by Mr. Oliver Amazeen, who returned it to its owner and was rewarded with a dollar. Our informant states that the paper found was all "negotiable"—national bank and treasury notes—and that Mr. Amazeen was alone when he found the money and could have appropriated it to his own use without fear of detection.

The New York Milliner and Dress Maker, a very handsomely illustrated magazine, devoted not alone to fashions, but containing choice selections for family reading, art, science, home culture and general literature, will be sent to any address for one year, on receipt of one dollar, including a choice of either of the beautiful oil chromos, (in sixteen colors,) entitled "The Old Oaken Bucket" or "Our Little Darling;" for three months, without chromo, free of postage, 25 cents. Agents wanted.

The funeral services of the late Hon. John Elwyn will be held at St. John's Church at 2 o'clock P. M., to-day.

Betton & Co. advertise to sell at auction on Thursday and Friday a rich collection of oil paintings, which will be worthy of general inspection and ready purchasers.

The U. S. S. Marion arrived at Norfolk on Thursday, after four days' rough passage from this port.

The Knights of Pythias dedicated their elegant new hall, corner of Daniel and Market streets, Monday evening, there being present delegations from other cities. This Order has grown rapidly in Portsmouth and is receiving constant additions. After the ceremonies, a banquet was partaken of at Congress Hall, and the night was spent in dancing.

The Woman's Temperance League are to hold a Temperance Centennial Levee on the evenings of the 22d, 23d and 24th of February, at Franklin Hall. Contributions of fancy work will be gratefully accepted.

Dr. A. P. Stevens, who will shortly remove from the city, offers his desirable residence, 52 Middle street, for sale, or to let for a term of years. The estate is situated in the very best and healthiest section of the city, and has been greatly improved within the last three years, not only by repairs and alterations, but by the erection of three fine houses just above it.

The fire seen in this city about eleven o'clock Monday night, was at Newmarket. The nut and bolt shop of Lafayette Hall was burned. Loss $45,000; insurance $19,000.

About 80,000 fish were landed on our wharves on Tuesday.

Orders were received from Washington on Monday to discharge all employes in the Steam Engineering Department at the navy yard except the chief clerk, store clerk and draughtsman.

Preserve the Public Health.

Hundreds of men are without work and many about town are suffering for want of it; our physicians and Board of Health have said that there is imminent danger of an epidemic here next Summer from the shocking condition of the ponds, and apparently the authorities are callous to the danger and disgrace. Visitors were driven from among us last Summer because, not being "to the manner" accustomed, they could not endure the vile atmosphere; and we may well believe that, for every one who left for that cause, a score will be deterred from coming. Can the city, or its business afford this? Can it afford to have it said that it has not energy to attempt to preserve its city from a pestilence which its Board of Health has reported to be imminent? We can find money enough to squander for useless purposes, but none, it seems, to protect health. Many of our laboring populace are suffering for want of work; can't we help them, (we must do it in some shape) and benefit the whole community at the same time?

All plans for clearing these ponds have been objected to, and probably none can be found free from objection, but that is no reason why nothing should be attempted. Now it is well known that the greatest evil comes from a bank of deposits (caused by the city sewers) along the north side of the south pond, bordering by vacant lands. At low water this bank is exposed to a greater extent than any other part of the pond, is more pestiferous and nearer to the centre of population than any other part. Now, why not begin here? The season is favorable, the ice at this point would probably be found to facilitate rather than impede the work, labor is cheap and self-preservation, and the good name of our city demand imperatively that something must be done. By doing this we shall at least give employment to those needing it, and perhaps get such light as will be of use in completing a work which must be done.

Won't the Board of Trade take hold of this matter—can it give its attention to anything more practical or more vital? W.

Mildness 100 Years Ago.

Hon. Mark Dennett, of Kittery, writes us that having read the communication of Mr. Joseph Frost correcting the impression that the present Winter is one of "the most remarkable weather ever known by any living man," if reference is made to its mildness, he wishes also to state further, that the Winter of 1795 was very mild and warm. He says: "Being then a boy of ten Winters, I remember of being in company with several elderly men (not highly educated) conversing on the mildness of the Winter, and they expressed the opinion, that as the frosts were being cleared away in the country, there would be no more very cold Winters. But their prediction was not correct.

"Again, the Winter of 1819 I think was the warmest of any I can recollect. I well remember that on the tenth day of February passing through my mowing field, I perceived something moving among the grass, and on examination, found several living green grasshoppers crawling among the grass.

"A fall of snow on the last of February made a few days of sleighing and sledding in March.

"Again, the Winter of 1842, when the P. S. & P. Railroad was being made, was a very mild Winter, so that there was no weather to obstruct the work any considerable time during the Winter.

"If the 'remarkable weather' alluded to relates to the occurrence of extreme cold and uncommon mild weather in the same Winter, I think the statement correct. There is a great variety of weather in each season, and a great variety of seasons in a country; but all nature is ordered in perfect wisdom."

A POINTED REBUKE.

He was the pink of perfection. If the cream of human excellence was to be churned the butter would lump up in the shape of Professor Porteous Prye, tutor. He had contracted the bad habit of stealing up stairs, in his stocking feet, to see if the lights were out at ten. It is hard teaching old dogs new tricks, but boys sometimes succeed better with old professors. Tommy Tayre is a cadaverous youth, with a sulphur-colored mustache, but the iron had entered his soul, and he said he must do what he could. So he bought three papers of carpet tacks one night, and stood the innocent little nails on their heads all the way up and down the stairs and retired with his faithful followers to the wood closet above to await results. Promptly the chapel bell struck ten, then a season of waiting and whispering followed. Presently came a furry creeping sound like woollen stockings feeling their way over rough boards. Tommy tucked his hat in his mouth—his mouth runs clear around, except a small isthmus which connects the top of his head with the nape of his neck—and held his nose till the first burst of glee had subsided. Now came a suppressed scream, one foot on the stairs; then another foot down; then a scream that wasn't suppressed; then a howl; he had struck the second stair; then he sat down on the next step, but he got up again, and a groan, with exclamation points after it, came tearing up to the wood closet. The boys stood back to give Tommy room to kick. Then came a scrabbling and shouting of heavy words, and a distinct mention of the name of the "father of iniquity," and Tom promptly appeared and asked, in a voice fresh from the Valley of Nod, "What seems to be the matter?" "Matter!" "the boys;" "the demons;" "confound it;" "see here;" "help!" and he shifted about and hung to the railing, and tried to stand on his knees. Tom brought a light, and the boys carried the wounded man to his room; offered sympathy; got a claw-hammer and drew out the tacks. The Professor wears slippers and sits on a cushion. Tom sits on nettles, for seventeen boys know the secret, and it is spreading like small-pox in an Indian camp.—Detroit Free Press.

A New Organization.

A secret organization has recently been started, and has already a membership of 15,000. It is called "The Free School Guard." Its headquarters are in Washington, D. C. The rules for government are similar to those of the Patrons of Husbandry. Its objects are as follows:

1. The Union and the Constitution. "Liberty and Union Forever."
2. The preservation of our public institutions.
3. Free schools, free speech and a free press.
4. Public schools to be free from sectarian influence and control.
5. No sectarian school to receive State or National aid.
6. The State or National Government to provide for the education of every capable child.
7. Education shall be compulsory.
8. No education, no franchise.
9. One term of six years for the President of the United States.
10. Loyalty to the Government.
11. Church property to be taxed.
12. The President of the United States to be elected by a direct vote of the people.

The declaration of principles is: Political, but not partisan.

Motto: Intelligence, freedom and union.

Watchword: Preach a crusade against ignorance.

—We didn't see anybody on New Year's that we could conscientiously call drunk; but we observed one fellow who had his shadow backed up against an alley gate, holding it there with his finger shoved through a knot-hole and talking it to death with uncompromising gravity.—Easton Free Press.

—"What are you doing here, hiding around my house?" savagely inquired a Michigan avenue man recently, as he espied a dapper-looking youth dodging behind a bay window.

"Oh, sir, I'm not a thief!" exclaimed the young man.

"You're not—what then?" demanded the house owner.

"You—you see, sir," was the stammering reply, "it's leap year, and I—I jes' see my girl coming down the street!"

Then the kind-hearted man, taking in the situation, extended the right hand of fellowship to the youth and said:

"Boy, you have my sympathies."—Chicago Journal.

—At Saratoga, a bridegroom stepped off the cars for a moment and the train went off with his bride. He followed by the next train down, and she on the other hand returned by the next train up, and they passed each other on the road. This operation was repeated, each trip leaving them at different ends of the route, until a peremptory telegram kept the bride stationary until her husband reached her.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

It is furnished of two qualities, fine and coarse, and it is said that with it an excellent dish of preserved fish can be prepared in a few minutes. The fine flour is used in the preparation of fish-puddings—a dish greatly in favor in Norway.

HENDERSON'S
CLOSING-OUT
SALE.

A lady bought a dollar's worth of Dry Goods, in my Store and got for a Present a four-pound Bar of Soap. She tore off the corner of the paper wrapper enough to see what the package contained, when with a look of disgust she passed it back to the clerk with a request to have it exchanged, adding the remark that she already had five dollars' worth of soap at home. Well, I exchanged the package (although against the rule) and upon removing the wrapper FOUND A CHECK FOR THE $55 CHAMBER SET. I am determined that SOME ONE SHALL TAKE THAT

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Billiousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased a package soon received more for friends or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my leave, where by several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror. I was induced to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new person and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package in Portland, Me., and they have done myself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. I could not eat everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would gladly send before I would do without them. Inclosed please find $1.50 for three packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,
Care Watson & Gannett.

Neuralgia and Rheumatic Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to move or turn in bed. Nothing gave me relief from the pour. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must die with pain. About this time I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for one box of your Magic Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well now, and the pain and wearing Neuralgia pain; can sleep as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will save my life. I have suffered much from constipation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money could buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be indemnified by trying them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Healed at 64 Years of Age of Neuralgia and Kidney Complaints Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the current year, and the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration, drawing a close scrutiny. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many problems to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopeful signs that the long lull has at last reviving.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all those who desire the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions; it will continue what it has been, the advocate and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to distortion the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to give honest men, whom the country knows and can trust, to secure honest money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times will allow, just civil rights, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it comes that THE TRIBUNE is now, as it was in the splendid hard money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and are now nobly striving to hold up the honor of our Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Ulmer Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without helping too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system and to nominate and that more, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years profitably forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable thing in their homes, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. Having the years 1872 and 1873 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and most liberal expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most valuable contributions from writers many of the most eminent men in the country.

The Country Gentleman

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1876.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is published WEEKLY at the following terms, when paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; FOUR COPIES, $10, one additional copy for the year, free to the sender of the Club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN possesses an unequaled Corps of Correspondents, regular and occasional, among the Best Farmers of All Parts of the country, and contains effects more of the practical condition and progress of the husbandry of every section of the United States than any other paper.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN gives in its Horticultural Department a continuous variety of information and suggestions, equal or superior in the aggregate to what is obtained in the monthly numbers of most magazines devoted to Horticulture.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN has probably done as much as all other Journals combined, to introduce and disseminate improved Stock of every kind through the country; and commands to a greater degree than any contemporary, the confidence and support of Breeders and Stockmen.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN contains unequally full and trustworthy Market Reports, and elevates a proper attention to them and to the Prospects of the Crops, as throwing light upon one of the most important of the questions of the Farm, viz: Buy and When to Sell.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN embraces numerous minor departments of a practical character, such as the Dairy, the Poultry Yard, the Apiary, the Vineyard, and so on, and signs that the reasons of its influence are to be conserved and increased by a variety of Pleasing Reading. It contains a well-edited Review of Current Events, and its advertising pages furnish a directory of all the principal agricultural and horticultural establishments of the country.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

In the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage af which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

THE ICE GORGE.

"It's coming, mister! It follows me close, and if you're wise, you will make tracks before. Why, it's Mr. Bradburn—Mark Bradburn, isn't it? I didn't know you at first."

I, for my part, knew the speaker, a young American assistant surveyor in the State employ, well enough; and as he checked his fast-trotting horses, and leaned over the side-rail of the light, high-wheeled wagon which he drove, I could see by his flushed cheek and excited manner that something serious must have occurred.

"The ice-gorge, so much talked of, is really descending, then?" I begun. "I thought precautions had——"

"Ay, but we are dead-beat," interrupted M'Kinlop—for that was his name. "The engineer in-chief has tried everything, but the enemy is too strong for us; and unless we can get time to blast as it reaches the Narrows, nothing but a miracle can save the towns of Clayville and Port Adams. It'll be at Ithaca a quarter of an hour after I am; and, let me tell you, it's no sport to try conclusions with the drifting pack that so big a stream as the Delaware can send down."

And without further parley he lashed his horses, and hurried down the road that skirted the bank; while almost immediately afterward I caught sight of a number of vehicles of various sorts and sizes rattling along at furious speed. These were filled with men, women, and children and household gear; and as the drivers went past the spot where I, with several of my neighbors and some of the workmen from the mine of which I was manager, was standing, they shouted aloud some hoarse words of warning, looking back, and pointing up the river with their whips. Every eye was turned toward the jutting point where we were likely to catch the first glimpse of the advancing foe.

"Burton, and Dutch Town, and Spartas on the New Jersey side, were swamped yesterday, so 'tis said," remarked an old farmer in blue homespun and boots of untanned leather. "I guess we Pennsylvania folks won't get off scot-free nuther. There it comes, Britisher—rounding the point!"

Looking toward the spot indicated, I descried an immense field of broken ice floating in the river at the point indicated. The familiarity of the man's address appeared to be warranted by the imminent danger. The ice was coming on fast, choking the river up wherever the jutting banks offered an obstacle to its progress. Faster and faster it came. More and more menacing the danger grew each moment. Everybody that I could see seemed inspired with feelings of terror. To me, a stranger who had never seen a gorge in the Delaware, and who regarded the statements of the people about them as exaggerated, the common fear, horror and apprehension were impossible. I was, it is true, a comparative stranger in the country. I had after reaching New York heard favorably of the mining regions of the Delaware, and, as soon as I could make the requisite preparations, had started for that quarter. After working patiently until I had made myself familiar with the business I crossed over from Jersey to Pennsylvania and found work at the Black Star iron mine. As I devoted all my attention to business and rendered my labors as essential as possible, I was promoted, step by step, until I finally became acting manager of the mine. Its location, as I should have stated, was close to a town called Ithaca, on the shore of the Delaware river. I had for two years had an opportunity, as clerk of the works, of proving to the satisfaction of my principals that I was capable of superintending the business efficiently enough. A Staffordshire lad, I had from childhood been familiar with iron ores and their treatment; while, having early in life been placed under the tuition of a mining engineer, I had brought out with me to America that technical knowledge which so greatly tends to smooth the path of an emigrant.

It was for the sake of my widowed mother in England—who loved me very dearly, and who, I know, never failed night and morning to put up a prayer for the safety and well-being of her boy beyond the seas—that I was so eager to earn the means of establishing a home which I could ask her to share. With this end in view, during the first years of my residence in the United States I had practiced self-denial as well as industry; had roughed it contentedly, and had spent my leisure hours in perfecting myself in the theoretical lore of my profession, and in cultivating an acquaintance with the German language, in which I could now converse fluently—a useful accomplishment in a district where so many of our workers were fair-haired new-comers who knew no tongue but that of their native Saxony or Pomerania.

My post, as acting manager of a Pennsylvania mine, was one which entailed some privations, much vigilance, and a good deal of patient toil. The Black Star was but a property of moderate extent—not one of those mammoth mines that yield their thousands of tons in the monthly output—but the iron was of excellent quality; fine red hematite that almost equalled the best Swedish in lustre and purity; and nothing but the cost of coal and of labor prevented us from carrying on a much larger trade than we actually did. Our workmen were a motley crew of varied nationality; for the best of the native pitmen had been allured away by the gold and silver of the Far West, while the sturdy Irish immigrants preferred open-air labor to earning a livelihood below ground. So high were the wages we were forced to give, that Cornish miners and colliers from Scotland often found it worth their while to cross and recross the Atlantic, spending their own slack season profitably among our shafts and galleries.

Salaries in the United States are perhaps not quite on a proportionate level with weekly wages, but then the opportunities of rising in the world are probably more frequent than at home; and I did not complain. I looked to the time when I should be in receipt of a better income and, prospectively, of some share in the profits of the firm. For the time being, I had board and lodging, at the rate of a dollar and a half a day, in an upland farmhouse; and ran no risk of damage, either in person or property, by the inundation that menaced the dwellings of those who lived closer to the river. I was therefore a mere spectator, though ready and willing at a pinch to be useful to those who were less fortunate.

"There's a woman on Ship Island, there—waving something, and calling to us. May I never, but it's young Ma'am Parnell herself! Yes, and there's a child with her," said one of the men on the bank.

"Can't be," said another incredulously. "The farmer would never have lingered this long, till he's right in the grip of the ice."

"Parnell's not new hum, I tell you," answered the other in his New Jersey accent. "He's away this week past to Philadelphia city. Yes, that's the wife, calling for help, poor young thing! Guess those cowardly skunks of hired men hev gone off in the flat-boat, and left the woman and child to shift for themselves."

To explain this, I may briefly say that, two miles above Ithaca, and almost opposite to the bluff on which we were standing, there is an islet in the river, shaded by trees, and which takes its name from some fancied resemblance in its shape to that of a ship. On it stood a farm-house, with brightly-painted gables of carved woodwork, a tiled roof, and a porch which in Summer was festooned with twining roses—a picturesque object in the landscape. Often, in the still sultriness of an August day, I had looked admiringly at this house, with its peach and apple orchards, its grassy meadows shaded by tall cottonwood poplars, and its sunny garden sloping to the water's edge, where the great streaked melons and yellow pumkins lay basking in the midst of blooming flowers, and had considered it as the very abode of peace. I knew the proprietor of this enviable dwelling—Seth Parnell by name—but very slightly, and had never met with the other members of his family, or set foot on his tiny domain.

That the island farm was in great danger from the advancing ice was but too manifest; and I was astonished when, on demanding who was ready to assist me in carrying aid to the deserted woman and child, no response was made beyond a deprecatory growl of dissent from my proposal.

"Throwing life away, as you'd throw a cornstalk, that's what I call it," pithily rejoined after a pause, the old yeoman from the hills. "Taint the thirst of Satan's speckling the river now that I'd value the snapping of a gunlock," he continued, pointing to the loose ice floating by; "it's the gorge itself, that would smash in the sides of a hundred-ton sloop as a boy cracks a peanut; and see, mister, the jam's breaking already."

And, indeed, the ice-wall, which had for some minutes been stationary, having probably anchored itself on some shoal or sandbank, was again in motion, urged by the resistless pressure of the flood above it, while the shrieks and despairing gestures of the lonely occupant of the islet showed in what an agony of alarm she beheld the near approach of the destroying wave. Still, though I made an urgent appeal to those around to aid me in manning a broadboro—one of a number of boats of various build and size that lay moored in the creek hard by—no volunteer answered to the call; and when I declared my intention of going alone to the rescue of those on the island, efforts were made to dissuade me from running the risk of what, to the bystanders, appeared to be all but inevitable death.

"Good grit; I'll say that for the Britisher!" Such were the farmer's valedictory words as I sprang into a canoe, grasped the paddle, and pushed off. "Pity, too, to see it done. We oughter hev held him back by force, neighbors."

However, I was by this time well out of the creek, which formed a sort of miniature harbor, and plying my paddle with the vigor necessary to contend with the force of the current, now swollen by the effects of the long continued thaw. Luckily, during my residence beside the Delaware, I had acquired that dexterity in the handling of a canoe which nothing but practice could confer, and I succeeded in eluding the shock of those sheets of floating ice—the impact of which might have proved fatal to my slender skiff—and had almost gained the southern extremity of the island, when a loud shout of warning from those on shore made me turn my head, to behold, with dismay, that quantities of gigantic masses of the gleaming crystal had broken away from the slow-moving gorge, and were rushing furiously down the stream, revolving in giddy circles as they came.

Almost mechanically I gave one long sweeping stroke with the paddle, and as the canoe darted forward, rose to my feet and sprang into the water, which proved to be a little more than waist-deep at that spot, so that I easily scrambled up the garden bank, while my frail bark, caught and crushed between two of the drifting blocks, floated a helpless wreck along the river.

Up to this moment I had achieved a partial, but only a partial success. I had reached the island; but the heaviest part of my task, as I was well aware, lay before me. The canoe was gone; so that, unless some boat belonging to the farm should be still fastened to the bank, I must depend on my own ingenuity for the means of conveying myself and those to save whose lives I had imperilled my own to firm ground. Had I but time, I had but little doubt that, by some one of the expedients that suggest themselves to a trained engineer, I could effect a safe passage to the shore; but I could not avoid entertaining some dismal forebodings, as I noted the alarming rapidity with which the flood-wave was rising. Another so called "jam" had taken place, as the ice-gorge touched upon the shallows near the island, and I could hear the grinding and clashing of the ice, as slab upon slab it was piled up by the mighty pressure from above.

I had enough to do to soothe the fears of poor little Mrs. Parnell—a gentle, blue-eyed little woman—who had thanked and blessed me as her preserver when we met, but who now, as she saw the river rushing over the islet, sweeping away barn and byre, and invading the lower rooms of the farm house, gave up all for lost; while the child, a noble-looking little boy, showed scarcely any sign of alarm.

Those were anxious moments which succeeded. I could tell by the dull thud-thud as of a steam hammer, that the ice was beating against the stout timbers of the farm house. The meadows were submerged, the garden a dreary waste of floating fragments of woodwork, uprooted shrubs and turbid water. That there was no boat but that which had been carried off by the cowardly hirelings who had left their master's family to perish, I had speedily ascertained. Of rescue from the shore there could be no reasonable prospect. The danger had increased tenfold since first I set off on my venturous voyage, and no one was likely to launch a boat in the face of almost certain destruction.

So far as I could see, there were but two courses open to us. We might remain in the upper stories of the farm-house, or, if hard pressed by the mounting water, take refuge on the roof, trusting that the strong wooden frame-work would hold together till the flood should abate. But the manner in which the walls trembled beneath the shock of the on-coming ice was not reassuring, while the frightful rapidity with which the water rose threatened absolute ruin. The other alternative was to construct a raft capable of battling with the current and pack-drift; and to this I at once addressed myself. Luckily, a number of empty flour casks, set on end, and some sheep-hurdles, which I espied floating about in the yard, now transformed into a lagoon, in the midst of which the affrighted poultry screamed and fluttered, supplied the needful materials, while my professional handiness stood me in good stead; but the peril was pressing and imminent, for now the blows dealt by the ice-blocks without made the house reel as though beneath the strokes of a battering-ram.

Never before had I toiled as I did then, well knowing that life and death depended on my promptitude, and that the breaking up of another "jam" or temporary ice-dam would probably render the river unnavigable, so that, should the house be swept away, our last poor chance of safety would be gone. So I worked on with a fierce eagerness until the empty casks and the osier hurdles were as tightly secured with withes and cords as could be effected, by one pair of hands; and then the precious raft was launched, Mrs. Parnell lending her slight strength to the task, as slowly and painfully it was dragged through the shallow water in search of a place where there should be a sufficient depth to set it afloat. There was a moment of agonizing suspense, as I strained every muscle and sinew in the attempt to drag the little structure clear of some uprooted trees, while the house shook perceptibly beneaththe thundering blows of the piled-up ice, which now rose many feet high at the back of the islet. Then the raft floated; and bidding those under my charge to sit still and leave the rest to me, I seized a fir pole and thrust it off from the bank into the whirling water.

Once, twice and yet a third time I touched the bottom with a pole with which I tried to steer the rude craft, and then we were in deep water, and driving along at the mercy of the current. A shriek from Mrs. Parnell made me look back, and I saw the whole side of the dwelling we had just left collapse like a child's house of cards, while with a roar like that of artillery the ice-barrier broke up, and the pell-mell confusion, the shining hillocks and glittering slabs began to hurry toward us, the horrible grinding sound of the blocks as they dashed against one another, being loud enough to deafen the ear that heard it! For a moment, but only for a moment, despair took possession of my heart; but then, as an eddy swept us in shoreward, a ringing cheer from the men clustered on the bank, and then another, attracted my attention. The ice was very near, but the shore, thank Heaven, was nearer still, and a long rope was thrown to us; I caught it, and we were dragged to the bank, where amidst the drifting ice the raft was upset, and it was not without some trouble and peril that, bruised, wet and breathless, we gained the solid earth.

Half an hour later Mrs. Parnell and little Louis, chilled and exhausted but unharmed, were safe under the hospitable care of the kindly folks in whose house I lived, while before night her husband arrived to clasp the rescued ones to his heart.

"Under God's mercy," said the honest fellow to me, with a quivering lip, as he shook my hand and wrung it for the tenth time, "I owe the preservation of all I love to you. We're friends for life, I guess."

And staunch and fast friends have we been till now, though years have rolled by since that day, and both of us have prospered in the world, and have happy homes and a fair sufficiency of the good things of life. But we have neither of us forgotten the events of that terrible winter, or let slip from our memories the ice-gorge and what came of it.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from the speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

There is a general movement along the whole republican line to reconcile the inharmonious elements of the party. This is not only the case in the efforts to bring the liberal republicans into the regular fold, as was shown in the caucuses held recently, but in adjusting personal differences among the leaders. During the past few days there have been several conferences of leading New York republicans to bring Senator Conkling and Ex-Speaker Blaine together on terms accorded to the most favored politicians. Those two well-known republicans have never pulled together in the party harness since their well remembered collision in debate in the House over what then was popularly known as the Blaine-Conkling amendment—now as the Thirteenth amendment abolishing slavery—in which the ex-Speaker pictured the member from Utica in such a mordacious style that it has never been till now forgotten nor forgiven. The New York republicans think it impolitic to go into the Presidential campaign with these two candidates personally "antagonizing" each other. In other words, there is such a demand for consolidating the divided ranks that personal considerations must give way to the political differences within the party, that a united front may be presented in the coming struggle, though it does not appear as yet that there is any prospective combination for any contingency as to candidates between Eastern applicants for the Presidency. This effort for peace, however, is understood to have been entirely successful, and as there are of course no differences on political questions within, the restoration of amicable relations will not be an armistice that passes understanding.

By the contract the Pennsylvania Railroad Company was to receive from Philadelphia $65,000 for rebuilding the Market street bridge. Colonel Scott has just written a letter to Mayor Stakely, saying that the bridge cost the company $62,405, and returning the unexpended $2595.

Blaine and Cameron is a ticket now much talked of in Washington. The Cameron meant is Senator Angus Cameron of Wisconsin, who beat Matt Carpenter in the contest in the legislature of that State last Winter. He is a nephew of his uncle of Pennsylvania, and a very successful lawyer. He was supported for the Senate by the liberal republican and granger elements, and it is said could command a very strong following in the Northwest. Even Carpenter is reported as favoring him in the hope of getting his old seat back if Cameron should be elected to the Vice-President's chair.

Gen. N. P. Banks has written a letter to the World declaring that he is not a candidate for Vice-President. He needn't have taken any trouble to state a self-evident fact.

Secretary Belknap has issued orders to stop all work on the building at the Centennial grounds, Philadelphia, intended for the use of the West Point cadets during the Centennial celebration. The Secretary says if the military academy appropriation bill passed by the House passes the Senate and becomes a law in its present shape, it will be impossible to send the cadets to the Centennial at all, and they will remain at the academy. The Department intended to make their presence at the Centennial an attractive feature, but the Secretary says as the House has abolished the band, he would not be willing to send the cadets to the Centennial with a lot of tin horns in their hands to blow. The cadets will go in a manner to reflect credit on the academy and country, or not at all.

Senator Conkling, in conversation with a prominent New England politician, has given him to understand that in his opinion Gen. Grant is the most available candidate for the republican party.

It is said that $200,000 were expended in a fruitless effort to establish on a paying basis the Boston News.

Five of the republican journals of Iowa, including those that are most influential in the party, favor the nomination of ex-Speaker Blaine for President by the republican National convention.

Silas Winder, of East Lyndon, Vt., killed his father and mother with an axe, cut his wife's throat, and hung himself. The wife alone was living, at last accounts.

George Folsom, son of Thomas Folsom, of West Epping, left home more than twenty years ago for California. He was supposed to be dead, as nothing had been heard from him. He has recently been discovered living in San Francisco with a wife and four children. The parents now rejoice over a lost son found, and are now in communication with him.

The decrease in the public debt last month, was $1,559,155.

It is settled beyond all doubt that the French Senate is Republican. This indicates that the Assembly will also be controlled by the adherents of the constitution, and the Republic is thus a fixed fact. Gambetta has exhibited in a marked manner, of late, the traits of true statesmanship, and he is certain to take a prominent part in future in shaping the destinies of the great French nation.

Ex-Collector Maguire pleads guilty to complicity in the whiskey frauds at St. Louis.

The House appropriations committee have agreed to cut down the fortification bill from $800,000, which was the amount last year, to $100,000. It is also agreed to take out the item of fortifications from the army bill and include it in the fortification bill proper. A very small appropriation, however, will be made for heavy armament.

The stage mail-line between Dover and Barrington has been discontinued. Mail matter will hereafter be conveyed over the Dover & Winnipesaukee and Rochester & Nashua Railroads.

Congressman Tufts of Iowa is evidently something of a wag. He writes to a friend that his seat is between Mr. Blaine and Mr. W. S. King, and adds that he "hopes to absorb a little statesmanship from one, and a little subsidy from the other."

Since Speaker Kerr's ukase prohibiting the sale of whiskey at the Capitol restaurant, the afflicted members have taken to ordering "cold tea," "tea straight," "tea cocktails," etc. The curious feature about it is that it inebriates as well as cheers.

Develin, the anti-Catholic lecturer, lectured in Saco, Tuesday evening. Several stones were throwa through the windows at him.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "trash and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unlike for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be as effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference to such as to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful, and all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really entertaining food is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands a larger, more serviceable resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books at $1.50, 1500 pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Jottings.

The North church has been invited to the Plymouth Church advisory council.

The funeral services of the late John Elwyn were attended at St. John's Episcopal Church on Wednesday afternoon, the rector, Rev. Charles A. Holbrook, officiating, assisted by Chaplain Smith of the navy yard. The pall-bearers were Daniel H. Peirce, W. H. Y. Hackett, Daniel Marcy, G. W. Haven, J. R. Reding, E. G. Parrott, Lory Odell, and Wm. H. Rollins. The casket was of black walnut, very plain, without ornament; and the floral decorations few and simple—only a wreath of dark foliage leaves, and a sheaf of ripened grain. The services consisted only of the regular church burial service, and there was no music. The body was laid in the family burying-ground on the farm near Lafayette Road, in accordance with the oft-expressed wish of the deceased; and the beautiful committal service was read at the grave, by the rector.

An institution which tends to make the crooked ways straight—the Bow Mission.

So it has come to this has it, that a lecturer may denounce the (protestant) church or State; deride the law or gospel; abuse and malign the president, and blaspheme the Almighty himself, without molestation; but must not say a word against the Catholic Church, at his peril?

Mr. Wm. A. Loyne has received a donation of $500 toward his cherished object of establishing a Faith Home in this city, for needy women and children—the gift coming voluntarily in direct answer to prayer, according to the faith and belief of the earnest and devoted recipients.

During the fierce northwest gale on Wednesday afternoon, the 2d, a lady was blown from the sidewalk near the post-office into the street, and was injured so that she was sent home in a hack. Another young lady was blown up against a tree and could not get away without aid. Miss Flora Cook, while passing the corner of State and Pleasant streets was struck on the head by a slate blown from the roof of a building. The slate cut into her skull so deeply as to necessitate surgical treatment.

Mr. John L. Pickering is the new teacher at the Woodbury school.

At the Board of Trade meeting, Tuesday evening, Messrs. T. E. O. Marvin, Wm. H. Sise and J. P. Morse were appointed a committee to arrange for a Centennial county celebration July 4th.

Raise Lobsters--Why Not?

A little energy, well directed, will generally bring fruitful results. Just now there are hundreds of men out of employment, waiting for something to turn up. Year after year, that crustaceous luxury, the lobster, has been growing more scarce, until his annihilation is threatened. In Europe, pisciculture is practiced with great success, and there is no reason why it may not be carried out successfully on the Piscataqua. Among the accessories of the market of Paris is one of the most curious establishments of the kind in the world—the great fish pond or reservoir of Roscoff, in the department of Finisterre, on the coast of Brittany. It is designed especially for lobsters, and for the supply of the Paris market. It has proved so plentiful in its results, however, as to afford occasional supplies to the markets of Belgium, Russia and Germany. It is an immense basin, some sixteen or eighteen hundred feet in circumference, formed by solid walls of masonry, in which the water of the sea is maintained at a uniform height, with iron gates, so constructed that the imprisoned lobsters cannot make their escape. Operations were commenced on the 4th of July last, when about fifteen hundred lobsters were consigned to captivity in the basin; and every week the stock is reinforced by about the same number by fishing boats engaged exclusively in the trade, which bring their captives, alive, to replenish the great slave pond. This is now estimated to contain about thirty thousand lobsters, besides an equal amount of mullet and fish of other species, which are enticed into the trap by the flowing tide, but after having attained certain dimensions cannot escape. Such a marine population necessitates, of course, a large alimentation, which is supplied by conger eels and dog-fish, for which lobsters have a decided epicurean taste. The lobster is voracious at all times; but in regard to these luxuries his instinctive ravenous appetite carries him beyond the bounds of reason and leads to intestine feuds and desperate wars of conquest. So frequent is this carnage that lobsters in a wounded and disabled state are often found on the surface of the water. These are taken and sold in the immediate neighborhood, as they could not endure a long journey in a healthy condition. So successful has this experiment proved that measures are in progress for extending the idea to other desirable fish with which the shores of Brittany abound. The laborers now out of employment could be utilized in such an undertaking, and lobster breeding would become an acknowledged and profitable branch of industry.

A Good Time Coming. Boys.

When Hon. Daniel Marcy, in 1874, appeared at Concord before the democratic legislative committee appointed to secure "purity of elections" by carrying into effect the caucus schemes for fixing things so that republican cities would be ruled by democratic officials, he urged as one reason why this city should be gerrymandered and all the check-lists and ballot-boxes placed in the hands of the most unscrupulous democratic partisans, that the navy yard influence was prejudicial to the interests of the city, and he was unable to build ships to advantage on account of workingmen getting higher wages and working shorter days on the navy yard than in private shipyards. He also told a republican that "when we get a democratic House of Representatives" the appropriations for the navy yard would be mighty small; so we may presume that a national victory for Mr. Marcy's party—which victory would be made more probable than it now is if Mr. Marcy could by any chance be chosen governor at the coming election—would assure a long continuance of the present lively times among the workingmen of this city, as it is not probable a democratic administration would send work to interfere with a democratic governor's desire to build his ships with the aid of cheap labor. We haven't yet got a democratic Congress; but the Confederate brigadiers have captured one branch of it, and will no doubt see to it that the ten or twelve thousand dollars a month which has so often found its way into the hands of workingmen and from their hands into the tills of the storekeeper—democratic and republican alike—will go in some other direction, to the great satisfaction of the workingmen and storekeepers aforesaid. The democratic workingmen need not flatter themselves that "when we get a democratic Congress" a large and varied assortment of loaves and fishes will be sent on here for distribution among the faithful privates of the democratic army, for their candidate for governor doesn't want anything of the kind; his argument before the gerrymandering committee did not hint that mechanics and other laboring men were injured by the navy yard, but merely claimed that they were better paid than he could afford to pay them; while his promise to the republican that "when we get a democratic House" the navy yard appropriations would be small implies that he will do all in his power to prevent workmen being so well paid in the future.

—One by one our statesmen pass away, and are remembered only by the recall of some fact or circumstance. In ready wit and sharp repartee, the late John P. Hale had few superiors. On one occasion, in the Senate, shortly after he had become a member of that then historic body, he rose to reply to Mr. Calhoun, who had just finished an elaborate but characteristic pro-slavery speech. Hale was outspoken in vindication of his abolition or anti-slavery ideas, and his vehemence and courage annoyed Calhoun, who retorted in contemptuous tones, "I pay no heed, Mr. President, to the ravings of a maniac!" Quick as thought, Hale was on his feet, and like a mat dore, administering the coup de grace, replied, "Thank God, Mr. President, I am not a mono-maniac!"

BABY'S HEAVENLY NAME.

What shall I call her when we meet?
She knew no other name on earth
Than that which mothers find so sweet,
Though words be cold and little worth;
"Our baby" seemed a name complete.
But now so many years have flown
Since from my fearful gaze she passed,
How shall I, in the great unknown,
Amazed where all is strange and vast,
How shall I there reclaim my own?
What sweet, rare title does she bear?
For when I meet her on that shore,
Grown wise and great as she is fair,
"My baby" I can say no more,
For I shall be the infant there.

A Contrast Worthy Public Attention.

What is the effect of a drastic purgative upon the constipated bowels and a dyspeptic stomach? The intestine is emptied so violently as to weaken and render it still more inactive, and the gastric juices vitiated by contact with an indigestible medicine, lose the chemical qualities which constitute them the only true solvents of the food. Results—aggravated constipation and chronic indigestion. What, on the other hand, are the effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters on the same organs. The bowels are moved, but without violence, and at the same time acquire healthful tone; the gastric secretions are stimulated and improved, and duly perform their part in the processes which eventuate in the nutrition of every part of the human structure. Results—a regular habit of body, sound digestion and vigor. Let the public draw its own conclusions from this contrast.

CLOSING-OUT

SALE.

A lady bought a dollar's worth of Dry Goods, in my Store and got for a Present a four-pound Bar of Soap. She tore off the corner of the paper wrapper enough to see what the package contained, when with a look of disgust she passed it back to the clerk with a request to have it exchanged, adding the remark that she already had five dollars' worth of soap at home. Well, I exchanged the package (although against the rule) and upon removing the wrapper FOUND A CHECK FOR THE $55 CHAMBER SET. I am determined that SOME ONE SHALL TAKE THAT —A waste of "t"—Putting it in depot.

—"Maria," said Mr. Holcomb, as he was putting on his clothes, "there ain't no patch on them breeches yet." "I can't fix it any way; I'm too busy." "Well, give me the patch then, an' I'll carry it around with me. I don't want people to think I can't afford the cloth."

"Know thy Opportunity."

The grim monster, Death, was stealthily approaching. I could almost feel his hot, fiery breath upon my forehead. My faithless goddess, Hygeia, had utterly deserted me. Only now and then would Morpheus befriend me, but even this auspicious day, he had deigned to moisten my eyelids with heavenly ambrosia, and I slept. As I slept, behold, I had a dream! I thought that I was roaming upon foreign soil whither my physician had sent me to recover my health. I was in a great metropolis—one of the grand marts of the civilized. In one of my strolls I chanced to meet a man who had in his hand a handsomely bound volume, entitled "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," and who said that he was an agent for the sale of the book. The title was such a novel one that I was impelled to give the work a casual notice. As I hurriedly glanced over its pages, I observed that it contained treatises not commonly found in medical works. But I had too many times been hoaxed by appearances, and I determined that I would have nothing to do with it. A voice within me, like a faithful mentor, whispered, "Know thy opportunity; in that book is thy salvation!" I began reasoning with myself. Although doubtful and distrustful, yet I put forth my hand to take the book, and lo! the agent was gone! I was miserable. In my agony I awoke. Great drops of perspiration were upon my brow. By my bedside was a friend who had called during my slumber to see me. Said my friend, "I have brought with me a book which I thought might interest you." One glance at the work, and I was assured that it was "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. Surely, this was the veritable book which I had seen in my dreams. My friend loaned me the work, and, every day, as my strength permitted, I perused its pages. Although it contained very interesting treatises on Biology, Cerebral Physiology, Human Temperaments, Nursing of the Sick, etc., yet, being an invalid, I was most interested in the subject of Diseases and Remedies. I believed that I had a liver affection, and yet more than one medical attendant had pronounced my disease Consumption, and that I would fall with the autumn leaves. In that book I found my symptoms perfectly portrayed. I was then confident that I had not deceived myself. I reasoned thus: "Any man who can so truthfully depict my feelings, and apparently understands my constitutional tendencies, must know just what my physical system demands. I will trust my case with Dr. Pierce. I will take his Golden Medical Discovery as recommended for my disease." The result is, that after having perseveringly followed his prescribed treatment, I once again enjoy the blessings of health. Therefore, I would say to the afflicted, "Know thy opportunity," and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package returned for more himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Subjoined are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I heard of your Pills and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden to me, I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit, yet I felt bound by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and have taken myself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "send for a box of your Pills." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can feel anything else. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. Inclose this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. D. D. LEONARD.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have been troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for days to stand or walk without a cane. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. I propose now day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist, I immediately sent for what I thought I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well and have not had a pain. Neuralgia pain; can stop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at my improvement, and know I would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be benefited by them. Yours respectfully, MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health Restored at 64 than Ever—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. Send $1.00 for two packages.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on this continent. We shall enter on a new Presidential under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawn to a close. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country: while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the meantime we shall witness there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year just ended has relieved the crisis of our fiscal affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and of religion to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and the industry the hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In a time of stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan sophistries or prejudices, hates or affections.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners; but it will not be a mere servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the shortcomings of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to ascertain the ideas, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, administrative reform, economy and purity in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the Democrats for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent journals thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the centennial year will witness still further improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the qualities of candor with fearless fairness, and its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and its heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From which we believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won that position by its low cheap yet wholesome and the most lavish expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and articles, and the ablest editorials in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

BUCHMAN'S PULMONICE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America, or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

READING FOR CHILDREN. OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS. A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL. A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION. WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks 50 cents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The News-Letter Advertiser, in A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL on this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the ingenuity of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would arouse his own manliness, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. We do not blame the low moral tone of society as due to the satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned at its source, we now have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and hungry children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence." The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as pious and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In THE AVALANCHE OF IMMORAL LITERATURE That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them. ST NICHOLAS one week reached our platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION. REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be made. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end." In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00. Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75. Any one of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00. Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued. The volumes contain more than 1,000 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $20.00!! Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents. SCRIBNER & CO., 743 Broadway, New-York. jan22 d&w4t

POOR PIERROT.

[Paris Correspondence (Arsene Houssaye) of the New York Tribune.]

And now my dear readers, let me tell you a story of another friend of mine, who was an ass, but not a savant. His name was Pierrot. The frost was silvering the trees of the Park Monceau with dull white powder, like the head of a marquis of the old regime. It was in front of the Rotunda, and nine o'clock in the morning. The sun hung in the fog like a globe of fire, but cast forth no beams. The wind was cruel to the poor world. People walked rapidly along the Boulevard de Courcelles; women veiled their faces and men drew their heads inside their collars. It was a day when a lover's sigh would have frozen in the air. I was hurrying by like everybody else. A female ragpicker, pale and famished, led by the bridle a poor little donkey, which seemed a hundred years old, and which dragged a poor little cart, full of the rubbish of the street; rags, broken bottles, torn papers, worn out skillets, crusts of bread, the thousand nothings which are the fortunes of ragpickers. The woman had done good work since midnight, but the ass was ready to drop. He stopped short, as if he had made up his mind to go no further. His legs trembled and threatened a fall. He hung his head with resignation, as if awaiting the stroke of death. The sight touched and arrested me. A man would have cursed and beaten the poor beast to rouse him; the woman looked at him with an eye of motherly pity. The donkey returned her look, as if saying, "You see it is all over. I have done my best for you night after night, because I saw your misery was greater than mine. You have treated me well, sharing your bread with me, and your neighbor's oats, when you could steal any; but I am dying at last." The woman looked at him and said gently, "Come, come, dear Pierrot, do not leave me here." She lightened the load by taking out a basket of broken bottles. "Come, now," she said, as if talking to a child. "You can get along nicely now." She put her shoulder to the wheel, but the donkey did not move. He knew he had not the strength to walk to St. Ouen, his wretched home. She still coaxed him. "How do you think we can get on this way, Pierrot? To be sure I can drag the cart, but I can't put you in it, and you would be ashamed to be dragged after it." The donkey raised his ears, but no move. I was going to speak to her, when she ran to the nearest wine-shop. The ass followed her with anxious eyes; he seemed fearful that he would die without his mistress. He was so little you would have taken him at a distance for a Pyrenean dog. He had grown gray in the harness. A few tufts of gray hair remained here and there on his emaciated body. He looked like a mountain burned bare in many places. His resigned air showed a mind free from worldly vanities. He was far past the age where one strikes attitude. He was almost transparent in his leanness. But his face was all the more expressive. It had something almost human in its intelligence and goodness. Why had he been condemned to such suffering; was it the expiation of a former life passed in luxurious orgies? The ragpicker soon returned, bringing a piece of bread and a piece of sugar. The ass turned and showed his teeth, like old piano keys. But although it was his breakfast time, he had no more strength in his mouth than in his legs. She gave him the sugar. He took it as if to oblige her, but dropped it again, and the same with the bread. "Ah! mon Dieu! What shall I do?" said the ragpicker. She thought no more of her cart. She was full of anxiety for her friend Pierrot. "Pierrot," she cried again. Two great tears came to her eyes. She took his head in her arms and kissed him like a child. The caress did what nothing else could do. The ass roused himself and brayed as in his best days. I feared it was only his swan-song. I approached and said to the woman, "You seem to be in trouble." "Oh," she said, crying, "if you knew how I love this beast. I saved him from the butchers four years ago. In those days I had only a hod. I have raised seven children with my hook. The father is gone and one other, and my eldest daughter was taken away a fortnight ago. My worst grief was that I had to take one to the Foundlings—I had eleven in all—four of them died at the breast. It's no use; you can't have good milk when you work in the streets all night. This little donkey has been my consolation. He was better company than my husband. He never got drunk and never beat me, and I never beat him. Did I, Pierrot?" The poor little beast appeared to share in the conversation. He half raised his ears and assented. One of my friends passed by and asked me what I was doing, "I am making a new friend." "He may be witty, but he is not handsome." "I find him admirable, and I would like to see you in his place. He has been out since midnight. Here, you want to help me in a work of charity?" "With all my heart." "Very well. Let us buy this ass and put him on the retired list. This good woman will take care of him." The ragpicker looked at us severely, fearing we were laughing at her. But when she saw the shine of the Louis-d'or she smiled. "How much did Pierrot cost?" "Ten francs." "Well, you go back to the abattoir and buy another ass, and take good care of this one." I gave my card to the woman and said good-bye to her and the donkey. The miracle was complete. The ass started off in high spirits, the woman pushing the cart from behind. That evening the poor woman came to me in tears. I understood at once. "Ah, sir, he is gone." "Poor Pierrot!" "Yes, sir, we got to St. Ouen one way or another. But when he came in sight of our hut he fell on his knees. I tried to raise him, but this time it was all over. My children came running and crying. They talked to him and kissed him. He looked at them so sadly as to break our hearts. I tell you, there are lots of people in the world not worth half so much as poor Pierrot. Think of it, he wanted to die at home after finishing his day's work." Like a soldier who dies after firing his last cartridge. The ragpicker opened her hand, and I saw the money I had given her in the morning. "Here are your hundred francs, sir." I do not know whether I most admired her or the donkey—the ass who did his duty to death, or the woman more delicate than our charity.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from the speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

The Same Old Concern.

The Nashua Telegraph says: "The democrats in the House have accomplished their first reform. They have cut down the allowance of the boys and teachers at West Point who are to be the trainers and leaders of the volunteers of the country should we have another war, foreign or domestic. This retrenchment may be all right, but somehow when the democrats attempt a real reform, which is not often, they strike at something connected with education. We had loud and many promises of reform when the democratic party came into power in this State in 1874. When the session was over and the reforms counted up, it was found that teachers' institutes had been abolished, at a saving of $3,000 annually, and the session extended beyond the usual length at an extra cost of $10,000."

Well, what did you expect? The democratic party is the same old concern it always was, so far as education is concerned, although it pretends to have reformed its articles of faith on other points, such as the right of the capitalist to own the laboring man, and of a democratic State to dissolve the Union when "oppressed" by a republican victory at the polls,—on the strength of which pretended reformation it demands to be once more entrusted with national power. But education and democracy (or the sham calling itself democracy) were always at loggerheads,—and no wonder, for the complete triumph of the one means the down-fall of the other; and it means it just as much now as it did in the days when in more than one democratic State it was an offence punishable with death to teach a workingman to read. There are many earnest advocates of popular education among the democrats of the North; but whenever any legislation is done in opposition to the cause it is done by democratic majorities for the assumed "benefit of the party."

News and Notes.

The republicans in the Maine legislature have the most votes and the democrats the most brains. A republican member says so himself.—Post. How about the National House?

A Manchester lady availing herself of the leap-year privilege presented herself to the clerk of that city, and obtained a marriage license.

We black our boots with 15,000,000 boxes of domestic blacking in a year.—Richmond Eng. Sho! what's the size of your boots?—Bos. Post.

Gen. Benjamin Harrison will receive and accept the republican nomination for Governor of Indiana.

The city of Dover has been sued for counsel fees by J. Warren Towle, Esq., of Exeter, who was employed by Solicitor Dodge to assist him in defending the city in the trial of a couple of indictments for defective highways at the term of the circuit court last September.

The value of New Hampshire farm land has risen from $55,000,000 in 1850 to $80,000,000 in 1870, and during the same period the average size of the farms has diminished from 184 to 149—which is doubtless an indication of better culture. The number engaged in agricultural pursuits is 46,375, of whom more than 44,000 are native-born.

A house and barn at Peterborough owned by I. N. Leathers, was burned on the 1st. Insurance $2000 on buildings and furniture.

A house at Laconia, owned by G. H. Tilton was burned on the 2d, on account of a defective chimney. Loss $7500; insurance $4700.

The State elections to occur this year prior to the great contest in November, are as follows: Texas, Tuesday, Feb. 15; New Hampshire, Tuesday, March 14; Connecticut, Monday, April 3; Rhode Island, Wednesday, April 5; Maine, Monday, Sept. 11; Ohio, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, West Virginia, Tuesday, Oct. 10; Georgia, Wednesday, Oct. 11.

A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes that there are two Blaine men among the Wisconsin republicans to one for Washburne, and not one in 50 for Morton, and adds: "Indeed, Morton was never popular in Wisconsin, and if he is a candidate for the Presidency I warn him not to build hopes on getting the votes of the Badger State. Blaine has made immense headway by his recent speeches in the House, and it is only occasionally that a man is found who is sorry the amnesty debate occurred, or regrets that Blaine stirred up the animals with a long pole, and made them growl in the old secession key. I presume there will be no effort to instruct the delegates from this State, but the indications now are that they will be for Blaine first. If Mr. Washburne should be nominated, or if our delegation was forced to a second choice, the old watch-dog of the Treasury and the noble friend of Gen. Grant would please our people better than any one else."

A daughter of Lucius W. Pond, the Worcester forger, has been for several months employed in a restaurant in that city, where the table waiters are women, voluntarily working out a debt of $100 owed by her father to the proprietor of the restaurant. Although brought up to the use of the elegancies and luxuries of life, this young lady shows a nice sense of honor, a modicum of which would have saved her father from a criminal's fate and his family from disgrace.—Hartford Times.

The common strawberry is a natural dentifice. Its juice dissolves the tartareous encrustations on the teeth.

There is a journalist in Bristol, Va., who seems to be discouraged and disgusted. He edits the News, and thus speaks: "We fear there is no chance for us to win the Presidential election. We have sent a few brilliant, pop-eyed fools, like Ben. Hill of Georgia, and these seem determined to knock the apple off the head of the Northern men every time they see it there. Nothing was so much needed by the enemy as that our Southern men in this democratic Congress should quarrel with them. Nothing has done them so much good as the recent hot debate between Hill and Blaine. Even Ran. Tucker of Virginia had better keep his mouth shut. The time is not yet for the South to resume the fiery leadership of 1850."

Twelve States—Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Wisconsin—took a census in 1875, which shows the following increase over the Federal census of 1870: Iowa, 156,524; Kansas, 168,974; Louisiana, 130,124; Massachusetts, 194,551; Michigan, 159,792; Minnesota, 158,723; Nevada, 9845; New Jersey, 120,406; New York, 332,440; Rhode Island, 40,896; South Carolina, 217,841; Wisconsin, 182,059; total increase, 1,857,174. In 1870 these States had nearly one-third the population of the whole country, and if we may assume that the increase of population in the remaining States has been proportionate, the centennial population of the country ought to be about 44,000,000.—Chicago Tribune.

The Life-Saving Stations.

The last annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury gives many valuable and interesting facts concerning the Life-Saving Service, a branch of the Treasury Department, which has been in successful operation since the date of its reorganization in 1871.

The sea and lake coasts upon which the establishment of life-saving stations is authorized by law are divided into districts—No. 1 embracing the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire, No. 2 the coast of Massachusetts. The remainder of the Atlantic coast is districted in numbers above these, while Districts Nos. 8, 9 and 10 are on the lakes, and 11 on the Pacific coast. The 104 stations in use last year are located in Districts Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 6. During the year from Nov. 1, 1875, to Nov. 1, 1875, 82 vessels were driven ashore upon the line of coast protected by these stations, having 975 persons on board, and valued, with their cargoes, at $2,607,722. Twelve of the disasters occurred in District No. 1, 29 in District No. 2, 17 in District No. 3, (coasts of Rhode Island and New York), 25 in District No. 4 (coast of New Jersey), and 8 in District No. 6 (from Cape Henry to Cape Hatteras.) At forty-four wrecks the life-saving apparatus was used, and 468 persons were rescued by it, while in most of the other instances assistance of some kind was rendered by the service. Of lives imperilled, 959 were saved. Property valued at $1,756,475 was saved, and property valued at $851,247 was lost. Fourteen vessels and cargoes were totally lost, and sixteen persons perished. At the stations, 219 shipwrecked persons were sheltered, and shelter was afforded for 726 days. Exclusive of the cost of establishing new stations, the cost of the service during the year was $163,204 52. One life was lost by exposure, the person being one of a frost-bitten crew which was rescued from the vessel John Rommell, Jr., wrecked on the coast of Cape Cod. The second was lost by the wreck of the steamer Vicksburg, which was driven ashore near station 21, on the Long Island coast. The other fourteen—and this was the first marked disaster that has occurred in the limits covered by the operations of the service—were lost from the ill-fated Italian bark Giovanni. During the past summer a series of experiments have been made under the direction of Capt. Ottinger, of the revenue marine service, with a view of securing, if possible, a greater range with the shot line. Capt. Merryman, Inspector of life-saving stations, has also been similarly engaged, and has been assisted by the Board of Experimental Gunnery on the ordnance corps. Capt. Ottinger has increased the range by using a heavier mortar and a smaller line, but no opportunity to test its efficiency has yet occurred. A relief boat-house, containing a mortar, life-car, boat and other portions of the life-saving apparatus, has been erected at the point of land nearest the scene of the Giovanni disaster, which is one of the worst places on the coast, and Capt. Ottinger's mortar will be kept there hereafter. The following figures will give a good idea of what this branch of the service has done since its reorganization in 1871:

Lives imperilled	2,563
Lives saved	2,564
Lives lost	19
Shipwrecked persons sheltered	398
Days' shelter afforded	1,357
Value of property imperilled	$6,293,658
Value of property saved	4,314,758
Value of property lost	1,734,902

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

Early in the year 1775, the Revolutionary War was evidently approaching. John Wentworth, the last Royal Provincial Governor of New Hampshire, finding he could not conciliate the people and bring them to submit to the designs of Britain, left the country in the summer of that year. A Provincial Assembly had been chosen from year to year for some time; also a Council to advise with the Governor. A new Assembly was chosen, perhaps in March, and it met at Exeter, April 21, 1775. This was two days after the battle of Lexington. This body took upon itself the name of Congress. We have a list of its members, sixty-eight in all, from thirty-four towns. Portsmouth sent four, viz.: Dr. Joshua Brackett, Jacob Treadwell, John Fickering, Esq., and Capt. Wm. Whipple. Exeter had five: Col. Nath'l Folsom, Col. Nicholas Gilman, Dr. John Giddings, Theophilus Gilman and Enoch Poor. Stratham was largely represented, having five: Stephen Boardman, Capt. Joseph Hoit, Daniel Clark, Stephen Piper and Ezra Barker. From Hampton were Jonathan Moultea, Esq., Col. Christopher Toppan and Capt. Joshua Moulton. From Dover, Stephen Evans, Esq., Capt. John Waldron and Nathaniel Cooper. From Greenland, Col. Clement March and Major Wm. Weeks. We will give no more names but those of Joseph Cilley of Nottingham, afterward in the Revolutionary war, Meshach Weare of Hampton Falls, afterward Governor of the State, and Josiah Bartlett of Kingston, also Governor. Col. John Wentworth of Somersworth was chosen President. He soon after was Chief Justice of the Superior Court of the State. From the names here given, and others that might be, it is evident this legislative body was one of great talent.

Four days later, that is, April 25th, there was an addition of forty-one members from thirty-seven other towns, making in all one hundred and nine members. Among these were John Dudley, of Raymond, afterward Judge of the Superior Court, and Matthew Thornton, Esq., of Londonderry, the next year one of the Delegates to the Continental Congress, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

This Congress, as it was called, was in session about four weeks and appears to have been a busy one. Its public acts were not many, but letters addressed to it were considered. Committees to confer with the Massachusetts Congress and the Committee of Safety of that colony, were appointed, and measures taken for the safety of the people in the emergency of the times. The storm clouds of war were gathering; muttering thunders were heard; men of patriotism and firmness were needed and they were there.

On the 26th of April it was unanimously resolved to recommend to all the towns to provide their proportion of the £500, lawful money, in biscuit, flour and pork, to be carefully kept for purposes that might be needed. The following was at the same date: "Voted mem con, That it be Recommended to the several Towns, Parishes & places in their Province to Engage as many men in each Town as think fit to be properly Equipt & ready to march at a minute's warning at any Emergency." We preserve the capitals, etc.

Looking back now to that period one hundred years ago, we see a scattered population of about eighty-two thousand souls, the larger part in rural homes in the wilderness, panting to be free from the oppressive measures of the mother country, and arming themselves for the impending conflict.

—The following conversation took place at a tea-table in Bangor, Me.: Five year old to his mother: "Mother, can I have cooky?" "No, my son." "Mother, can I have a quarter of a cooky?" "No, my son." "Can I have a crumb of a cooky?" "No!" "Well, then, can I smell of a cooky?"

SEEKING INFORMATION.

In running over Ralph Waldo Emerson's new book we came upon the following passage:

Courage to ask questions; courage to expose our ignorance. The great gain is, not to shine, not to conquer your companions—then you learn nothing but conceit—but to find a companion who knows what you do not; to flit with him and be overthrown, horse and foot, with utter destruction of all your logic and learning. There is a defeat that is useful.

We resolved to act upon the above at once. We called in our landlord and asked him what the rent of our room would be the coming month. He told us. That was a fair start. We had exposed our ignorance, and mentally praised ourselves for courage. Then we proceeded to multiply questions. We asked him where he lived before he came to Nevada. He informed us that he was by birth a near neighbor of the late respected Daniel Webster. That increased our respect for him (for the landlord, not for Webster.) We then asked him how much lumber was worth in the Granite State. He answered promptly, (promptness is a characteristic of our landlord,) Then we got the price of brick in New Hampshire, the value of mechanics' labor, the probable cost of a bed, carpet and washstand, and the rate of interest on money in the land of the White Mountains. We said to ourself: "Emerson would be delighted could he but hear this." At last we ventured to ask our host if he belonged to any religious denomination. He informed us that he was baptized in a mill pond on the Merrimac, and had tried to live a life becoming a Christian and a Close Communion Baptist. We then asked him how he could reconcile his conscience to charge us more rent for a room than it would cost to build a house in New Hampshire and an interest on an investment here which is more per month than the State of New Hampshire permits landlords to take by the year. He eyed us a moment over his spectacles, and then said: "That's what you are driving at, is it? Let me tell you that a man who mixes religion with rents in Virginia City will not last long; and, further, that if you do not like this room there are plenty outside who would. The rate I spoke of is only for this month; next month it will be more." We had followed Emerson's advice to the letter, gained a good deal of information, but some how we didn't feel any better. It must be that Emerson is not so great a man as we thought he was.—Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.

Nothing to "Boast" Of.

The Concord People says "the republican editors in the State are exciting themselves greatly over the Congressional record of Hon. Daniel Marcy, our democratic candidate for Governor;" and remarks that "what to them appears a crime in a candidate is his recommendation to every honest and patriotic man in the State," and that "Mr. Marcy's justification is recognized and asserted by every intelligent, patriotic man in New Hampshire." The People goes on to say that the action of the republicans during the war, prompted by "what they called 'war necessities,'" put republican progress back for half a century; and that Mr. Marcy's action in Congress "was his pride then, and the boast of his friends now." No doubt some of his secession friends, such as Ben. Hill, Bob Toombs and gentry of their stamp, might "boast" of his rendering all the aid he could, with his voice and his vote, to their endeavors to destroy the Union, while the republicans, acting under "what they called 'war necessities,'" were making tremendous exertions to checkmate the "honest and patriotic" schemes of the disunion democracy; but if his friends around here, however much they may have sympathized with his action at the time, are now inclined to "boast" much of it, they haven't yet made that inclination apparent. We are evidently more of a real friend to Daniel than his own party papers, for we keep standing some extracts from a speech of his, in which he consigns Abraham Lincoln and those who struggled to save the nation's life to "the deep execration of those who revere the Union" and "to the inheritance of eternal infamy." If the People is inclined to "boast" of Marcy's Congressional record, we suggest that it follow our example and keep his most famous sayings at the head of its columns.

December and May.

Peirce and Gardner, publishers of the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE in 1807, were evidently not slow to appreciate a joke. Under date of Jan. 13, 1807, we find the following:

In Birmingham (Eng.,) very suddenly, Mr. Wm. Stanley, aged 98, to Miss Julia Waterman, aged 15.

In their issue of March 31st, the marriage at Passawunk, Me., of Mr. Samuel Smart and Miss Sally Paine, was made the occasion of a rhyme inserted with the marriage notice and reading as follows:

Two lovers, Pierced by Cupid's dart,
Long sighed for Hymen's chain.
She kindly longed to have his SMART
And he to have her PAIN.

A Priest they call'd, nor call'd in vain,
His blessing to impart:
He soon gave longing Samuel PAIN,
And made fond Sally SMART.

Jottings.

The English Opera Company which rendered "Maritana" so finely here a few weeks ago, will reappear in "The Bohemian Girl," at the Temple, on Wednesday evening, Feb. 19th.

The freight over the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad is said to average from ten to seventeen car-loads per diem.

Robert Macklin, a former resident of Portsmouth, who was born in Scotland, and died at Wakefield in 1787 at the age of 115 years, was a baker by trade. He frequently walked from Portsmouth to Boston in one day, returning in another. This journey he performed the last time, at the age of eighty.

A valuable horse belonging to S. M. DeMerritt, Esq., fell on the ice Thursday, broke his leg, and had to be killed.

The gale of Wednesday is said by Capt. Mardon, of the navy yard ferry boat "Emerald," who has crossed the river nearly every day for ten years past, to have been the toughest he ever encountered. The few workmen on the yard were unable to cross the river in their boats on the return trip, and came across in the Emerald.

Chelsea people have been excited over a whipping administered to a boy named Harrington by John P. Payson, Esq., (formerly of this city) his teacher, for refusing to read a verse in the Bible as the other pupils did. It seems that the parents of the boy are Catholics and had been discussing the matter in the family, which led him to refuse to read. Mr. Payson did not know he was a Catholic. The boy's parents sent him back to school, expressing themselves as quite ready to trust in the fairness of Mr. Payson.

Three schooners were ashore in the lower harbor on Thursday, driven there by Wednesday's gale. U. S. S. Speedwell, Capt. Gardner, went to their assistance Thursday afternoon.

One of the finest displays of choice oil paintings, elegantly framed, ever seen here, is now on exhibition at M. T. Betton & Co.'s, and is deservedly attracting attention. They are first-class in every respect, and to be sold without reserve at auction, as is announced in the advertisement. None of the gems will be disposed of at private sale. Go and see them.

Messrs. Editors; I sometimes think that I will never again write an article for a newspaper, but when I read such communications as that of "S. F." it stirs me again. Is it true that in such a country as this there is irremediable poverty to any great extent? and that there is not skill enough in the whole city of Portsmouth to devise a method of cleaning out those mill ponds?

It is not so bad to be poor in purse as to be destitute of a disposition to improve the lessons of poverty. The writer's observation is that the present inconsiderate and wasteful application of the means of living is a far greater difficulty to be overcome, than the mere feeding and clothing of the poor. As to those ponds, I think that if my farm was as contiguous as the many acres that stretch off from those shores, I would try to find some method of appropriations. I have practiced to a small extent on muscle beds and would like very well to be one of fifty or a hundred men determined to ascertain if there is any feasible method for the ponds.

One who se ems to keep his loins girded up for the good work—City Missionary Wm. A. Loyne.

We have received Nos. 5-8 inclusive, four numbers, of Zell's Popular Encyclopaedia Dictionary, edited by L. Colange, D. D., which we have previously commended as combining the advantages of a whole library of general information. History, biography, geography, science, art and language are all dealt with in these numbers with a comprehensiveness which leaves nothing to be desired, as well as with an attention to details which enables the reader to find just the facts he is in search of under their appropriate head and with the least possible expenditure of time. The great feature of this encyclopædia is the skill which it exhibits of the great art of condensation. Here are in a paragraph the distillations of volumes, and the conciseness of the style does not impair the interest of the description. The illustrations in these numbers are not only numerous but felicitous, helping as they do to deepen and enlarge the impression made by the text. There is frequently a charming suggestiveness about them. For example, the compact information which we have here about Aurungzebe, the Great Mogul, whose reign in India is compared to that of Louis XIV. in France, is made additionally attractive by the stately pile representing the tombs of the Kings of Golconda. This Encyclopædia, with its excellent maps, it will be seen, serves the place of many volumes as a work of reference, while the freshness as well as fullness of its information will tempt many readers to turn over its attractive pages, which are lighted up by illustrations that emphasize the value and significance of its excellent literary contents. This valuable work is sold only by subscription. A specimen part, with maps, will be sent to any address for twenty cents. Philadelphia: Published by Baker, Davis & Co, Thompsonville, Conn. For sale by Horace King.

Planets in View.

Venus is seen by most people at this time, as it is evening star, and will be such until July 14. It is in the constellation Aquarius, having lately passed out of Capricornus. It is at this time brilliant as ordinarily seen and very beautiful. It sets later and later each evening, giving all a good opportunity to see it.

Jupiter is bright as morning star in the constellation Libra. In the month of February, the first part of it particularly, it will be up before early travellers, that is, before two o'clock, and so when seen in the gray of the morning, will be about at the place of the sun at nine or ten o'clock. It will be morning star till May 17. It is worth seeing.

Mars sets as late as ten o'clock in the evening, but it is rather dim at this time. Saturn sets early in the evening and our view of it is rather poor with the naked eye.

—A day or two ago, when a young man entered a Detroit lawyer's office to study law, the practitioner sat down beside him and said:

"Now, see here, I have no time to fool away, and if you don't pan out well I won't keep you here thirty days. Do you want to make a good lawyer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, now, listen. Be polite to old people, because they have cash. Be good to the boys, because they are growing up to a cash basis. Work in with reporters and get puffs. Go to church for the sake of example. Don't fool any time away on poetry, and don't even look at a girl until you can plead a case. If you can follow these instructions you will succeed. If you cannot, go and learn to be a doctor and kill your best friends."

HENDERSON'S

CLOSING-OUT

SALE.

A lady bought a dollar's worth of Dry Goods, in my Store and got for a Present a four-pound Bar of Soap. She tore off the corner of the paper wrapper enough to see what the package contained, when with a look of disgust she passed it back to the clerk with a request to have it exchanged, adding the remark that she already had five dollars' worth of soap at home. Well, I exchanged the package (although against the rule) and upon removing the wrapper FOUND A CHECK FOR THE $55 CHAMBER SET. I am determined that SOME ONE SHALL TAKE THAT

I have placed the Check back again in the box of Presents, and a purchaser of One Dollar's worth of goods will get it.

Daily Chronicle.

—From time to time articles have gone the rounds of the press stating the value of the cranberry cure as applied in erysipelas, and so wonderful have the cures effected seemed that many are disposed to take the stories with a grain of allowance. But now we have a case in this city, where a remarkable cure has been effected, and the patient is around and able to testify to the wonder of this simple remedy. Judge Cantwell, of the police court, about two weeks ago, was taken with an attack of erysipelas in the left leg, and in a short time the disease increased to an alarming extent, running well up into the thigh. The usual poulticing with flax-seed, etc., was resorted to, but no relief was had, and the sufferings of the patient increased. Last Thursday, however, a friend suggested to him that he try the cranberry cure, whereupon the Judge got the berries, had them well bruised and applied to the injured limb, and after the poultice had been on for a few hours he expressed himself as experiencing greater relief than at any previous time during his illness. The remedy was continued, and this afternoon the Judge had so far recovered as to be able to leave his room and take a carriage ride, and in a day or two he will be able to resume his official duties. Naturally he has now a strong faith in the curative properties of the cranberry and is loud in praises thereof.—Sacramento Herald.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package was cured, or spoke of it themself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cases were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LAKE.—For over Twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that I was bedridden, could not eat, had much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt incredulous by the time I got, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package lasted me nearly one month, and I thought I effected cure took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reported himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Vial.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LAKE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. D. B. LEONARD.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint, Dyspepsia Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LAKE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered much from a Neuralgia and Rheumatism; also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, and tried everything, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken half of them I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at my change, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammatory Rheumatism, and I recommended her to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think I have spoken of your Pills to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.50; please send two packages. Yours respectfully,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.50 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall closely watch every wonder and circumstance which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to place the power of the Administration now drawing to a close. In the course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fail to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our history. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are now signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and industry and industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford to spend such a year without the digest of an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan accentuation or personal bias. Such a journal, we provide sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and industry and industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the banners of any party. It will never waver at conclusions or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the shortcomings of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the facts, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, and economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of their worst practices of the old machine system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal the a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favors it has so long and so generously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete Papers on the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in each department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the quince of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

READING FOR CHILDREN.
OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.
A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.
A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.
WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.
CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS
Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in
A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL
On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spontaneously laid before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have evoking, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these sanitary issues of literature we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."
The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits "ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In
That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."
A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.
REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR GIRLS AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."
In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00;
Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and "either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.50 Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.
Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.
The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc., more than equal in contents to 25 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!
Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

TO ROB A BANK.

During the trial of the Germond burglars at Utica, N. Y., a reporter interviewed one of the rascals whose story is published in the Utica Herald, as follows:

"I had just as lief tell you all about it as not, but I don't care to have you blab it in the papers at present. When a man works up a soft thing; that is, when he hears of or discovers a bank that is likely to have a quantity of money at a certain time, it is his job, and his first thought is to select his "pals." You see it is delicate work and he is obliged to have partners that he knows can be trusted or he may get into hot water. He readily thinks of one who is safe beyond doubt. Supposing it is my job, I find out if that man has any other job on hand that will interfere. If not I 'feel him' to see if he is willing to join in the work. If the second man agrees, then the job is explained; if not, that ends it with him. If he agrees, I inquire of No. 2, who we shall have to help us. No. 2 suggests some one I do not know or against whom I have objection. I object, and that settles him. I suggest some one and No. 2 objects; that settles him, for we have implicit confidence in each other. We finally agree upon one and then feel of him. If he can go, we explain the job and then nominate as many more as may be necessary, rejecting every man that is objected to by any of the others.

The number of the party is governed by the work to be performed. If it is the simple robbing of an unguarded bank two are sometimes enough; no more than four are needed at the most—remember the fewer the number the larger the 'divy' and the less the chances for 'squealing.' If the job involves the robbery of the house, or the overpowering of the bank officer, or the 'covering' of the watchman, of course more men are needed, and five, six or seven are necessary. We can not afford to lose a job after it is once commenced by not having power enough. Talking about the keys reminds me that I haven't told you how we get at the location of those things.

Sometimes the man who owns the job works it up ready for immediate operations when the gang is formed. Possibly he may not be good at that part of the work on account of his size, style, marks or scars about his face, or for reasons which you will understand. Then he is obliged to include some one in the party who is good for that part, and he is sent out. If the bank is located in a country town, he makes up some businesss which calls him to the bank frequently and disarms suspicion. Quietly but surely he studies the 'works' of the bank itself, and when that is learned, devotes himself to the works of the vault and safes. We frequently have safe and locksmiths in our gangs, men who have been discharged or who have left of their own free will to join another mob. They are very valuable pals, as a casual glance at a vault or safe door will give them an idea if tools are needed, or what work is to be done to get into the strong box. Sometimes it takes weeks and months to lay out the work, and not unfrequently the jig is up just as we are ready, by the removal of the money, but that is not always bad as the knowledge of the works once gained is always valuable for another time. After a man knows the bank vaults, windows and doors perfectly, he gets in with watchmen, clerks, porters or cashier, the one most available. This is done in different ways. Old bank watchmen are honest and sleepy. They will talk with a man that does not look totally bad, and sometimes they make easy work for us. If one of the clerks sleeps in the bank, we get in with him at the billiard rooms, saloons or restaurants, treat him well, drink and smoke with him, tell him all our business, talk wine, women, cards or religion, whatever will suit him best, and it does not take long to make him turn himself inside out and tell all about who carries the key of the vault and safe, where he lives and how he sleeps, the number in his family, and other things of that character that we must know. Wine, whiskey and cigars go a great ways with bank clerks. Sometimes, they carry all the keys and show them readily, in which case it is easy to see them, get impressions in wax or to 'lift' them when they are needed. The scout studies the movements of the police, night watchmen, dogs, etc. He learns the roads, turnpikes, railroad time cards, and everything that can be learned, and then the job is ready.

He reports at the headquarters, word is sent to all the men, keys, tools, masks, and other things are made, the plan is settled and a night is agreed upon. Each man is told what part he is to perform, how he is to go to the town, where he is to stop, at what time and place they are to meet and what route he is to take after the work is done. The originator of the job is the captain, and all must obey his orders implicitly. Whatever "swag," money or valuables, is obtained goes into his hands first and he superintends the division. The tools are divided up and the men set out in different directions to meet at the same place. Possibly the man who has been hanging around the town, scouting, is not required to do much work or to show himself, as he might attract too much attention upon his return. All manage to get into the place after dark and to be seen as little as possible, as the people of small towns are curious Yankees and suspect all strangers. One of the gang scouts the town earlier than the rest to see that nothing unusual is to occur.

The men meet, do the job—you know how, as the story is always told in full in the paper next day with innumerable lies invented by the watchman, cashier or clerk, as they know or think that no one will ever contradict them. The swag is all put into one carpet bag in the hands of the captain, who locks it and throws the key away, hides the bag or takes it with him. The party separates, each one taking the route agreed upon. Revolvers and bludgeons are carried only for the purpose of intimidation, and are never used except when absolutely necessary for self-defense. If any shooting is done the intention is to wound limbs, to prevent pursuit, and not to kill, but sometimes we do that by accident or from necessity. Chloroform is used to quiet dogs, watchmen, cashiers, clerks and women. Sometimes women are included in the party, and they are very useful in running away with the wiss, money, brains and keys of foolish clerks. I have known women to interest a young man at a hotel or restaurant long enough to allow her pal to rob the bank with the keys she had stolen from his pockets.

If we can meet soon after the robbery without suspicion, we do so, open the bag, divide evenly all around and separate quickly. If our gang is well known, we fight shy, watch the police closer than they watch us, and get together in due time. If we were 'broke' before the job was done, we keep broke at the bars, hotels or restaurants. Sometimes we get credit for months after the job is done, as being flush with money might expose the whole job. Bartenders, hotel men, prostitutes, and gamblers, frequently lay in with the police and keep them posted about the movements of thieves, when they have money, when absent from the city, how long they are gone, and when they return. We can trust nobody but ourselves. As every man gets an even share he can't complain, and if he squeals on one, I wouldn't give much for his life. Sooner or later his pals will get their claws upon him, and then—it's all up with him. He will be tracked all over the earth, in the forests, mines, or on the seas, and then—oh! oh! oh! God help a squealer! I'd rather be hung right there in that corner of the cell this minute, than give away one of my pals."

"Well," the burglar continued, "That's the way it's done; the work is varied according to circumstances. It's the devil's own life, and I am tired of it. I have had thousands some days and the next have been hunted like a dog, without knowing where to look for shelter or having a cent in my pocket. What do we do with our money? Oh, it goes as easy as it comes. Nearly all thieves gamble, and few are lucky at cards. What they don't spend in gambling they squander on wine and women, or perhaps they have to put up for some pal who had been caught and caged. It don't last long, any way, and when it is gone and our credit is played out, we put up another job, go through the same motions and sometimes get food, clothing and shelter from the State for years—we must take it as it comes. Half-past-one! I wonder what the jury is hanging on! It looks favorable for me, but I shouldn't be surprised if the jig was up! I'll take it like a man, and never squeal! I could tell lots of other things if I had time."

Within an hour the jury dropped in, gave a verdict, and the reporters's companion knew where he was to be located for the next fifteen or eighteen years.

The Lady and the Burglar.

Miss Mattie White, who was visiting in the family of Mr. John Whittlesey, the Cashier of the Northampton Bank, when the great robbery occurred, furnishes an interesting account of her experience with the robbers. The first intimation she had of what was going on was soon after midnight, when a man entered her sleeping room with a dark lantern. She screamed, thinking that the house was on fire, and sprang out of bed, when the man put her back and told her he would treat her kindly if she kept quiet. "You are all caught," said the robber, "and you may as well give up." He then told her to get up. "I begged him to let me lie there," continued Miss White; "but he said 'No,' and pulled me up and led me into the hall and then handcuffed me. After getting me into the hall he said that I would take cold without more clothing and led me back into my room, when I obtained more clothes, and he took me with them. Very shortly after, Maria, Aunt Hattie and her husband walked into the same room, and, after they had got us all in that room, they made us all get up separately and dress. Of course we were rigged in each other's clothing, and some were half-dressed. They opened Laura's bureau drawer and took out her handsome violet cloak and handed it to her, saying, "I guess that is what you want." She put that on with her balmoral skirt, and then I was fixed up, and they fell short of handcuffs. Then Laura and I were joined by one handcuff, and they took us off into the front room and put us in the bed, and then tied our hands and feet with leather straps, buckled as tight as possible. Then they took heavy ropes and slipped through these, and brought the rope under the bed, and fastened it with extra ropes Besides. They served us all in this way. The last operation was to gag us with rubber gags. Laura and I extricated ourselves first by the greatest effort, bed and all, to the window, about 6 o'clock in the morning, and with one free hand opened the window and alarmed the neighborhood. We had to have our handcuffs filed apart, and it was about 9 o'clock when Laura and I were separated."

—Mark Taylor, a young negro at Sedalia, Mo., has gone mad and believes himself to be the Saviour. In his paroxysms he recites whole chapters and even books of the Bible without missing a word, a feat all the more remarkable because he cannot read and was always a vicious boy. So the papers say, and there is no law to prevent any one believing it who chooses.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

A Georgia orator says in a burst of enthusiasm: "I am glad that this yere day have arrived. Now I see the Lost Cause a-pickin'up. There's Ben Cooper, who led our boys gallantly agin the beef-fed Yanks at Gettysburg; where now is he? Why, he's nowhere more or less than occupying the place of a Yankee soldier at the capital of this yere nation. It's a long time coming but I tell you, it's got to come. The South must rule these yere United States!" And when they took up the collection, the amount bore evidence of an appreciative audience.

A colored convict in the Massachusetts State Prison, named George Newton, was killed on Friday by being carried around a shaft, while at work whitewashing the ceiling. He was sentenced for two years in September, 1874, for forgery, and was but twenty years old.

Concerning the embarrassment of the Eastern Railway, of Massachusetts, Baring Brothers, bankers, have issued a circular saying that having shared the general confidence reposed in the company and its management to the extent of specially recommending the sterling bonds as an investment to many persons, they give notice that they will take up the interest bonds provided for at the meeting at Boston on the 15th of January, and pay full interest on the £600,000 of bonds issued by them as usual on the 1st of March and 1st of September, 1876.

A Catholic church at Biddeford, used for a school, was burned Thursday morning. Loss $6000. Cause of fire unknown.

A new barn and other farm buildings belonging to Harvey Barney of Claremont were burned on Thursday, during the gale, catching fire from a defective stove-pipe. There was no insurance. Mr. and Mrs. Barney are nearly eighty years old and he is an invalid.

Mrs. Huldah Marston, of Hampton, is ninety-six years of age and is the oldest person in Hampton. She can read without glasses, can do her own work, goes out of doors, and steps around as spry as most any woman of three-score. She lives with her son, Col. David Marston, and his family, who are justly proud of their aged relative.

The stage drivers on the line of the Great Falls and Conway Railroad say that Wednesday, Feb. 2d, was the severest day they ever experienced. Immense trees were blown across the roads in many places. At North Conway a man sent in the evening to flag a train did not return and was found nearly frozen.

Views of an Expert on Women and Men.

[Home Journal.]

Perhaps there is no more painful time in a woman's life than the time of transition, when the assiduous lover is passing into the matter-of-fact husband, and the wooer is gradually changing into the master. Women, who are so much more sensitive than men, more sentimental, too, and less content to trust in silence to an undemonstrative affection, are for the most part happy only while they are being made love to. It is not enough to be loved; they want to be told twenty times a day, and to have the harmonies of life enriched by a crowd of "occasional notes," embroidering the solid substance by which they live. Men, on the contrary, get tired of making love. When they have wooed and won, they are content to be quiet, and to take all the rest for granted. They are not cold, however, because they are secure; and to most—and those the best—practical kindness is better than flattery, security ranks before excitement and hysteria, and life passed in serene friendship, fearing no evil, knowing no break, and needing no praising, is better than life passed in a perpetual turmoil of passion, where there are scenes and tears, and doubt, and broken hearts, if there are not endless courtships and fatiguing demonstrations.

NOT QUITE HARMONIOUS.

They drove into town Monday, behind a cross-eyed mule and a spavined horse. They looked contented, but one member of the party was the head of the house, for she handled the ribbons, and when they halted she hitched the team, while he stood demurely by and took the basket of eggs and her shopping satchel as she handed them out. They disposed of their produce at the grocery, and then entered a dry goods store.

She made a few trifling purchases of thread, pins, needles, and such things, and then called for two knots of yarn.

"That won't be enough, Mary," said the man, plucking at her dress.

"I guess I know what I'm buying," she retorted.

"But it ain't more'n half what you've had afore," he persisted.

"Wal, that's none o' your bisness; these socks are goin' to be for me, and if I want 'em short, you can have your'n come way up to your neck if you want to."

The old man bowed to the inevitable with a long sigh as his partner turned to the clerk and said:

"Two yards of cheap shirtin', if you please."

"That ain't enough, Mary," said the old man, plucking at her dress again.

"Yes, 'tis."

"No, it ain't."

"Wall, it's all you'll git," she snapped out.

"Put it up then, mister," said he, turning to the clerk; "put it up, and we won't have any."

"Who's doin' this buyin', I should like to know?" hissed the woman.

"You are, Mary, you are," he admitted; "but you can't palm off no short shirts on me."

"You act like a fool, John Spiner."

"Mebbe I do, Mary, but I'll be durned to gosh if I'll have half a shirt—no, not if I go naked."

"Wall, I say two yards is enough to make any one two shirts," she snapped.

"Mebbe that's enough for you, Mary," he said, very quietly; "p'raps you can git along with a collar button and a neck band, but that ain't me; and I don't propose to freeze my legs to save eight cents."

"Git what you want, then!" she shrieked, pushing him over the stool; "git ten yards; git a full piece; git a dozen pieces if you want 'em, but remember that I'll make you sick for this."

"Four yards, if you please, mister—four yards," said he to the clerk; "and just remember," he continued, "if you hear of 'em findin' me with my head busted, friz to death in a snow drift, just remember that you heard her say she'd make me sick."

And grasping the bundle, he followed his better half out the door.—Fulton Times.

NOW AND THEN.

[From a Centennial speech in the House of Representatives by Caspar H. Harrison of Illinois.]

Think, Mr. Chairman, of the difference between now and 1776. A common eagle, extending his flight from the extreme eastern limits of civilization to its western limits in 1776, would have made that flight in one single day. To-day the proudest monarch of the forest, lifting himself from the Atlantic and looking to the setting sun, ever intent on sailing onward, days, aye weeks, will have passed before he shall be able to cool his wearied pinions in the spray of the Pacific; and yet we are afraid of making a centennial precedent of celebrating the glorious boon handed down to us by 1776.

Sir, ninety-two years ago, when the first anniversary of the Fourth of July was celebrated, after the acknowledgement of Independence, when the gun first belched forth upon the eastern slopes of Maine, at sunrise, that the day of our National birth had come, as in the sun's rapid flight across the continent gun after gun was heard, in less than one hour the last gun was heard on our western limits, and was echoed by the crack of the red man's rifle, and the war-whoop of the Indian was the chorus to the orator's patriotic words. What is it to-day?

When the sun shall rise on the Fourth of July next, and shall gild the hilltops on the St. John's and the boom of the cannon is heard announcing the one hundredth birthday of our existence, as the sun shall roll on in his march of a thousand miles an hour, and gun after gun shall catch up the detonation of the last gun, the national anthem will swell, and, as it goes westward until reaching a line stretching from the far north to the extreme south of the Gulf of Mexico, one grand peal shall be heard, a peal of a thousand guns, rocking the very foundations of earth, echoed to the blue vaults of heaven, mingling its tones with the songs of the stars as they roll in their musical spheres. Aye, sir, that tone, that grand National anthem rolling over a land teeming with population, rich in all that blesses man, will take nearly five hours going from our eastern to our western limits; and yet we can not vote three and a quarter cents each of the people's money for the celebration of the magnificent boon our forefathers have given us.

—A leap year tragedy—They stood together in the entry beneath the hall lamp, says the Chicago Tribune. "Then, Henry," she said in a low voice, wherein were blended determination, melancholy and love, "you refuse my suit?" "Yes, Ella," he replied in accents that were firm, though the speaker's voice trembled. "I admire you; I will be a brother to you, and watch with pride your course through life, and if ever trouble should befall you, there will at least be one friend to whom you can come for succor; but I can never, never, be your husband." "It is not because I am poor, Henry. For, oh, if that were all, I could toil gladly from morn till night for you, and strive and win a home for you, humble it might be, but our own." "It is useless to attempt to induce me to change my determination. Though I am but a poor, weak man, I can never, never change my mind." "Then, cruel young man, so fair and yet so false, farewell. Tomorrow you will see my mangled remains on the lecture platform, and know that it has been your work. But it will be too late," and, clasping him to her bosom in a wild embrace, she fled into the outer darkness.

—He lived in Pittsburg, and his wife wanted to give a party. Like a good husband he consented, and promised to see to the invitations himself. He had about 150 prepared, but looking upon R. S. V. P.—reply if you please, and all such requests as affectations with which he would have nothing to do, but the little notes were got ready without them. The all-important evening arrived, and so did twelve o'clock, but not a single guest of the family was surprised and annoyed. He couldn't understand it, till happening to open his fine desk he found the invitations nicely piled up within. He had forgotten to send them off. He had paid for the supper, the band and decorations; in fact, settled everything very well, except the explanation to Mrs. Pittsburg and daughters.

Mrs. Robert Murphy writes that she employed several skilful physicians and paid out hundreds of dollars for medicines, and was cured by Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam.

A Contrast Worthy Public Attention.

What is the effect of a drastic purgative upon the constipated bowels and a dyspeptic stomach? The intestine is emptied so violently as to weaken and render it still more inactive, and the gastric juices vitiated by contact with an indigestible medicine, lose the chemical qualities which constitute them the only true solvents of the food. Results—aggravated constipation and chronic indigestion. What, on the other hand, are the effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters on the same organs. The bowels are moved, but without violence, and at the same time acquire healthful tone; the gastric secretions are stimulated and improved, and duly perform their part in the processes which eventuate in the nutrition of every part of the human structure. Results—a regular habit of body, sound digestion and vigor. Let the public draw its own conclusions from this contrast.

Railroad Conundrums.

The Times copies from the Manchester Union a review of the democratic prospects of carrying the Senate at the coming State election, in which it says the republicans "do not hope to elect Cheney by the people"—which the republicans not only do "hope" but confidently expect to do—and complains that in the 4th district "our friends have a powerful influence against them which ought never to be brought into the political field, viz.: the Northern Railroad." It further says: "We shall ask the stockholders of that road before the election, to consider the financial condition of the road, the great depreciation of its stock, and the reduction of their dividend, and to inquire whether its political use has anything to do with it."

That's all very well; but if it is so heinous for the Northern Railroad influence to be brought into the political field, how do the Union and Times stand the way in which the Eastern Railroad influence has been used to help the democratic party since F. Jones has been on its Board of Directors? While the democratic sheets are engaged in giving out railroad conundrums we hope they will "ask the stockholders of that [the Eastern] road before the election, to consider the financial condition of the road, the great depreciation of its stock, and the reduction of their dividends, and to inquire whether its political use has anything to do with it."

Jonathan Barker's Will.

Hon. Thomas L. Tullock, of Washington, D. C., one of the executors of the will of the late Jonathan Barker, Esq., of this city, who died June 20, 1866, sends to Zion's Herald an authentic copy of the will, and the announcement that by the recent death of the widow of the deceased, Sarah P. Barker, at the advanced age of 85 years, who during her life received the net annual income of the estate, the legacies mentioned in the will are now payable. We publish the bequests, from this authorative source, to wit: $8,650 to individuals—generally relatives,—there are no children; $500 to the Missionary Society of the New Hampshire Methodist Annual Conference, auxiliary to the Parent Society, located in New York city; $500 to the Sunday-school Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church; $400 to the Tract Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the legacies to be used for the purpose of the Societies; $1,000 to the permanent endowment of the Methodist General Biblical Institute at Concord, or if removed from that city, to the Institution wherever located, if in New England (it is now established in Boston University;) $1000 to the New Hampshire Conference Seminary and Female College at Tilton, to be used for the best interests of the institution; $1000 to the State Street Methodist Episcopal Church of this city, the income to be appropriated—one half for current expenses, the other half to be equally divided between the Sunday-school and poor fund of said Church; $1,500 to the Trustees of the New Hampshire Methodist Annual Conference, the income to be annually distributed among the superannuated preachers of said Conference, their widows and orphan children; $1000 to said Trustees, the income to be appropriated by vote of the Conference to aid indigent young men preparing for the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, preference being had for those designing to join the New Hampshire Conference; $500 to the Howard Benevolent Society of this city; $500 to the Masonic Association, known as St. John's Lodge, No. 1, Portsmouth, N. H.; to the Trustees of the New Hampshire Methodist Annual Conference, in trust, the remainder of the estate, amounting to upward of $6,000. The annual income is to be appropriated as in the judgment of said Conference will best promote the prosperity and interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church within its bounds.

The Eastern Railroad.

The report of the directors, just issued, concludes as follows:

Feeling, therefore, full confidence in the ability of the road to carry all its burdens, provided they are carefully adjusted to its strength, your directors have an abiding faith, that what is so much for the interest of all will be speedily and happily accomplished that the plan now before the legislature, the provisions of which in the main command the approval of all parties, will receive such modifications as the legislature in its wisdom may find that the actual necessities of the case demand; and that the road, once more placed upon a secure basis, wisely and economically managed, will enter upon a career of prosperity more solid and enduring than any it has ever known.

The general balance sheet shows that the construction account amounts to $12,739,-246 98; the equipment to $2,358,567 05; of the property, the actual value of some of the items being a question for the future to determine, $8,821, 521 32; and the balance due, from station agents, other roads, and sundry accounts, $320,712 53; total $19,-250,047 88. On the other hand, the capital stock amounts to $4,997,600; bonds payable 1876-93, $5,691,448: sinking-fund loan, payable in 1884, $2,000,000; ten-year coupon notes, payable 1882-84, $3,676,500; temporary loan, $2,751,425; borrowed money, pay-roll for November, and current expense bills, $282,555 55; coupons, interest on registered bonds and dividends unpaid, $82,051 86; interest accrued December, 1875, $248,260 40; balance due other roads and sundry accounts, $127,308 17; total, $19,857,248 98. The profit and loss account shows a deficit of $607,201 10, and the increase of construction account from December 1, 1874, to November 30, 1875, $2,318,-603 90. The debt of the road is as follows: Bonds Eastern Railroad, $5,691,448; sinking fund loan, $2,000,000; ten-year notes, $3,676,500; notes payable $1,775,400; notes payable Portland, Saco & Portsmouth Railroad, $250,000; mortgages, $724,125; bonds Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway, $514,000; debt without interest, $270,956 55; total, $14,904,429 55. The dividends when earned amount to $398-425, and the interest and dividends guaranteed to $1,131,946 70, making a total of $1,530,370 70.

Aldermen.

The committee on Police, to whom were referred the quarterly and annual reports of the City Marshal, reported them correct.

Petition of Jonathan Dearborn and others, asking that a loan of money be granted to the Portsmouth Cornet Band, was laid on the table.

The committee to whom was referred the matter of fixing the prices of the building lots laid out at the City Farm, reported prices for the same and the report was accepted.

The committee appointed to examine the route of the proposed highway from Edward street to Richards Avenue and to estimate the cost of building the same, reported that the land would answer for a highway, and that the cost of building the road would be $1700.

A hearing was then had on the petition of Ichabod Goodwin and others for a new highway from the south part of Edward street along the South Mill Pond to Richards Avenue.

Voted—That the City Solicitor be requested to inform the Board what remedy the city has in regard to the nuisance at the South Mill Pond.

Adjourned.

Jottings.

Skiff & Gaylord's minstrels are advertised to appear in the Temple, this evening.

"F. F." writes from Washington to the Boston Journal of Congressman Frank Jones that "the restraints of Congressional life are somewhat wearing" and that "it is not certain that he will accept the customary renomination." 'Twill depend, doubtless, on the result of the State and Presidential elections, whether he will want to run again. He has just pride enough to be again a candidate if things take a democratic turn, and enough shrewdness to plead business engagements preventing his candidacy should republican ascendency be assured in State and Nation.

A passenger on the noon train from Boston reported that he had his pocket picked of $150, Friday.

A man in this city went into a barbers' shop on Thursday, got shaved on credit, and then borrowed the tonsorial artist's very best Sunday go-to-meeting coat to wear to a dance that evening. Who now will presume to say there is no need of a religious awakening in this city?

The Concord papers say that the Concord Railroad employes have all been required to sign the pledge. The employes at this end of the route needed no such instructions, and were years ahead of orders. Their signatures to the pledge were given long ago.

On Friday many persons prostrated themselves on our streets, with fervent ejaculations of "mercy," "heavens," "bless me," etc., while others seated themselves on the sidewalks and curbstones and quoted Scripture with great zeal and power,—cheering indications of a general revival of interest in religious matters, and a great improvement over the state of affairs a day or two previous, when the people seemed to be blown about by every wind of doctrine, and offered up all sorts of petitions to innumerable deities.

Subject at the Bow Mission, Sabbath evening, "The Royal Proclamation." The service of praise will be conducted by Dr. E. B. Goodall, assisted by his Sabbath School class and accompanied by a clarinet and violin. Service at 6 P. M.; laboring men especially invited.

The coffee rooms of the Seaman's Home have been placed in charge of Mr. and Mrs. MacIver, formerly connected with Holly Tree Inn, Boston.

The Eastern Railroad report says: "Some time during this year the Reading Coal Company are to erect coal pockets upon Noble's island."

The Journal says of the late John Elwyn: He felt that no man could do two things at the same time well. Having no need of the emoluments of the profession which he had studied, nothing remained to divert his attention from his books and studies, and he early begun that plan of study and investigation which he undeviatingly pursued the rest of his life. * * * He made himself familiar with nearly all the Greek and Latin classics, and he mastered most of the modern languages of Europe, and was able to read with facility Sanscrit, Hebrew, Arabic, and Persian. He was a proficient in the language of Russia, and imported and read the History of that Empire in many volumes. He translated several works from the Magyar language and was familiar with European history. Before his last sickness, he had read critically all the scriptures of the Old Testament in Hebrew ten times, and Mr. Elwyn's reading was not merely skimming over, but ever thoroughly understanding and mastering what he undertook. And before his last sickness he begun and made considerable progress in reading the scriptures in that language for the eleventh time.

—A London journal remarks: "When fruit does harm, it is because it is eaten at improper times, in improper quantities, or before it is ripened and fit for the human stomach. A distinguished physician has said that if his patients would make a practice of eating a couple of good oranges before breakfast, from February till June, his practice would be gone. The principal evil is that we do not eat enough of fruit; that we injure its finer qualities with sugar; that we drown them with cream. We need the medicinal action of the pure fruit acids in our system, and their cooling, corrective influence.

"Know thy Opportunity."

The grim monster, Death, was stealthily approaching. I could almost feel his hot, fiery breath upon my forehead. My faithless goddess, Hygeia, had utterly deserted me. Only now and then would Morpheus befriend me, but on this auspicious day, he had designed to moisten my eyelids with heavenly ambrosia, and I slept. As I slept, behold, I had a dream! I thought that I was roaming upon foreign soil when my physician had sent me to recover my health. I was in a great metropolis—one of the grand marts of the world. In one of my strolls I chanced to meet a man who had in his hand a handsomely bound volume, entitled "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," and who said that he was an agent for the sale of the book. The title was such a novel one that I was impelled to give the work a causal notice. As I hastily glanced over its pages, I observed that it contained treatises not commonly found in medical works. But I had too many times been hoaxed by appearances, and I determined that I would have nothing to do with it. A voice within me, like a faithful mentor, whispered, "Know thy opportunity; in that book is thy salvation!" I began reasoning with myself. Although doubtful and distrustful, yet I put forth my hand to take the book, and lo! the agent was gone! I was miserable. In my agony I awoke. Great drops of perspiration were upon my brow. By my bedside was a friend who had called during my slumber to see me. Said my friend, "I have brought with me a book which I thought might interest you." One glance at the work, and I was assured that it was "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. Surely, this was the veritable book which I had seen in my dreams. My friend loaned me the work, and every day, as my strength permitted, I perused its pages. Although it contained very interesting treatises on Biology, Cerebral Physiology, Human Temperaments, Nursing of the Sick, etc., yet, being an invalid, I was most interested in the subject of Diseases and Remedies. I believed that I had a liver affection, and yet more than one medical attendant had pronounced my disease Consumption, and that I would fall with the autumn leaves. In that book I found my symptoms perfectly portrayed. I was then confident that I had not deceived myself. I reasoned thus: "Any man who can so truthfully depict my feelings, and apparently understands my constitutional tendencies, must know just what my physical system demands. I will trust my case with Dr. Pierce. I will take his Golden Medical Discovery as recommended for my disease." The result is, that after having perseveringly followed his prescribed treatment, I once again enjoy the blessings of health. Therefore, I would say to the afflicted, "Know thy opportunity," and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the nature of the first packages their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One. Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 5, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have been out of work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and had cared but little for what I by several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to many others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of my friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to another friend to give to one. He has told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and feel wonderfully improved. Some of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. Send by this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, the Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to walk without a cane or small article from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I should be crippled for life. Last July I passed one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for a dollar's worth of the package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, which I could not before. Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will well last. My sister-in-law, who has been an invalid, with Bronchitis, and Consumption, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take the Pills, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much better at 64 than at 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

JOHN H. SLATER, AGENT.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the political work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support and confidence of the great mass of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford to be without such a paper as THE TRIBUNE, an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan misrepresentations or prejudices or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious again in the councils of the nation. It will be vigilant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and applaud the Wrong when it is of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to secure honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure honest money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its general course through the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much concerned as to party ties, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters who time within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness yet greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the entertaining and instructive in its pages, and its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from contemporaries, and in heretics will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who have been its valued friends its visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1873 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most vigorous letters and editorial work, and the most in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors are numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Cordial he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood-root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Prevenilve and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

—A story is told of a certain noble lord that, after a prolonged tour, he was asked at a dinner-party what he thought of Athens. Turning to his servant, who was standing behind his chair, he calmly demanded, "John, what did I think of Athens?"

—A gentleman and lady got off the Pan Handle train recently, and stepped out on the south side of the depot. They were quickly surrounded by a crowd of voracious hackmen. Punching away vigorously with his umbrella, the gentleman soon cleared a space around him, and having secured silence enough to be heard, he vociferated, "Wouldn't some of you like to go to the devil?" The tone of one of the hackmen was wickedly urbane as he quickly replied, "Come right along sir; I ran the finest hack on that line."—Indianapolis Sentinel.

—After a late imperial hunt at Hubertustock, Germany, the Emperor William, feeling unwell, proposed to return to the castle on foot in company with the King of Saxony and Grand Duke of Mecklenburg. But tiring on the way, the party got a peasant to give them a lift in his cart. Presently the man's curiosity being excited by the appearance of his passengers, he said, turning to one of them, "And who may you be?" "I am the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg." "Oh, indeed," replied the peasant with a wink; "then who may you be?" he inquired of the next. "I am the King of Saxony." "Better and better," cried the carter. "And you?" accosting the third member of the party. "I am the Emperor of Germany." "Well, then," said the countryman, in high good humor, "I will tell you who I am; I am the Shah of Persia, and can hoax people as well as you can." But when he drove up to the castle of Hubertustock, the honest fellow found that, of all the potentates in the cart, he was the only one whose claim could not be substantiated.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

Not Yet!

"The time is not yet for the South to resume the fiery leadership of 1850," is the admonition with which the Bristol (Va.) News, a democratic sheet, winds up a bitter complaint against the action of Ben. Hill and other Southern democrats in Congress, which has so discouraged the News man as to make him "fear there is no chance for us [the democracy] to win the Presidential election."

"Not Yet!" But how long will it be before the time is "for the South to resume the fiery leadership of 1850?" And what does the democratic editor imply when he so writes? The proper time "for the South to resume," etc., will be when the party calling itself democratic once again gains control of national affairs, should that at present unlikely disaster ever occur; and such a resumption means a return of the northern voters to their former abject subserviency to the dictation of their aristocratic southern masters, the men who spoke of the northern workingmen as "mudsills,"—a return to the worst features of slavery (for the system of negro "peonage" now established in some of the Southern States is in many respects worse than negro chattelhood formerly was,)—the resurrection of the exploded doctrine of State sovereignty in all its former glory,—in short, the giving up of all that was gained for liberty and progress in the war for the Union.

The southern editor finds no fault with the principles avowed by the rebel brigadiers in Congress; does not pretend they do not truthfully represent the sentiments of the democracy; he only complains that they have spoken too soon. If they had only waited all would have been well; and he does not charge them with having misrepresented the feeling in the South, but only with having put further off the day "for the South to resume the fiery leadership of 1850" by their plain speaking. That a democratic victory in national affairs means the resumption by the South of its former fiery leadership, when the northern wing of the democratic party marched submissively to the polls to the crack of the slave-drivers' whip; when that terrible (at present) democratic bugbear, "the army," could be used to overthrow and disperse a State Legislature concerning whose legal organization no doubt existed, as was done in Kansas, without a whimper from a northern democrat, simply because that legislature was anti-democratic; when northern men were regularly insulted on the floor of Congress by southern democrats, without one of their northern brethren daring to offer a rebuke; when it was easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for any one save a southerner to get into the national schools at West Point and Annapolis,—that a national democratic victory means a return to those good old days of southern supremacy the southern editor evidently believes, and he has good reasons for so believing. When an unhung rebel arose in Congress and insolently charged the North with having brutally murdered rebel prisoners of war in the northern prison-camps,—a charge which he and all who heard it or heard of it knew was totally false,—one democratic Congressman was found to boldly refute the infamous slander; but not one northern democratic editor had a word to say in defence of the honor of the country; the kick was given by a southerner and of course was to be meekly received. But though the democratic editors could see nothing to censure in Hill's denunciations of the North or Tucker's declaration that this is not a nation, they are charmingly unanimous in denouncing Mr. Blaine as "infamous" for daring to say anything to annoy that division of the confederate army which has its headquarters in Congress. And all through the country the men who are most honored by the democracy are the men who most bitterly denounced the war for the Union,—the men who were ever the most slavish followers of the behests of the ex-slaveholders of the South. We have not far to go for an example; Daniel Marcy is to-day the democratic candidate for governor of this State,—a man who apparently regarded slavery as the only liberty and obedience to the dictates of the slaveholders as the only patriotism, and who, acting on that belief, steadily and consistently opposed in Congress, with voice and vote, (when he didn't dodge,) every measure taken to defeat the rebellion of the southern democrats and to save the Union, and who consigned to the "inheritance of eternal infamy" Abraham Lincoln and every one who supported his policy during the war. That the leaders of the New Hampshire democracy are eager to once more submit to "the fiery leadership of 1850" is evident from the fact that the organs of the party boldly "boast" of their gubernatorial candidate's Congressional record, while Joshua L. Foster (who ought to be as well posted on the subject as any man can be) goes in for him as the earnest advocate of "the great principle of State Rights," etc.

But the time is "not yet" for the victorious Union to surrender unconditionally to the defeated Confederacy, and again submit to "the fiery leadership of 1850;" Daniel Marcy will not be the next governor of New Hampshire; for we have abundant faith to believe that the voters of this State are not yet ready to elect as their chief magistrate a man who (however estimable he may be in private life) was unfaithful to the nation when the nation's existence was in peril, in preference to one who gallantly risked his life and who actually lost his health in fighting for the Union and the freedom of the workingman.

Since the foregoing was written the rebel element in Congress has shown its teeth again (on Friday) over a bill granting a pension to Wm. P. Duncan, who enlisted in the confederate army to procure the discharge of a crippled brother (arrested as a Union guide) and then deserted, joined the Union army and was wounded. Mr. Morrison, the man appointed by Speaker Kerr as chairman of the ways and means committee, declared that any man entering the rebel service and deserting to the Union army was a scoundrel, and did not deserve a pension. Messrs. Kasson and Townsend sharply criticised him, and the latter thought the question of amnesty had gone so far that it would not be surprising should some democratic member introduce a bill "to remove disabilities from men who had served in the Union army." [No fear of that—the southern democrats wouldn't allow it.] The House passed the bill, enough democrats voting with the republicans to grant the pension; but that does not alter the fact that the recognized leaders of the democratic majority in the United States House of Representatives are to-day as bitter in their hatred of those who fought for the Union and as determined to punish them for their "crimes" in combatting the schemes of the southern disunionists, as even Bob Toombs or Ben Hill could demand.

The Candidates.

The nominations of the republican and democratic parties are completed and are as follows:

Last year, the republicans carried districts 1, 5, 7, 9 and 10, the majorities being 83, 600, 425, 1120 and 310. The democrats carried districts 3, 6, 8, 11 and 12, the majorities being 53, 325, 313, 323 and 866. The aggregate republican majority, in the first named five districts was 2538; the aggregate democratic majority in the other five districts was 1880. In the second and fourth districts there was no choice by the people, but Gov. Weston and his Council threw out 3771 votes thrown for Natt Head and 46 thrown for Arthur Deering, and declared Priest and Proctor, democrats, elected. There being actually no choice in these districts by the votes returned, the republicans have a majority of 164 to overcome in the second district and 102 in the fourth.

Gen Sherman Heard From.

Gen. Sherman in a published letter says: I have never been, am not now, and never shall be a candidate for the high office of President before any convention, or the people. I shall always prefer to see that office filled by one of the millions who, in the civil war, stood by the Union firmly and unequivocally, and of those I notice many names willing and capable. Prominent among them is that of Gen. Hayes, now Governor of Ohio, whom we know as a fine officer and a gentleman in every sense. I do not, however, wish to be misunderstood as presuming to advise anybody in the choice of the man. My wife and family are strong Catholics, but I am not. That, however, is nobody's business. I believe in the common schools, and don't stop over the little matters which seem to be exaggerated by the press. In some quarters, however, these schools are extravagant, and indulge in costly buildings and expensive teachers, so as to be too heavy a burden to the tax-payers. This tendency ought to be checked, which may easily be done without making it a political question. Self interest will regulate this and make them free schools to all, and capable of imparting the rudiments of a good English education.

Bowen Speaks.

Mr. S. V. White having made complaint to Plymouth church that Henry C. Bowen had not so conducted himself as to continue in its good graces, Mr. Bowen replied at length in a communication to the examining committee in which he says:

"I am here before you, charged with the crime of 'silence,' and it has been more than intimated, here and elsewhere, that by this persistent silence I have actually uttered a malicious slander; that by this persistent silence I do actually try to make all the world believe that Beecher is guilty.

Gentlemen of the Examining Committee, I once promised to keep silent, and others joined with me in that solemn compact. That agreement has been coolly and I say, deliberately broken—not by me, but by Henry Ward Beecher, and with apparent intent to injure me. Just here permit me to deny most emphatically that I ever "sought to give the impression," or in any way "to make the public believe," as charged by Mr. White, that I ever knew anything whatever against the moral character of Henry Ward Beecher. Whatever may have been the facts in regard to my knowledge, convictions or opinions on that subject, I have hitherto sought to keep them locked within my own breast; and except in taking private advice and counsel, I defy S. V. White or any other member of Plymouth Church to prove the contrary.

But why do you ask me now to break the silence? Why summon me to the point? Do you think that I can use plainer language than that much-abused lady, a member of this church, whose awful charges against the pastor have stunned all Christendom? I think if such language as hers remains unheeded no other voice, though one should rise from the dead to speak, would ever reach your ears. Mr. White says, "There is one too many in Plymouth Church, at one end or the other." He does not state that at one end of the church stands a man openly charged with adultery, perjury and hypocrisy, and at the other end a man charged with the mere grievance of silence. He does not propose to arraign and faithfully try the one charged with the awful crime of adultery, but to drag before you that man who by his silence has actually led the people "to believe he did know something about Mr. Beecher." Such evidence of justice, impartiality, brotherly love and fair dealing I commend to your respectful consideration.

I was long ago told that it was the secret intention of Plymouth Church to destroy me if possible, and that I was in any event to be driven from its communion. I could not then believe this, but it now appears that others had better information than myself. For more than a year past it has been evident to me and others that this serious threat would sooner or later be put into execution. But how was this to be done? The following tells the whole story: From that day to this I have been wickedly and maliciously assailed in my business affairs. All sorts of crimes and misdemeanors have been charged or hinted at, and I have been held up to the world as a man totally unworthy of either respect or public confidence. Every one of these charges or insinuations I now pronounce totally false, their authors slanderers, and I hereby challenge Plymouth Church to appoint its own Committee to investigate openly and vigorously my words and my deeds, either in or out of the church, from the day of my birth to the present hour.

I am ready for the trial. Let me here recall one fact. One bright, sunny afternoon, during the trial between Theodore Tilton and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, I was waited upon by one of the leading members of Plymouth Church, and most earnestly urged to come forward and say something, if it was in my power, to relieve Mr. Beecher and end the controversy. I was told that if I would do this the arms of Plymouth Church would be thrown about me, and that by so doing I would be the greatest man almost in the country. My instant reply was that "there was not power enough, wealth enough, or reverence enough in Plymouth Church or in Brooklyn to induce me even to consider the matter one moment." That remark ended the interview. I cannot help remembering, however, how easily, by simply violating my own conscience and telling a lie, I could have been applauded then and to-day as one of the most worthy members of Plymouth Church.

I do not propose now to give in detail facts which have come to my knowledge, or the incidents, disclosures and confidential communications which from time to time have been presented or communicated to me in regard to the character of Henry Ward Beecher, to his dishonorable conduct in business affairs, to his treacherous treatment of friends, to his breaking of the written covenant, to his untruthful statements in Court, to his dodging all through the investigations into his conduct and character, to his stolid indifference when an unjust charge and malicious slanders had been made against a particular member of his church, to his recent contradictory utterances in regard to what he characterized as a "hodge-podge council," composed of "wolves and foxes," like Drs. Storrs and Buddington, which council, at one time, he said, he had never positively objected to; but in regard to which, on another occasion, he did positively say, "I won't! I won't have anything to do with it!" and finally, at his coarse abuse and slanderous charges of perjury, uttered boldly and publicly in his own lecture-room, against an honest Christian woman who had dared, as she alleged, to speak the truth concerning him.

With this brief reference to matters which have had an influence in forming my judgment, I will now hasten to tell you frankly what are my conclusions in regard to the character of the pastor of Plymouth Church. I have known Mr. Beecher quite intimately since the day of his arrival in Brooklyn. I have been acquainted with him socially and privately in church and in the family, in business matters and in religious matters. I have heard attentively, but with profound grief, what has been said to me against him. I have felt my heart stirred to its depths for dear friends who, years before the present scandal was published, sorrowfully begged my counsel, as they assured me that their pastor and mine had craftily betrayed the sanctity of their home—the very charge long after presented to me by Theodore Tilton in regard to his own home. I never can or will be base enough to allow a single name to be bruited before the world, although I am now ready to testify to essential facts before any proper tribunal. These declarations I heard with a sad heart, and tried to accept the evidence brought to me that Mr. Beecher was grief-stricken and penitent. I have read much that has been said for and against Mr. Beecher in the public press. I have, with utter amazement read and reread and pondered over his published letters and written confessions in regard to serious accusations made against him. I have tried to weigh all the evidence which has come before me with judicial fairness and Christian honesty. I have read the withering charges which have been published to the world against him. I have seen those charges again and again hurled at him, and he calmly and boldly challenged to appear before any impartial tribunal to meet them. I have seen him, with all this cloud of darkness gathering about him, apparently defying public opinion, defying the advice of old life-long friends, embracing the soundest, ablest and best clergymen in the country, and, seemingly, defying again and again the very God of Heaven himself to cut him down.

Now, being summoned here to speak, and to speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, I solemnly give it as my unwavering opinion, in view of all the facts and evidence presented to me, that Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, without even a shadow of doubt in my mind, is guilty of the awful crimes of adultery, perjury and hypocrisy. This, I say again, and before the bar of this Committee, is my deliberate opinion, and I may be permitted to affirm that I give it calmly, without malice, and with no other than a sincere desire to do my duty faithfully to God and to man, to the Church and to the world."

When Mr. Bowen's sons, after presenting their father's reply to the Committee, withdrew, that body continued its session for about three-quarters of an hour, during which time it framed a letter to Bowen, in which he is summoned to appear before the Committee on Tuesday evening and give proof of the assertions contained in his reply to the grievances of White. This document, which Mr. Bowen declined to make public, was delivered by Mr. Halliday personally.

E. G. PIERCE, JR., P. M.

The Eastern Railroad.

Confession is good for the soul and repentance is next to being without sin. The perusal of the report of the directors of the Eastern Railroad is rather solemn reading for the stockholders, and the chapter after chapter of mishaps that has befallen that unfortunate corporation since it first came into existence will cause those who have lost their money by extravagant management to wonder at the assurance displayed in rebuking the least culpable element of the management and endeavoring to cover the huge mistakes of 1871-5 by referring to the lesser ones of 1837-71. There must be some members of the present directory who chafe under the criticism with which the report teems, or have they all at once been submerged by the tide of indignation which has swept over them as over broken reeds? The public have an idea that a majority of the present board have been in the management for several years past, and during those years the worst "mistakes" recorded have been made. Did one or two manage the road and five or six look on with feelings of opposition and have no courage to manifest their displeasure? True, Mr. John Cummings manfully resigned after being informed that his associates desired "harmony" in the administration of affairs, that "harmony" including the endorsement of the payment of a salary of $20,000 a year to President Wooldredge and a salary of $10,000 to General Manager Hatch. Mr. Cummings entered the management for the purpose of investigation and alone ordered the stoppage of the President's salary. A majority of the directors had failed to perform this very necessary duty. And why? Did they have the interests of the Road at heart, or were they each engrossed in schemes of their own, each for his own advancement and none of them for the best interests of the stockholders? Why should President Wooldredge be paid a salary of $20,000? Was his management of the Eastern Railroad so necessary as to warrant such an expenditure? Were the schemes of other directors so liable to be exposed as to induce each to remain ignorant of the plans of associate directors? These and other questions are daily asked by stockholders, and remain unanswered.

Here was a railroad with dividends payable semi-annually, considered a safe investment, and the stock ten per cent. or more above par. It had survived the "mistakes" of thirty-four years: the location of the terminus at East Boston; the building of the Lawrence branch at a loss of $350,000; the construction of the Marblehead branch, involving a loss of $175,000; the expenditure of $380,000 for the South Reading branch, involving another loss of $10,000 to $15,000 per annum; the loss of $95,000 expended on the Essex branch; the rental of $6000 a year for the Newburyport City Railroad; the defalcation of Tuckerman, the Treasurer, to the extent of $232,780, in 1855; and had built prior to 1868 a new bridge at Newburyport at a cost of $334,000. Still the stock kept up and the dividends were regularly declared and paid. The stock of the road was considered "as good as gold."

The Revere accident in 1871 brought with it a change, involving a loss of $510,000. Dividends were passed, but a hopeful spirit was maintained. It is not yet forgotten how eagerly a new element jumped itself into the direction at that time or soon after. People who had spent their life-time in managing railroads were too slow for the age, and were to be surpassed by the imaginary Jay Goulds, Vanderbilts, Tom Scotts and Garretts of the present day. The owner of a share in the Eastern Railroad looked higher and farther than mere dividends for his profits. Consolidated Virginia mining stocks of this day would not have been regarded as equivalent to inflated Eastern, which was to capture and absorb Boston & Maine, pay P. S. & P. ten per cent., and make things lively in a general way. The management paid $216,000 for a lot of land in Lynn that had been valued and taxed the year before for $4500! A lot on the opposite side of the road was accepted as a gift on condition that the company would establish a station there, which was built at a cost of $55,000. The old station was rebuilt at a cost of $130,000, and then and not till then was it decided that it was inconvenient to stop trains at both stations. It cost the company $100,000 to annul the contract, and by order of the President the depot, which had been put up at a cost of $55,000 was demolished and the debris sold for $1500! A half million dollars had been expended at Lynn; $300,000 of the amount was squandered! A corporation that could stand such financiering as that must have been exceedingly healthy!

It is astonishing how honest and faithful this corporation has been. It contracted in 1872 for 3000 tons of steel rails for $369,000, and the contract was broken by the delays of the manufacturers. The company deliberately neglected to cancel the contract, and a consequent loss of $120,000 ensued. What innocent and child-like management was this! It was continued by the purchase of the Hall automatic electric signals, which though costing $80,000 were "only partially successful." Everything was conducted on an extensive scale—rolling stock was ordered, and the company, unwarned by the mistakes of thirty-four years, went in with an insatiable appetite for absorbing everything next to it. With Manager Hatch came Auditor Colgate, who changed the manner of keeping accounts until ten clerks were necessary instead of three, and nobody could tell in what condition the road was. The Road's money was used to the extent of $1,220,538.31 to secure the control of the Maine Central and thereby capture the through travel, the stock in the Maine Central being purchased for $500,000 more than it is now worth. Succeeding in controlling that Road it was soon found that it would have been better for the Eastern never to have touched it. In 1875, the debt increased by "accretions" $2,287,394.95, and the balloon collapsed. The action of the Eastern in securing the sole control of the P. S. & P. resulted in the Boston & Maine extension to Portland, and hastened the ruin of Eastern and P. S. & P. The issue of 2000 more shares of Eastern stock at eighty-five cents on the dollar only depreciated the value of the original shares. Stock-jobbing might save those within the management, but the small holders of stock had no redress.

Mr. Lawrence, the new President of the Road, puts the debt of the Eastern Railroad at $14,904,429.55, and says that in a year the present debt of the Road at seven per cent. interest will amount to about $1,000,000. The net income of the Road for last year above operating expenses was but $742,102.72, and a deficit of $250,000 must be looked forward to. He estimates the losses of the Road as follows:

Lawrence Branch	$350,000
Collision at Marblehead Junction	88,000
Collision at Wenham	34,000
South Reading Branch	650,000
Defalcation of Wm. S. Tuckerman	232,780

Ten year notes, discount	130,000
Sinking fund loan, discount	300,000
Total	$8,245,980

The absurd purchase at Campebello is not referred to, although it is said that the property there was valued at three times its worth at the time of purchase.

The exhibit shown by President Lawrence will not cause any very extensive feelings of confidence in the sagacity of those who have had its management. A man or any company of men who had so carelessly managed private enterprises for themselves would have long ago been deemed aspiring candidates for the lunatic hospitals, and had they so conducted business entrusted to them by individuals would have been eligible to the positions of hammerers of stone for the State.

Jottings.

John Sise, Esq., was on Friday chosen President of the National Mechanics and Traders Bank, George L. Treadwell, Esq., having resigned. Mr. Treadwell has been President of the bank since it was constituted a national bank.

Islington street was gay with fleetly gliding sleighs on Saturday, from Market Square to the Creek. The trotters were out in full force and spectators lined the sidewalks to "see them come."

Fire broke out in a house in Jackson street at half-past 1 o'clock Sunday morning, and before it was extinguished the building and its contents were pretty well ruined by fire and water. The house was occupied by Joseph Graves and Martin Dunbar, both of whom lost nearly all their household goods, Mr. Dunbar also losing a watch which was found and returned by Mr. John Harmon. The fire caught from a defect in the chimney. The house we are informed belongs to the Noble estate, but we could not learn the amount of loss or whether or no there was any insurance.

Attention is invited to the advertisement of the New Hampshire Fire Insurance Company, of which Mr. C. A. Hazlett is the agent in this city.

We saw a man practising the new-fangled "diagonal" waltz in public, Friday, and he did it first-rate—diagonalled all over both sides of the street and at length waltzed into a gin-shop. He probably did not learn the step from Mr. Lamprey, or, if he did, did not profit much by that veteran teacher's lessons in deportment.

The following divorces have been decreed: Jane Leonard from Charles H. Leonard, Newcastle; Nancy J. Kilpatrick from Wm. H. Kilpatrick, Northwood; William H. Bridge from Frances E. Bridge, Nottingham; Josephine G. Chase from John Chase, Seabrook.

Considerable time was lost in getting one of the engines at work, at the fire in Jackson street, Sunday morning, on account of the cover of the reservoir in Rogers' woodyard being solidly frozen down and having to be cut out. How feelingly our democratic brethren would have bewailed the inefficiency of the managers of the fire department had the present city government been republican!

To-day many of the unhappy individuals who own Eastern Railroad stock, and many of the happy ones who own none but have friends who hold certificates which the others can borrow, go to Boston on a free ride. Hope they'll all have a good time.

MARINE CHRONICLE

Sch J B Bodwell, Gregory, for this port from New York passed through Hell Gate Feb 3.

Fyle's Dietetic Saleratus.—Universally acknowledged the best in use. Each pound bears the name of JAMES FYLE. None genuine without. dj76

—The late Rev. Dr. Wightman, one night, sitting later than usual, deep in the profundities of a great folio tome, imagined he heard a sound in the kitchen incousistent with the quietude and security of a mouse, and so, taking his candle, he proceeded to investigate the cause. His foot being heard in the lobby, the housekeeper began with all earnestness to cover the fire, as if preparing for bed. "Ye're up late to-night, Mary." "I'm jist rakin' the fire, sir, and gaun to bed." "That's right, Mary; I like timeous hours." On his way back to the study he passed the coal closet, and, turning the key, took it with him. Next morning, at an early hour, there was a rap at his bedroom door, and a request for the key, to put a fire on. "Ye're too soon up, Mary; go back to your bed yet." Half an hour later there was another knock, and a similar request, in order to prepare for breakfast. "I don't want breakfast so soon, Mary; go back to your bed." Another half hour, and another knock, with an entreaty for the key, as it was washing day. This was enough. He rose and handed out the key, saying, "Go and let the man out." Mary's sweetheart had been imprisoned all night in the coal closet, as the minister shrewdly suspected, where, Pyramus and Thisbe-like, they had breathed their love through the keyhole.

—The time is come when the woman without looks with bitter envy upon the woman within a sealskin jacket.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the chil-ren by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the lively enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon covered a box for himself or friends, and within a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged about ever being able to do much at my several works. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and received one by them, but with little hope of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report to self cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took, and I can recommend them to my several friends, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $3.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills safely, and have long since paid to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will continue to commend the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the patronage it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh intelligence, the most complete updates of news and interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department of journalism, and includes the accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A SLIPPERY POP.

[Boston Times.]

She came tripping from the church door, her face flushed by emotions awakened by the just uttered discourse, and eyes bright with loving expectation. He shivered on the curbstone, where for an hour he had waited impatiently with a burning heart fairly palpitating in his throat, and frozen fingers in his pockets. They linked arms and started for the residence of her parents. After a few moments hesitating silence he said: "Jane, we have known each other long. You must know just how I feel. You must have seen that clear down at the bottom—Oh, Moses!"

He had slipped down on the ice with so much force that his spine was driven up into his hat, and his hat was tipped over his nose, but she was a tender-hearted girl. She did not laugh, but she carefully helped him to his feet, and said:

"You were saying, John, when you slipped that the foundation—Oh, goodness!"

She slipped herself that time, and saw little stars come down to dance before her eyes, but he pulled her up in haste and went on.

"Yes; just as I said, clean down at the bottom of my heart is a fervent love, on which I build my hopes. That love has helped me stand face —— Thunder!"

He was down again, but scrambled up before she could stoop to help him, and she said breathlessly:

"Yes, yes, John. You remember, you just said a love which helped you stand and face thunder. And that you founded your hopes on —— This pesky ice!"

There she sat. John grasped the loose part of her sacque, between the shoulders, with one hand, and raised her to her feet, as one would lift a kitten from a pail of water by the back of the neck. Then he said with increased earnestness:

"Of course, darling, and I have longed for an opportunity to tell my love and to hear those sweet lips whisper—Whoop!"

Somehow John's feet had slipped from under him, and he had come down like a capital V with his head and feet pointing skyward. She twined her taper fingers in his curling locks and raised him to the stature of a man, set his hat firmly over his eyes with both hands, and cried in breathless haste:

"I understand, and let me assure you, John, that if it is in my power to lighten your cares and make brighter your journey through life to—Jerusalem!"

John stood alone, and said with breathless vehemence:

"Oh, my precious! and thus shall it be my lifelong pleasure to lift you from the rude assaults of earth and surround you with the loving atmosphere of—Texas!"

And there they both sat together. They had nearly reached the gate, and, hand to hand, and with hearts overflowing with the bliss of young love's first confession, they crept along on their knees up the front steps, and were soon forgetful of their bumps on the softest cushion of the parlor sofa.

GRAPTOMANCY.

Many people laugh at what is called graptomancy, or the art of judging characters by handwriting, and yet all acknowledge that handwriting does indicate something. Every one allows a difference between a man and a woman's hand. We hear people speak of a vulgar hand a gentlemanly hand, a clerkly hand, and so forth. I had once, said Archbishop Whately, a remarkable proof that handwriting is sometimes, at least, an index to character. I had a pupil at Oxford whom I liked in most respects greatly; there was but one thing about him which seriously dissatisfied me, and that, as I often told him, was his handwriting; it was not bad as writing, but it had a mean, shuffling character in it which always inspired me with a feeling of suspicion. While he remained at Oxford I saw nothing to justify this suspicion; but a transaction in which he was afterward engaged, and in which I saw more of his character than I had done before, convinced me that the writing had spoken truly. But I knew of a much more curious case, in which a celebrated graptomancer was able to judge of character more correctly by handwriting than he had been able to do by personal observation. He was on a visit at a friend's house, where, among other guests, he met a lady whose conversation and manners greatly struck him, and for whom he conceived a strong friendship, based on the esteem he felt for her as a singularly truthful, pure minded, and single hearted woman. The lady of the house, who knew her real character to be the very reverse of what she seemed, was curious to know whether Mr. Blank would be able to discover this by her handwriting. Accordingly she procured a slip of this lady's writing (having ascertained he had never seen it) and gave it to him one evening as the handwriting of a friend of hers whose character she wished him to decipher. His usual habit, when he undertook to exercise this power, was to take a slip of a letter cut down lengthwise so as not to show any sentences, to his room at night, and to bring it down with his judgment in writing the next morning. On this occasion, when the party were seated at the breakfast table, the lady whose writing he had unconsciously been examining, made some observation which particularly struck Mr. Blank as seeming to betoken a very noble and truthful character. He expressed his ad-valiation of her sentiments very warmly, adding at the same time to the lady of the house, "Not so, by the way, your friend," and he put into her hand the slip of writing of her guest which she had given him the evening before, over which he had written the words: "Fascinating, false, and hollow-hearted." The lady of the house kept the secret, and Mr. Blank never knew that the writing on which he had pronounced so severe a judgment was that of the friend he so greatly admired.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterwaid.

Hannah Won't Pacify Me!

A newspaper joke which went the rounds years ago, related how an ill-tempered little girl, who had been spoiled by having always been allowed to rule the household, one day quarrelled with her new nurse, and after breaking all her toys and bumping her head violently on the floor without eliciting even a remonstrance from the placid nurse, at length in despair screamed to her mother, "Ma! Hannah won't pacify me!"

That is just like the democratic party of to-day; the southern rebels and their northern supporters demand to be "pacified,"—and are willing to be pacified only on their own plan, at that. It is not enough that the rebel leaders escaped punishment for their treason,—not enough that scores of rebel military officers, and leading politicians of the defunct confederacy, are now in Congress to make laws for the government of loyal men; it is not enough that immediately on the close of the war the great mass of rebels were restored to all the political and civil rights they had forfeited by rebellion, and that every rebel leader has had his disabilities removed on simply asking it,—and that even those whose hostility to the Union is so bitter that they will not ask pardon would have received it but for the democratic majority in the House; all this is not enough to pacify the democracy. The north—or rather the people of the Union, must not only cease to speak disrespectfully of the lost cause, but must also endorse the democratic article of faith that any one State may at any time dissolve the Union, and acknowledge that the war for the Union was a war of tyranny and oppression; they must never mention Andersonville prison-pen except as a pleasant rural retreat, where the honored guests were shown every attention by those angels of light, Winder and Wirtz; the massacre at Fort Pillow by butcher Forrest, the hanging of unarmed and inoffensive people by the confederate mob in New York, the attempt to burn northern cities and to introduce yellow fever at the north, must never be referred to; and Jeff Davis, Lee, Johnstone, Forrest, Semmes and Waddell must be placed a little higher in the patriotic register than Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas, Farragut and Winslow. When these and any other demands the modest secessionists can think of have been acceded to and every man who took part against the rebellion has been properly punished, and the ex-slaveholders have been restored to their former absolute rule over the nation they attempted to destroy, the South may consent to be pacified; but let a northern man dare to hint that the North was right in the struggle with the rebels, or that it is possible there might have been a rebel who was not a saint, and straightway there is a terrible outcry raised by the southern ex-rebels and their northern echoes, "Ma! Hannah won't pacify me!"

What have the secessionists done since the war, to merit the abject humiliation of the North for the sake of pacifying them? Oh, they have "accepted the issues of the war," we are told. But have they done so? That they laid down their arms when their only alternatives were surrender or destruction is true; and that is about all the "accepting the issues of the war" they have done. One of the results of the war was the abolition of negro slavery, and another the enfranchisement of the freedmen; but the ex-rebel speakers and editors have never ceased denouncing both these measures as unconstitutional and tyrannical, and the men sent to Congress by the defeated confederates are the men who fought hardest to destroy the Union and have since been most outspoken in denouncing the North, the war, and all "nigger" legislation, and in several of the former slave States a system of negro peonage has been established by law, advertisements of runaway negro boys are altogether too common in the papers, and the civil rights of the freedmen are simply ignored. As to how the secessionists have "accepted" negro suffrage, one recent example will show: Gen. Toombs (who hasn't yet called the roll of his slaves from the foot of Bunker Hill monument) appeared before the democratic legislature of Georgia on the evening of Jan. 25th, was received with a "burst of applause," and spoke in favor of a convention to alter the State constitution, using in his address the following language: "We got a good many honest fellows in the first Legislature, but I will tell you how we got them there. * * We got them there by carrying the black vote by bribery and intimidation, and I helped to do it. I would have scorned the people had they not done it. * * And the man who says he accepts negro suffrage, I say, accursed be he. I will accept anything before I will accept such a democrat. * * If you have a convention I can make you a constitution by which the people will rule and the nigger will never be heard of!" The last declaration was received with cheers, as were also his furious denunciation of the Union army (which he described as being made up of "the Prussian, the low Dutchman, the Irishman, and worse than all, the Yankee thief,") and a bitter diatribe against the southern Union man, whom he referred to as "the scallawag—the consummation of all villainy," asserting that "they'll have to dig deeper in hell to get a place for him." And the Georgia Legislature voted, 117 yeas to 27 nays, to call a convention for Bro. Toombs, and decided not to permit the people of the State to have any voice in the matter. All this, from the democratic point of view, is all right and proper; blatant rebels, who should have been hung years ago but were not, may abuse and vilify the Union and all the men and measures which helped to save it, as much as they please; but if a word is spoken in return by a northern man—"Ma, Hannah won't pacify me!"

Complete amnesty is demanded—for rebels only. As soon as the war was over many northern men who had willingly fought against the Union returned to the North and at once took their former places in political and social life, not one of them ever being punished either by law or social or political proscription for his conduct; but the southern men who dared to be faithful to the Union are to-day marked men in the South, hated and persecuted and not seldom murdered by the very men who so loudly demand that their own crimes shall be totally forgotten, ostracised in business and social relations by the ex-rebels, and denounced as "scallawags—the consummation of all villainy," by men of the Bob Toombs stamp, amid the cheers of southern legislators. Of course it is quite correct for southern rebels to treat southern Unionists thus; but let a Union man say a word against Jeff Davis and up goes the chorus; "Ma, Hannah won't pacify me!"

Before the northern democracy clamor much more about the "oppression" of their southern brethren, they would do well to urge the latter to amnesty the southern Union men. The following, which we clip from the Lebanon Free Press, hits our ideas exactly: "Talk about amnesty—talk about forgiveness—we think it high time there was a little of it on the other side. There is no such thing among the majority of southern whites as forgiveness for those true men who, during four terrible years were 'faithful among the faithless found.' These men are a proscribed people to-day, and under the theory which obtains in democratic circles, the government which can protect its citizens everywhere else in the wide world, has no arm long enough to encircle them to its protecting fold. A theory involving such results is absurd beyond all endurance. But, this aside, in this year of general amnesty, while the whole North is willing to forgive every man who drew a sword against the government, on the simple condition that that forgiveness is asked, it is well also to put in a plea for the right of the Union men of the South to the common amenities of social and political life."

Washington Correspondence.

The last example of Civil Service Reform in the House, was the removal of the Journal clerks, one of whom had been in the service twenty-five years. By it Charles H. Smith of Newmarket gets a place. New Hampshire had been waiting out in the cold, and all the New England crowd with two exceptions. He had been clerk of your legislature and had an idea and knowledge of the duties. But for this Jones would have been as powerless to aid his friends as his other democratic brethren of New England. His other proteges have gone home—some of them at his expense, after waiting until their funds were gone. As a contrast to this removal of the Journal clerks of the House, is the action of the Senate in keeping a democratic Journal clerk. After the "bouncing" of Union soldiers for the benefit of confederates, let us hear no more about Civil Service, from democratic mouths.

More than two months of the session is gone, and next to nothing yet done in the way of legislation. There was never a session when the House was promptly organized, when so little business was done. Last year the appropriation bills were all reported and most of them passed the House, while they are now at work on the first one that even occasions much discussion. In fact it is apparent that the democracy don't intend to give the country any business legislation. They see that to attempt it would develope their utter incapacity to cope with questions now demanding action. Their policy, as now avowed by some, is to do nothing but pass the appropriation bills, and endeavor to get some credit for economy and retrenchment, and make a splurge over expenses of extravagance, by investigations. They have been at work now two months and passed absolutely nothing yet. There is no doubt there has been some extravagance. It would not be human to have extravagance for ten years in private life and none in public expenditures. But the republican party has been vigilant in cutting down expenses, and they are reduced to making a great cry over a little wool. For instance, the committee on expenditures of the State department have been sending over the country the extravagance they have discovered of the dispatch agent at London; and the giving of presents to Turkish officials to procure a treaty, which has been the practice of all nations in procuring treaties with Turkey, from time immemorial. They gave out that they should reduce the expenses of our foreign relation a million a year at least. The extravagance they found in the Dispatch agent was, that he paid a thousand dollars a month for postage on the mails sent to and from all our officials abroad one way, and for the mails between London and the steamers, at Queenstown, both ways. The idea is preposterous to a democratic committee, that there can be so much correspondence necessary. Even Cox it will be recollected has moved to abolish all National expenditure for education, as extravagant. This economical committee stimulated by this discovery of extravagance in postage went into the account of ministers and consuls, with a short hand reporter to take down results. After a few days' search they discovered that our Ministers at England and France had been guilty of the heinous extravagance of making Christmas presents to the porters and ushers of the foreign offices who had shown them attentions, as had been the custom from the foundation of the government. They left half a cartload of accounts untouched after this discovery and have been summoning ex-consuls to see what can be learned from them. The result when they get through will probably be, the cutting off some of the agencies of commerce and calling it economy, instead of trying to extend our commerce and increase the territory, which becomes the consumer of our productions.

The financial question is giving the leaders some trouble. The speaker and old leaders are hard money men, while two-thirds of the democratic members of the House are the other way, and their growling is pretty furious over the refusal of the speaker to see one of them and always giving the floor to the other wing. At their caucus, after discussing the matter until eleven o'clock, an adjournment prevented the expression of the caucus against hard-money.

A special effort is now in progress to push Thurman ahead of Hendricks, by the hard money leaders. The letter of Kerr favoring Hendricks is only a paper support. Their trump card to keep the majority wing in subjection, is, that without New York, a democratic President is hopeless; and that Thurman is the only Western man who can have any hope of carrying New York. Their table to show this gives the republicans 181 of the electoral votes and by including New York makes the democratic vote 185. They are spending some money (does it come from the banks and bondholders?) through the Press and other agencies to impress this idea upon the South and detach them from the Western anti-contraction forces. In aid of this David A. Wells has been here in the importing free-trade interest preparing a tariff bill to combine the money and importing interest to secure this result. His tariff bill has been introduced by Morrison and referred to the Committee of ways and means. A glance at it shows Pennsylvania and New Jersey are given up. The iron region of Ohio where the heavy democratic gains were made last Fall is also abandoned, which gives Ohio to the republicans. Indiana will be fought for and so will New York, Connecticut and California. These four States with the South could elect, and the intention is to concentrate all their efforts in these States and not waste it by efforts elsewhere. They sop the tobacco States with an increase of duty on leaf tobacco.

The announcement that Hendricks is to make a tour of the South, may be taken as an indication that he and his friends are alarmed at the combination and contributions made to advance Thurman over him in that section. The feeling is getting bitter and is quite as likely to divide the party as to give it success. Hendricks seemed so far ahead as to be almost sure of the democratic nomination, until the recent rally of the money interest on Thurman.

The winter has been remarkably mild and pleasant. The ground hog came out on the second of February and saw his shadow, and returned to his hole for a six weeks' nap, and hereabouts they are dreading the next six weeks. The ground hog is a greater authority than Old Prob. on the weather with the average countryman of this section. EXE.

The Democratic Plan.

The New York Tribune—very good democratic authority—says the democratic caucus on Tuesday evening of last week, called for the purpose of consulting in regard to financial legislation, disclosed the fact that the party in the House of Representatives which will be held responsible for any currency measure that may pass this session is divided into at least three separate wings or cliques. The inflationists, represented by such men as Mr. Holman, Mr. Landers, and other influential members from the West and South, seem to be largely in the majority and to have had things almost entirely their own way. Their plan is not only to repeal the Resumption act of 1875, but also to abolish the National bank currency and substitute legal-tender notes for it. The majority of them seem to have an absurd idea that the National banks of the country are realizing immense profits on their circulation, while the truth is, as proved by unimpeachable figures, and also by the fact that numerous banks are withdrawing their circulation, that, after making allowance for the premium on the bonds deposited to secure the circulation, and paying the taxes which are annually levied upon the banks, little or no profit actually remains. The same class is also apparently unable to understand that the withdrawal of the National bank circulation would not cause any decrease in the bonded debt of the country. Their idea seems to be that by the adoption of their policy the Government could redeem and cancel the bonds now deposited by the banks with the Treasurer of the United States as security for their circulation, while the truth is, that the bonds, instead of being withdrawn, would only be transferred from the possession of the banks to that of other persons.

A Contrast Worthy Public Attention.

What is the effect of a drastic purgative upon the constipated bowels and a dyspeptic stomach? The intestine is emptied so violently as to weaken and render it still more inactive, and the gastric juices vitiated by contact with an indigestible medicine, lose the chemical qualities which constitute them the only true solvents of the food. Results—aggravated constipation and chronic indigestion. What, on the other hand, are the effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters on the same organs. The bowels are moved, but without violence, and at the same time acquire healthful tone; the gastric secretions are stimulated and improved, and duly perform their part in the processes which eventuate in the nutrition of every part of the human structure. Results—a regular habit of body, sound digestion and vigor. Let the public draw its own conclusions from this contrast.

Jottings.

The North Church in this city, on Sunday evening last, referred to the Standing Committee with power to act, the invitation of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, to be represented in the Advisory Council.

A friend, referring to the frozen-up condition of the reservoir-cover in Rogers' Woodyard on Sunday morning, reminds us that a similar neglect was brought to light at the same place at the time the mould-loft in the Raynes shipyard was burned, about a year ago. When the fire department was managed by Ex-Chief Engineer Marston (and other faithful and capable republican Chief Engineers,) no delay ever occurred from any such cause, he and his assistants taking good care that snow on reservoir-covers was always cleared away after every snow-fall and that they were always in a condition to be easily lifted; but the republican management was always generally abused by the democrats, and we supposed everything would be more than perfect when the latter got control of the city government, instead of which the only progress seems to have been made in the wrong direction.

Notwithstanding the dull times, Betton & Co. sold about 125 fine paintings in three days last week at their auction rooms, Congress street.

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Railroad, Monday, Messrs. Samuel C. Lawrence, Frank Jones, J. S. Ludlam, G. S. Morrison, Onslow Stearns, James W. Johnson, Benjamin E. Bates, John Cummings and George W. Gill were elected directors. There was an exciting debate participated in by Messrs. Edward Crane, Chas. L. Woodbury, E. W. James, E. P. Robinson, Stillman B. Allen, A. F. Terry, Seth J. Thomas, B. F. Butler and others. A committee of five was appointed to investigate the affairs of the Eastern Railroad Company for the last six years past generally; to inquire in respect to all contracts and purchases made by the Company, and whether any Director had any interest adverse to the Company at the time of said purchase or before; and into the value of all lands and property of said Company, with authority to send for persons and papers, and make a report to the corporation as soon as possible.

Dr. S. C. Whittier on Sunday expelled a tape worm twenty-two feet long from its long residence inside a well-known citizen of Portsmouth, who now fancies himself (and probably is), in better health than he has been for years.

The Treasury Department has sent to the House a list of ports of entry where the customs receipts do not equal the expenses. York, Me., is one of them, to the amount of $281.81, and will probably be consolidated with Portsmouth. There are sixteen other New England ports in the same list, three of which, Saco, Me., and Edgartown and Nantucket, Mass., show no import or export business at all.

Congressman Burleigh has introduced a bill in the House to establish a lighthouse "off the coast of York county."

A child who died in this city last week at the age of four months, had living at the time, its father and mother, two grandfathers, two grandmothers, three great-grandfathers, and three great-grandmothers.

Summer weather set in again Monday and the sleighing soon became "sloshy."

The ladies of Portsmouth propose to give Prof. Edwards of the North Carolina Colored Glee Club a benefit this evening at eight o'clock. The Glee Club will be assisted by the Cornet Band. Tickets 25, 35 and 50 cents. For sale at Preston's and at the Temple from one to five o'clock this afternoon. Prof. Edwards promises a rich treat to all who attend. Come one, come all.

Persons wishing to attend the concert of the Portsmouth Glee Club at York Village, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th, are requested to leave their names on my slate at J. H. Thatcher's store. I shall run carriages if a sufficient number wish to go. Prices according to the times. WM. PLAISTED.

News and Notes.

Five persons were drowned in Barnegat Bay on the 3d, by the capsizing of a small schooner.

A Paris dispatch last week gave a report of the complete defeat of the Carlists in Spain, and of the flight of Don Carlos, probably to take refuge in French territory. This week it is the Carlists' turn to completely defeat the other side.

Mrs. Wilcox's house, at Detroit, was robbed by three masked burglars on Wednesday last. A man named King was arrested, convicted and sentenced to twelve years in the State prison for the crime. He confessed that his father and mother and himself committed the burglary, the mother wearing a man's clothing and mask.

One day in November last, B. C. Thomas, of Leeds, Me., found a whitish powder in his pump and well which experts pronounced arsenic. Suspicion fell upon C. W. Keith, who lived opposite, and it was found, on investigation, that the day previous he purchased of a druggist in Auburn a quantity of the poison, giving a false name. The bungling manner in which the job was done alone led to its detection in time to fustrate the design of the would-be murderer of a family. When brought up for trial in Lewiston on Saturday, Keith pleaded guilty.

The democrats came into power in the House of Representatives, on professions of economy and civil service reform. Democratic economy is to cut down the pay of cadets $50 a month, let the forts and arsenals go to ruin, refund $60,000,000 cotton tax, nothing being said, of course, about refunding the tax on manufactures. Democratic civil service means removing a man who has served faithfully and with great ability, under both parties, for twenty-seven years, to make place for a hungry applicant without a day's experience and utterly unable to perform the first duties of his office. —Providence Journal.

The New York Times paid last year a dividend of $100,000, being equal to $1000 a share or 100 per cent. upon the original value of the stock. At no time during the last fifteen years has the paper paid a less dividend than 80 per cent. on the original capital, and in some cases the dividend has been 100 per cent. During the same period, the entire indebtedness upon the Times building and property has been paid off. The Times is one of the most ably conducted newspapers of the metropolis, and it deserves its prosperity.

"Gen. George H. Thomas was a rank secessionist." O yes, certainly. But the South can't understand why he acted so mean at Lookout Mountain.—Chicago Times.

John Dolan, the murderer of Mr. Noe, has been re-sentenced to be hanged March 24th.

The papers print a letter from Jeff Davis, abusing Mr. Blaine roundly. It denies the atrocities of Andersonville, and indulges in about a column of old-fashioned Southern talk, aimed at Mr. Blaine, which cannot but do Blaine great good at the North. One feature of the letter that will help Blaine's amendment, if it be voted on, is the declaration from Davis, that he does not desire amnesty.

The interior of the First Congregational church at Exeter was damaged to the extent of $3,000 on Sunday, by fire which caught in a defective flue.

The democrats started with great show of economy in regard to clerks of committees in the House. They even went so far as to pass a general resolution cutting down the number. One by one, the committee of the House asked and received authority from the House to employ clerks until the fact comes out that there are now more clerks employed than under the republicans in the last Congress.

Thos. E. Nason, of Felchville, Vt., shot Geo. Dean at Claremont, Sunday night, wounding him fatally. Nason was intoxicated at the time.

The New York Times gives a list of the murders which have been reported in New York during the five years ending with last month, together with the fate of the criminals. The number foots up two hundred and eighty-one, and of this army of mankillers, only seven have expiated their crime on the gallows, and over one-fourth of the whole list never were brought to trial at all. It is a shameful showing, and is enough to convince any one that justice in New York is indeed a blind goddess, too blind to catch and punish the offenders against her laws. It is a most eloquent arraignment of "Boss" government, especially in its judicial ramifications and ought to awaken sufficient popular indignation to inaugurate some genuine reforms.

A New Jersey jury has acquitted Charles K. Landis who killed an editor named Uri Carruth.

During a performance at Robinson's Opera House in Cincinnati, Saturday afternoon, a cry of fire was raised and during the panic that ensued five persons were killed and a dozen or more badly injured.

Horace Hatch, a prominent citizen of Lebanon, was arrested on Saturday on action of trover. He borrowed valuable bonds of William C. Bulkley, a long time ago to raise money on for the Sturtevant Manufacturing Company for a few days. The bonds have never been returned, and Hatch has been receiving a percentage for the use of his name on the Sturtevant Manufacturing Company's paper. Hatch put all of his property out of his hands three years ago, and it is claimed it was done to evade the payment of notes he had endorsed.

—The woodchuck, according to traditional authority, is a mixed type, religiously considered. He is a half pagan, half Christian. He sets himself up, on his hind feet, as an oracle, though he is consistent enough to share the faith in his own auguries that he expects others to have. So far he is but a type of refined heathenism. But he always chooses the second of February, or Candlemas Day, as the time of taking his observations. That would argue that he was a good churchman; and that he always comes forth from his Winter retreat on that day there is not a shadow of doubt in the minds of many who are much older and have had more experience than others who will read these reflections sceptically, perhaps contemptuously. That point settled, it doubtless occurred to comparatively few yesterday what a day of solemn import and sorrowful conclusions it was to the little hibernating climatic soothsayer who stood erect with mournful mien upon the warm side-hill, beside his friendly stump or protecting stone-wall, and waited for his sentence. With uplifted paws and trembling heart he saw the usually friendly sun smiling with demoniac satisfaction, and then, as he waited with eye askance, the black shadow of his little body told him his doom. For three months more, poor prisoner, according to your reckoning, you must remain in the dark and subsist upon the stores laid by through your autumnal industry and thrift. Then will Winter set you free, and the dogs and aspiring young hunters will take you up.

—Mr. J. Ollerhead writes from Wimbledon House to The Garden as follows: "We have a fine ivy-covered oak-tree in the grounds here. Its trunk at 4 feet 6 inches from the ground, measures 26 feet in circumference, and the spread of its branches, the widest way, is 55 feet in diameter. The whole, with the exception of two small branches, is clothed with ivy, which is now loaded with berries. So thoroughly has the ivy gained the mastery over the oak that the latter has for some years past been fast falling into decay. The only portions that retain any vitality are two small branches, which this year produced a quantity of acorns. It is the finest specimen of the kind I ever saw.

A lady bought a dollar's worth of Dry Goods, in my Store and got for a Present a four-pound Bar of Soap. She tore off the corner of the paper-wrapper enough to see what the package contained, when with a look of disgust she passed it back to the clerk with a request to have it exchanged, adding the remark that she already had five dollars' worth of soap at home. Well, I exchanged the package (although against the rule) and upon removing the wrapper FOUND A CHECK FOR THE $55 CHAMBER SET. I am determined that SOME ONE SHALL TAKE THAT

The grim monster, Death, was stealthily approaching. I could almost feel his hot, fiery breath upon my forehead. My faithless goddess, Hygeia, had utterly deserted me. Only now and then would Morpheus befriend me, but on this auspicious day, he had designed to molest me with visions of heavenly ambrosia, and I slept. As I slept, behold, I had a dream! I thought that I was roaming upon foreign soil whither my physician had sent me to recover my health. I was in a great metropolis—one of the grand marts of the world. In one of my scrolls I chanced to meet a man who had in his hand a handsomely bound volume, entitled "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," and who said that he was an agent for the sale of the book. The title was such a novel one that I was impelled to give the work a causal notice. As hastily glanced over its pages, I observed that it contained treatises not commonly found in medical works. But I had too many times been hoaxed by appearances, and I determined that I would have nothing to do with it. A voice within me, like a faithful mentor, whispered, "Know thy opportunity; in that book is thy salvation!" I began reasoning with myself. Although doubtful and distrustful, yet I put forth my hand to take the book, and to the agent was gone! I was miserable. In my agony I awoke. Great drops of perspiration were upon my brow. By my bedside was a friend who had called during my slumber to see me. Said my friend, "I have brought with me a book which I thought might interest you." One glance at the work, and I was assured that it was "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. Surely, this was the veritable book which I had seen in my dreams. My friend leaned on the work, and every day, as my strength permitted, I perused its pages. Although it contained very interesting treatises on Biology, Cerebral Physiology, Human Temperaments, Nursing of the Sick, etc., yet, being an invalid, I was most interested in the subject of Diseases and Remedies. I believed that I had a liver affection, and yet more than one medical attendant had pronounced my disease Consumption, and that I would fall with the autumn leaves. In that book I found my symptoms perfectly interpreted. I was then confident that I had not deceived myself. I reasoned thus: "Any man who can so truthfully depict my feelings, and apparently understands my constitutional tendencies, must know just what my physical system demands. I will trust my case with Dr. Pierce. I will take his Golden Medical Discovery as recommended for my disease." The result is, that after having perseveringly followed his prescribed treatment, I once again enjoy the blessings of health. Therefore, I would say to the afflicted, "Know thy opportunity," and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Heartache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrotula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon entered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden; Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have tried everything for a large share of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been quite troublesome; thought I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can venture on any food. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained from them the following: Please send one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have suffered from a dull pain I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything without any good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In conclusion testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold, they are worth more than a hundred dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this phase find $1.5o for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to move without crutches. I was recommended to try your Pills. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal of money, with little relief. Finally I concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Comprehensive. I thought the medicine I need, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well now, can eat anything, have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wished to try your medicine. I have sent pills to her, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will use them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Healer at 64 than Also—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roxbindale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.50 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national life with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to follow the action of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to be replaced or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and to test the question how far the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly as to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into political life. In trade, commerce and production it promises that we shall be tested as to our honest and hard money. Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it promises itself that the Nation will be fitted for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Central Ring, reaping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its judgment of the tendencies of the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere machines, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to place some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that Conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years practically forced their parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with its methods which have been so successful in its popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the latest news with pithy comments; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from contemporaries, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1873 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most invariable endeavor to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and the most able and trustworthy editorials. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors are numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

Genius and Debt.

Men of genius are equally facile in running into debt. Genius has no necessary connection with prudence or self restraint, nor does it exercise any influence over the common rules of arithmetic which are rigid and inflexible. Men of genius are often superior to what Bacon calls "the wisdom of business." Yet Bacon himself did not follow his own advice, but was ruined by his imprevidence. He was in straits and difficulties when a youth, and in still greater straits and difficulties when a man. His life was splendid, but his excessive expenditure involved him in debts which created a perpetual craving for money. One day in passing out to his ante-chambers, where his followers awaited his appearance, he said, "Be seated, my masters; your rise has been my fall." To supply his wants Bacon took bribes, and was thereupon beset by his enemies, convicted, degraded and ruined.

Even men with a special genius for finance on a grand scale may completely break down in the management of their own private affairs. Pitt managed the national finances during a period of unexampled difficulty, yet was himself always plunged into debt. Lord Carrington, ex-banker, once or twice, at Mr. Pitt's request, examined his household accounts, and found the quantity of butchers' meat charged in the bills was one hundred weight a week. The charge for servants' wages, board wages living, and household bills exceeded £2300 a year. At Pitt's death the nation voted £40,000 to satisfy the demands of his creditors, yet his income had never been less than £6000 a year; and at one time, with the Wardenship of the Cinque Ports, it was nearly £4000 a year more. Macaulay truly says that "the character of Pitt would have stood higher if, with the disinterestedness of Pericles and DeWitt, he had united their dignified frugality."

But Pitt by no means stood alone. Lord Melville was as unthrifty in the management of his own affairs as he was of the money of the public. Fox was an enormous ower, his financial maxim being that a man need never want money if he was willing to pay enough for it. Fox called the outer room at Almac's, where he borrowed on occasions from Jew lenders at exorbitant premiums, his "Jerusalem Chamber." Passion for play was his great vice, and at a very early age it involved him in debt to an enormous amount. It is stated by Gibbon that on one occasion Fox sat playing at hazard for twenty hours in succession, losing £11,000. But deep play was the vice of high life in those days, and cheating was not unknown. Selwyn, alluding to Fox's losses at play, called him Charles the Martyr.

Sheridan was the hero of debt. He lived on it. Though he received large sums of money in one way or another, no one knew what became of it, for he paid nobody. It seemed to melt away in his hands like snow in summer. He spent his first wife's fortune of £1600 in a six weeks' jaunt to Bath. Necessity drove him to literature, and perhaps to the stimulus of poverty we owe "The Rivals" and the dramas which succeeded it. With his second wife he obtained a fortune of £5000, and with £15,000 which he realized by the sale of Drury Land shares he bought an estate in Surrey, from which he was driven by debt and duns. The remainder of his life was a series of shifts, sometimes brilliant, but oftener degrading, to raise money and evade creditors. Taylor, of the Opera House, used to say that if he took off his hat to Sheridan in the street it would cost him fifty pounds; but if he stopped to speak to him it would cost a hundred. He was in debt all round—to his milkman, his grocer, his baker, and his butcher. Sometimes Mrs. Sheridan would be kept waiting for an hour or more, while the servants were beating up the neighborhood for coffee, butter, eggs and rolls. While Sheridan was Paymaster in the Navy a butcher one day brought a leg of mutton to the kitchen. The cook took it and clapped it in the pot to boil, and went up stairs for the money; but not returning, the butcher coolly removed the pot lid, took out the mutten, and walked away with it in his tray. Yet, while living in these straits, Sheridan, when invited with his son into the country, usually went in two chaises and four—he in one, and his son Tom following in the other. The end of all was very sad. For some weeks before his death he was nearly destitute of the means of subsistence. His noble and royal friends had entirely deserted him. Executions for debt were in his house, and he passed his last days in the custody of sheriff's officers, who abstained from conveying him to prison merely because they were assured that to remove him would cause his immediate death.

Arsenic Eating.

[Troy Times.]

A thirteen-year-old daughter of a Mr. Flagg, residing near Whitehall, N. Y., is exciting the attention of the physicians and scientific men in that vicinity. Some time ago Mr. Flagg put some arsenic on some bread and placed it in a portion of the house frequented by rats. The bread suddenly disappeared, and again and again other pieces were placed in the same locality, with the same result. He finally determined to watch and ascertain, if possible, what became of it. He had not long to wait before he was horror-stricken to observe his little daughter walk away from the place, cramming her mouth with the poisoned bread. A physician was sent for, and before his arrival the sobbing child made known to her parents that she had eaten all the bread that had been prepared for the rats, and that she liked it better than anything she had ever tasted. The physician was surprised, and thinking, possibly, that the drug might not be arsenic, he examined it, and found it arsenic beyond a doubt. To still further test it he tried a small quantity on a cat, which quickly sent the animal into convulsions, causing its death very soon afterward. What seems remarkable, too, is the fact that ever since the child first tasted arsenic she has begged for the deadly drug, time and time again. About a year ago the child fell sick with fits. Nothing would bring her out of the convulsions. In her quiet moments she would beg incessantly for arsenic. The physician in attendance, believing that the girl could not possibly recover, ventured to give it to her. The child devoured it with avidity, and in less than three days she was as well as usual. Since then she has been given the deadly poison at different times, the only effect it had upon her being to make her appear well, bright, and cheerful. The case has been laid before several scientific men, all of whom pronounce it one of the most remarkable phenomena of the age.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

For Senator-Thomas Leavitt.

Few public men are better known in Rockingham County than Thomas Leavitt, the republican candidate for Senator in the first district. For thirteen years or more he has been before the public in positions of honor and trust, which he has filled to universal satisfaction, and with a steadily growing popularity. He was born in North Hampton in 1832, but the next year his parents removed to Hampton, where he resided until his removal to Exeter in 1865, to fill the office of Register of Probate. Mr. Leavitt fitted for college principally at Hampton Academy, entered Bowdoin College in 1852, and graduated in 1856. He commenced the study of the law with Hon. Charles H. Bell after his graduation, but being dependent on his own resources, he spent a considerable portion of his time in teaching. He was admitted to the Rockingham bar in 1862. In 1863 he was elected to represent Hampton in the legislature, and was re-elected in 1864. In 1865 he was appointed by Gov. Gilmore Register of Probate for Rockingham County, and in 1870 was reappointed by Gov. Stearns, there being no candidate in opposition. He filled the office of Register for ten years with rare ability, an integrity that was never questioned, and with such a genial willingness to serve the public as to secure for him hosts of friends in every part of the county. In 1874 and 1875 he represented Exeter in the legislature, bringing to this service a valuable experience and a knowledge of law that soon won for him a prominent place in the House. Though an earnest republican, his efforts were directed rather to the promotion of the interests of the State than to the achievement of any party advantage, and in all his political career he has never been charged with rank and bitter partisanship.

The record of Mr. Leavitt's life, given above, furnishes a better idea of his fitness for the office of Senator than any words of commendation that we can offer. Only his most intimate friends know his real worth, for he is not a man to push his way by self-assertion or any display of "cheek." But in the thorough study and active pursuit of his profession, and in an honorable official career, he has won the respect and admiration of those who know him best, and a reputation for erudition and sound judgment that many men far more conspicuous might envy. His first election to the legislature was under peculiar circumstances. It was in the midst of the war, when the enlistment of a large number of young men from Hampton left that town in peril of being carried by the democrats, at a time when the loss of the legislature to the republican party would have been a national calamity. A man of strong personal popularity had to be chosen, and Mr. Leavitt was nominated. He was elected by a majority of three, which the next year was increased to sixty-three. During those two sessions he gave a hearty support to the war measures of the government, and the efforts of New Hampshire to do her part in the great struggle for the maintenance of the Union. In the more responsible position of Senator he will have a better opportunity for the exercise of his valuable acquirements and that habit of careful and exact accuracy which is more useful, whether in the service of a client or a State, than the most brilliant talents. Mr. Leavitt is yet in the prime of a vigorous manhood, and, as his worth becomes more widely appreciated, will easily win his way to still higher honors.—News-Letter.

Centennial.

The following address is from the office of the Women's Centennial Executive Committee, at the State House, Concord, and explains itself:

To the Women of New Hampshire: In the International Exhibition, which is to open in Philadelphia on the tenth day of May and continue until the tenth day of the following November, it is designed that woman's progress in the arts, the sciences, and in all branches of industry during the hundred years which have passed, shall be shown to the greatest advantage, so that she may be proud of what her sex has already achieved, and stimulated to further efforts in still wider fields.

Owing to the great number of applications by foreign nations for space in the general building, a proposition was made last June by Mr. Goshorn, the Director-General, to the Women's Centennial Executive Committee, urging the erection of a Pavilion to be devoted exclusively to the display of women's work. This proposal was received with favor, and a building has been erected at a cost of thirty thousand dollars, to which will be added the cost of the interior decorations, etc. Other expenses must necessarily be incurred by this department, all of which are to be met by the women of the country. In order that each state may bear its part in this work, the Women's Central Auxiliary Committee appropriately advise the formation of similar committees, in every village, town, and city of the States and territories, whose duty it shall be to raise money by various means to defray these expenses, and to add to the general centennial fund.

The time which is left us for action is very short, but let this fact be only a stimulant to our zeal, and an incentive to the greatest promptness in beginning our work.

We are proud to remember that New Hampshire was one of the original Thirteen States;—let us show ourselves worthy of such a birthright by joining our sisters of other States in contributing to the success of a celebration which shall commemorate the birth of the nation.

ELIZABETH S. STEVENS,
Member of the Women's Executive Committee for the State of New Hampshire.

We are informed that in quite a number of towns in the State preparations are being made to give entertainments for the benefit of the woman's department at the Centennial. This department should be one of the most interesting in the whole exhibition, for in no other country in the world do women wield the influence they do in the United States, politically and socially, and in no other country are they so self-reliant, independent and enterprising. The time left them to work is short, but if they work with their accustomed vim they can get up an exhibit which will make the foreign ladies' eyes stick out about a foot.

News and Notes.

The House on Tuesday voted to repeal the bankrupt act, 178 to 58.

Steamship Rotterdam, on which it is supposed Winslow sailed, put into Gravesend, Eng., for coal on Monday.

E. D. Mansfield, the "Veteran Observer," says: "It is perfectly certain that if Morrison's bill passes, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey will go for the republicans by great majorities."

The temperance excitement at Laconia continues on the increase. A large and enthusiastic meeting was held Sunday evening and many new signatures were obtained to the pledge.

Senator English has declined the back pay due him for the time elapsing between the death of Mr. Ferry and his election to the seat, and has ordered the Sergeant-at-arms to send the sum, amounting to between $500 and $600, to Mrs. Ferry.

The Congressional proceedings are getting intolerably dull. Things will not go off briskly again until Sam Cox gets up in his seat and calls some republican member a shock-headed, tin-eared, hump-backed, slab-sided, snag-toothed, foul-mouthed, patent-leather-ribbed, bottle-nosed, blear-eyed, bandy-legged, lantern-jawed, long-eared, pigeon-toed, spavin-jointed, knock-kneed, pug-nosed, cross-eyed, blue-bellied, splay-footed son of a saw-buck. These Congressmen had better get down to their work, instead of squandering their time on committee reports.—Chicago Times.

A correspondent of the Boston Herald has been anxiously travelling through the cities and towns of the sixth (Mass.) Congressional district, to see whether it is true that General Butler is going to "pick his flint" and try again for his old seat in the House of Representatives at Washington. He concludes that the General is much more likely to change his residence back into the fifth district and fight General Banks. Dr. Loring, he thinks, is going to be the candidate against Thompson next fall, and the battle ground will be Salem.

A Washington correspondent of the Herald says: "An intelligent democratic member from New England told me recently that he thought the republican prospects were twenty-five per cent. better than six months ago, and this seems to be the general feeling among careful men in both parties. There seems to be a steady drift of opinion in favor of republican success this year, always provided the best man is put at the head of the ticket."

War is threatened between Holland and Venezuela. The latter country is placing La Guayra and Poto Cabello in a state of defence. Gen. Zaer, commanding the Venezuelan troops at Poto Cabello, has been ordered to begin the war in the event of the Dutch vessels refusing to salute the Venezuelan flag.

Jefferson Davis himself is taking a hand in the amnesty debate. He is in favor of universal amnesty, and a general forgiveness and forgetfulness. So he calls Mr. Blaine a slanderer, a reckless villifier, an unscrupulous partisan and a "skulker of the fight." The Northern heart will probably resist even these amicable overtures, and continue to wish that Mr. Davis had been shot at sight in the Georgia swamps. —Portland Adv.

Vallandigham's grave is unmarked, even by a headstone. The confederate side of Congress should think of something besides Jeff Davis.—Chicago Times.

The unanimous renomination of Governor Person C. Cheney by the republicans of New Hampshire is but a just recognition of his conspicuous merits. His record as a citizen and as a public official is absolutely spotless. His ability, integrity and exalted public spirit have never been questioned by any political opponent and every public act and word of his gives new proof of his fitness for the place he holds.—Philadelphia Press.

Some months ago, John D. Lewis, a rich merchant of New York, whose early history had been carefully concealed, was killed in Central Park by a fall from a carriage, leaving a will which disposed of his large property. The contest over the will has brought out the fact that Lewis was a negro and that the next of kin are a brother and sister born in slavery, but now living in humble circumstances in Canada, whither they took refuge when escaping from bondage. They will probably secure the property.

A letter from Custer City, in the Black Hills, Jan. 25, says that over forty houses are now up, and sixty in process of erection. Water is found twenty feet from the surface. A steam saw-mill will be in operation in a few days. Flour is $12 per 100 pounds, and bacon 30 cents a pound. New parties who have arrived this winter have made new laws. The old pioneers find that their mining claims are jumped. Miners from the north, this side of the Big Horn, report new discoveries far surpassing any yet made. Red Cloud and several hundred warriors have gone north. They are reported to have said that they would die on the path rather than stay in their reservation to starve.

Mr. Fort, of Illinois, has introduced a bill in the House declaring the birth-day of Abraham Lincoln, April 14th, to be a holiday.

Admiral Stringham died in Brooklyn, Monday, aged 78 years.

Develin spoke in Lewiston, Me., Monday evening. The hall was quiet and no crowd or demonstration of any kind about the building.

The Worcester Press thinks Massachusetts politics without Butler is like home without a mother-in-law.

The Whitefield Church, Dr. Spalding's, of Newburyport, Mass., declines to participate in the Beecher council.

Mr. Rogers, Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Mr. Gilfillan, Cashier of the Treasury; Mr. March, private secretary; T. O. Burnham, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and other gentlemen connected with the Treasury Department, have gone to St. Louis as witnesses for the Government in the Babcock case.

Ex-Speaker Blaine, it is stated, has prepared another speech which he will deliver in the House when opportunity offers, in which he will dissect the speeches of Messrs. Hill, Tucker and other democratic members of the House on the amnesty question, and will again criticise Jefferson Davis and his late open letter.

Senator Christiancy, of Michigan, aged nearly 64 years, was married Tuesday to Miss Lily Lugenbeel, aged about 20 years. The young lady is a charming blonde. The Senator is hale, hearty and vigorous, and has a family of full-grown children.

Warren Lee Goss, President of the National Union of Andersonville Survivors, has written a letter replying to Jefferson Davis' assertion that the mortality of Confederate prisoners in Union hands was in greater proportion than that of Union soldiers in rebel prisons. Mr. Goss quotes the Federal War Department figures, showing the total captures of soldiers and citizens by the Confederate forces to have been 188,145. It is estimated that of these half were actually confined in prisons. The number of deaths in Confederate prisons was 26,401; consequently the per cent. of mortality in prisons was over 38 3-4, and the per cent. of entire captures about 19 3-8. Per contra, the number of captures by the Union forces was 476,169; number actually confined (the rest being paroled or exchanged,) 227,570; mortality of prisoners, 30,155; per cent. of mortality in prison, 13 1-8; per cent. of the mortality of the whole number of captures, 6 1-8. Thus the mortality in rebel prisons was about three times as great as in the Union prisons. Mr. Goss also quotes from the official report of the Confederate inspector of prisons, Col. D. F. Chandler, favorably endorsed by the Confederate Assistant Secretary of War, to show recommendations actually made to the Davis Cabinet to replace Gen. Winder, Commandant at Andersonville, with some one more humane, and the only notice thereof by Davis was to promote Winder to the position of the Commissary-General of all the Confederate prisons.

—A strong and steady wind had been blowing in Chicago from the east for two days, and of course the water pipes became stuffed up. He secured a plumber, and had the obstruction removed. It proved to be a mudpout five inches long. He wrapped it up in a handkerchief, waltzed down to the water office, and, unfolding the handkerchief, observed to the clerk, "What's that?" The clerk cast a glance at it, and with a smile of contempt at the simplicity of the question, answered, "Why, you idiot, that's a fish." "I know it is," said the unhappy taxpayer; "I know it is, but where do you think I found it?" "I'm sure I don't know," replied the clerk with a yawn, "and I'm sure I don't care." "Well, I found it in my water pipes." "You don't say you did?" replied the official, urbanely, and with a feeble show of interest; "must have been a pretty tight fit." "But, sir," yelled the citizen, "It's a bull pout! Is this what I pay my water rates for?" "Why, you fool," said the clerk, with a pitying smile, "you don't expect us to furnish you with goldfish or California salmon, do you?" Then he yawned and the taxpayer withdrew, respectfully slamming the door.—Chicago Tribune.

—As an aged darkey and a young colored chap were shuffling around the Exposition building, looking at the dog show, the younger one suddenly said: "Come on, uncle; let's go ober dar whah does lopeahed, big-chop dorgs is." "No, yo' don't, Cuffy," exclaimed the old darkey, drawing back; "yo' don' come dat on dis chile; I knows what dem is—dey is bloodhoun's—dey is—rale live niggah-chasers from de Souf, an' I's seed 'nuff o' dem dogs yeah's an' yeah's ago." And they couldn't get the old chap near that part of the show. —Chicago Journal.

—A little Meriden (Conn.) girl whose father recently died, being displeased that her mother has fallen in love with another man, applied to the Mayor to have the affair stopped by the police, and when informed that they couldn't do anything about it, left his office, crying.

—Hank Monk, the California stage driver who figures in the well worn story of Horace Greeley's uncomfortable ride, is old, impecunious and drunken. Carson miners recently took him prisoner, and scrubbed him clean and dressed him in new clothes.

Jottings.

Mr. J. K. Osgood, the temperance reformer, and Mr. Drew, president of the Concord Reform Club, will speak at the Temple this evening. The meeting will commence at half past 7 o'clock.

The banks in this city are putting chronometer time locks on their vaults.

The report of the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners sharply criticises Eastern Railroad management. It says its ruin was wrought in 1872—3, and that the purchase of Maine Central stock WAS ILLEGAL.

The Great Falls Journal says "the two bachelor editors of the Portsmouth CHRONICLE office are getting nervous," which the Times copies, and adds, "The following leap year item appeared in the CHRONICLE of last week: 'Only 335 days more, girls!'" That's always the way—the ins always make sport over the tribulations of the outs.

On Saturday, about noon, while Mary Murphy, who was employed as a servant at the house of Hon. Onslow Stearns, was returning to Concord from Portsmouth, where she had been on a visit home, she was taken suddenly ill. At Candia she was taken from the car to a hotel, where she died about ten o'clock in the evening. She was about 23 years old. An inquest was held on Tuesday, at which Dr. J. M. Gould of Raymond and Drs. Gibbs and Burnham of Epping testified that her death was caused by congestion of the brain caused by mental excitement, and vomiting induced by undigested food in the stomach. The verdict of the jury was in accordance.

Frank Jones' kangaroo, Josh Foster, squirms every time the wretched management of the Eastern Railroad is mentioned, showing that his owner is particularly sensitive on that vulnerable point. Tread on Frank's favorite corn and the Dover thing responds with its squirt gun as readily as if the two were twins.

Kensington folks say that a Portsmouth girl writes to the school authorities of that town that she "hed bin out of employment for a year, an' wud tech for $8 a month and her board hove in."

Pay Inspector Gilman, formerly on duty at this navy yard, and Pay Inspector Thornton, of Massachusetts, are on the Board which is ordered to assemble at Mare Island, Cal., February 21, to try Pay Inspector Spaulding.

Mr. Charles Palmer, of Portland, who entered the employ of the Eastern Road about a year ago soon lost two fingers off his right hand while shackling cars. Last Fall he lost a finger on the left hand in the same manner. Last Friday he had the thumb on his left hand taken off. Palmer thinks by the time he has been railroading a few years his fingers will be thinned out so that they can't be injured.

Encouragement.

Mr. John S. Treat, President of the Portsmouth Reform Club, recently received the following letter from J. Horace Kent, Esq., a gentleman who knows from personal experience what intemperance will do to a man's prospects and welfare, socially and in business, and what reformation will do to enable him to regain what intemperance has lost him. The letter was not intended for publication, but will be of interest to Mr. Kent's numerous friends in this city, and to the members of the Reform Club, if to none else:

QUINCY HOUSE, BOSTON.

Dear Sir:—You will pardon me, I know, when I tell you that absence from the city and pressing official business has prevented me from being more prompt in extending to you and the gentlemen connected with you, in the glorious cause you have undertaken, my hearty congratulations and best wishes for your success. If the wonderful exertions which are now being made in New Hampshire to improve the condition of man by reforming him from the terrible evils of intemperance do not revolutionize matters, I shall be mistaken. There is no object,—social, moral or religious,—which should command attention or excite more interest than the one with which you are identified, and while the consciousness of having afforded assistance to a cause of such magnitude has afforded me satisfaction and delight, I know that the same efforts on your part will be attended with gratification and pride. Indeed, it is a source of great pleasure to me to reflect and dwell in my thoughts upon the time, now nearly four years ago, when I said in the Warwick House in this city; "That is the last drop of liquor I will ever drink;" and it was, for I have never tasted either cider, wine, ale or any spirits from that moment to this. At that time light came to me and my eyes were open in the right direction. You are engaged in a noble work and public opinion is being expressed in language which cannot be misunderstood, and public opinion will be respected.

Say an encouraging word to the members of the club from me, and say to them that they must go about like ministering angels "seeking whom they may save, carrying consolation to the afflicted and hope to the desponding, pouring the oil of joy for mourning and spreading the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness," and don't forget that by the magic touch of kindness the captive's chains are the easiest broken.

It will be my pleasure, I hope, before long, to meet with you and by my voice assure you I am also with you in faith.

Truly, etc., J. HORACE KENT.

Railroad Politics.

Our advice to the democratic press, that while they are giving out conundrums to stockholders in the Northern Railroad concerning the depreciation of their stock and whether the political use of the railroad has had anything to do with it, they ask the same questions of the Eastern Railroad stockholders, seems to have touched Foster of the Dover Democrat in a tender spot, and makes him say "the editor of the Portsmouth CHRONICLE is either insane on account of losing his free pass and railroad advertising, or else he is a natural born fool." Joshua, my boy, you are welcome to whatever opinion you choose to entertain regarding our mental condition—it does not interest us in the least; but the writer of the article which so troubled your peaceful mind never had nor asked for a "free pass" over any railroad, nor was he ever in any way interested in "railroad advertising." Joshua doesn't like the intimation that the Eastern Railroad has been run in the interests of the democratic party since Hon. Frank Jones has been one of its directors, any more than the republicans like the fact that it has been so run.

Presidential Talk.

A Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Tribune says:—Among the active democratic politicians in this State the feeling in favor of Gov. Hendricks for President is very strong. Probably nine-tenths of the men who, from their prominence in the party, are most likely to be selected as delegates to the National convention are open supporters of his candidacy. They insist that Mr. Hendricks is the best representative of the average opinion of the democracy of the country on all public questions, and that he is a good compromise candidate for the East and West. In making the statement they betray their partiality for a nominee who, if still sitting on the financial fence, shall have one leg down on the soft-money side. No man with evident leaning toward hard-money theories would suit them, and it follows that no Eastern candidate finds favor in their eyes. For the same reason they do not like Senator Thurman, and while they have great respect for Senator Bayard he will not get their votes. It is not often that a pronounced inflationist can be found among them, but earnest resumptionists are just as scarce. The mass of Pennsylvania democrats—leaders and rank and file—believe that the hard times are caused by the resumption act and the National banking system. They still cherish the delusion that government could, if it would, devise some scheme to make it easy to borrow money at low interest and on poor security, and thus "start business." The repeal of the resumption act and the substitution of greenbacks fundable in 3.65 bonds for the National bank circulation is apparently what the party desires, so far as it has any definite ideas on the subject.

It is admitted that the nomination of Gov. Hendricks would make it impossible to carry New York. The programme is to abandon that State, together with New-Jersey, Connecticut, and New Hampshire, to the republicans and make the great central States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana the battle-ground. The electoral vote of these States added to that of the Southern States, which the democrats believe they are certain to carry, would give them 193 votes, or 9 more than is necessary to choose a President. It is not claimed that this is a safer plan for the campaign than the one proposed by the New York democrats of uniting the hard-money States of the East and the Pacific coast with the South, but the argument used is that it will be found utterly impossible to bring the West and the South up to the convention in support of what is denounced in those sections as the republican financial policy—that of resumption by the retirement of greenbacks. The majority in the Convention will, it is believed, be too bitterly opposed to Eastern hard-money theories to consent, even for expediency's sake, to take a candidate like Gov. Tilden.

—She was a Cincinnati belle—her father stuck pigs for a living—and as her impatient adorer urged the appointment of a day, she could not but pity him. "I yearn as much as you do, Alphonse," she said with a sigh, "but we must wait. Taller's down and pork's flatter'n ever."

—Paul Haupt, of Denver, went through the war without a scathe, and when his regiment was sent to Arizona, encountered on one occasion five Apaches single handed, killing three of their number. Last week he was crushed to death between two blocks of ice in an ice house.

—Cruz Lopez, a former pensive peanut vender of San Francisco, is now the wildest bandit on the Mexican border. He went to the bad because every policeman or millionaire that passed his stand stole a nut with an air of abstraction.

—A letter from Washington says: "Banks made a very favorable impression upon the House. What he said didn't amount to anything, but his manner was admirable."

The Plumber's Bride.

CHAPTER I.

A poor but honest plumber loved passionately the beautiful and accomplished only daughter of a wealthy temperance lecturer. She returned his affection, but the stern father forbade her to associate with her lover, and said that if he ever caught him in the house he'd kick him from heaven to breakfast.

CHAPTER II.

The lovers met by stealth and exchanged their mutual vows. "Fear not, Maud," said the gallant young plumber, "For Old Probs says that there is an area of very low temperature for the lakes and Northwest. To-morrow your father's pipes will freeze, and frozen pipes, my Maud, my own, are like love—they level all. And now farewell." He clasped her to his bosom, and when they separated she had a black spot on her right cheek and he had a taste of bismuth, rouge, cosmetique, and pearl powder in his mouth.

CHAPTER III.

The morrow came. The thermometer went down and coal went up. Boys found it an unprofitable investment to test the quality of lamp posts and hydrants with their tongues. Maud's father's water pipes were frozen. He sent for a plumber to come pretty blessed quick. Maud's lover came, lit a candle, stuck some lighted newspapers under the sink, and said they was fix about sixteen feet down. "Thaw them," said the stern old man, "and a monarch's ransom shall be yours." "I ask not so much," replied the noble youth. "Name your reward, my children are dying of thirst before my eyes, and the hired woman says it won't wash." "Then," said the plumber boldly, "give me your daughter." "Never," cried the haughty aristocrat, and with one kick he launched the plumber over the back steps, and threw his furnace and carpet-bag after him.

CHAPTER IV.

"I'll thaw 'em out myself, dum me if I don't," said the old man, as he took a lighted candle and went down into the cellar. He found the leaden pipe and applied the candle to it. "Ha! ha!" he laughed scornfully, "I had rather be a toad and feed in the lonesome dungeons of a viper than to pay a plumber for work I can do myself. Ha! ha! ha!" He had hardly uttered the words when a tremendous explosion followed, and the first thing he knew he was oblivious of everything.

CHAPTER V.

When he recovered he was lying on a couch in his own house. He heard a smack, and said: What's thunder's up?" "He lives," cried his daughter, appearing at his side with a black patch on her left cheek. "Evans be praised," sobbed the plumber, as he wiped some pearl-powder off his nose. "O, pa," said his daughter, "you tried to thaw out the gas pipes! But Thomas saved you and turned off the cock, and the water is on now." Tears sprung to the eyes of the hardened man, and he huskily cried: "Thomas, take her; Maud, you are his. Send out the servant, and let her order clergymen for two. And now clear out, and do your hugging somewhere else, for it's enough to make a horse sick." "Maud!" "Thomas!" The end.

—Two railway superintendents had engaged in a considerable discussion in relation to the rules and regulations governing the movements of trains, until late one Saturday evening. The next day one of them entered the office and found the other busily at work. "Mr. Jones," said he, "what is the third commandment?" "Eastward bound trains have the right to the track twenty-five minutes over westward bound trains," replied Mr. Jones.

—"My client is no more guilty of stealing that hog than a frog ain't got no fall," was a young lawyer's address to a Warren county, N. Y., jury.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!
The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!
These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:
Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a burden. Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.
ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.
MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks, and thought I should die. I saw your advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt better after taking one dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained their orders for them. Inclosed find one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.
Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.
BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.
THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have suffered very much from Piles, and gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. Yours truly, H. D. LEONARD.
Care Watson & Gannett.
DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.
MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered very much from Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal of money, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Compiler, and thought I would try your medicine. I have used it, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, can walk well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in my health. It will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I send $1.00 for one package. I would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be rejoiced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages. Yours respectfully, MRS. B. T. LANE.
Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.
DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.
THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, has been wrought by your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages. MRS. B. T. LANE.
Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

N. Y. TRIBUNE.
"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."
The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it promises to be the stormy arena of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the political world of Europe there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that a closer relation of Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long delayed revival.
In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan sectarian or personal hates or ambitions.
THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the new issues of peace. But it can never be servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money and effective reform, and to check greed in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.
One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.
THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with the most fearless and free discussion from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.
From those who believe our journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally accepted at home, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It was upon this position that its clearest vindications and the most invaluable exertions to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, will be put, and shine in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN has probably done as much as all other Journals combined, to introduce and disseminate Improved Stock of every kind through the country; and commands to a greater degree than any contemporary, the confidence and support of breeders and purchasers.
THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN contains unusually full and trustworthy Market Reports, and devotes special attention to them and to the Prospects of the Crops, showing the light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and When to Sell.
THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN embraces numerous minor departments of Rural Economy, such as the Dairy, the Poultry-Yard, the Apiary, the Vineyard, and so on; and contains a goodly column or two for the Household and an interesting variety of Fireside Reading. It contains a well-edited Review of Current Events, and its silver-lining pages furnish a directory of all the principal agricultural and horticultural establishments of the country.

PULMONIC

BUCHMAN'S PULMONICIN CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Cordiale he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or any where else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

POSTAGE PREPAID ON ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS.
Every subscriber for 1876 will be presented with a superb, large-sized steel engraving of Trumbull's celebrated picture of "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence." This will be "Peterson's" Centennial Gift.
"PETERSON'S MAGAZINE" contains, every year, 1600 pages, 14 steel plates, 12 colored Berlin patterns, 12 mammoth colored fashion plates, 24 pages of music, and 900 wood cuts.
Great improvements will be made in 1876. Among them will be a series of illustrated articles on the Great Exhibition at Philadelphia, which will alone be worth the subscription price. They will be appropriately called
THE CENTENNIAL IN PEN AND PENCIL!
The immense circulation of "Peterson" enables its proprietor to spend more money on embellishments, content, than any other. It gives more for the money than any in the world. Its are the best published anywhere. All the most popular writers are employed to write original stories for "Peterson." In 1876, in addition to the usual quantity of short stories, FIVE ORIGINAL COPYRIGHT NOVELETTES will be given, by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, Mrs. F. H. Burnett, and others.

READING FOR CHILDREN.
OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.
A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.
A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.
WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.
CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS
Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that thoroughness of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "vapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in
A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL
On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is derived from the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debauches the intellect, unfits for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these sensational issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, secured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."
The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In
That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."
A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.
REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR GIRLS AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."
To order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00.
Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $14.00.
Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift-books for children ever issued.
The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc., etc., more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!
Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

A DANGEROUS CUSTOMER.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Six or seven days ago an old man entered the store of a Detroit hardware man, who also deals in seeds, and, inquiring for the proprietor, soon stood face to face with him.

"Want to see me?" asked the dealer.

"Yes, sir, I do! Seven years ago this coming spring I bought a paper of seeds of you!"

"I presume so."

"I'll swear to it, sir! Seven years ago, sir, and not one of those seeds came up."

"Well, that's funny," laughed the dealer.

"You may think it was," said the old man, "but I'll make it cost you ten thousand dollars. When you sold me those seeds, sir, you did not know that you were dealing with a lion!"

"Well, you stop your blowing and get out of here!"

"Give me a package of cabbage seeds, sir!"

"I won't!"

The old man went away, but in an hour returned and said in a loud voice—

"Seven years ago this coming spring I bought a package of seeds at this store. Not one of those seeds arose from the sile!"

He was ordered out, and he went out. He was there the next morning as soon as the proprietor was and he said—

"Seven years ago this coming spring you sold me a package of seeds. Not one single seed matured to manhood."

He was put out that time, but he returned in the afternoon, when the store was full of customers, and exclaimed—

"Seven years ago this coming spriug I was swindled by that man there! He sold me a package of garden seeds, not one seed of which ever thruv!"

When he went out something hit him in the back. He went down the street for a while, and then returned and stood in front of the store and said to the people who passed—

"Seven years ago this coming spring this store here sold me garden seeds that never sprouted!"

He repeated the words over and over until a crowd began to gather, when he was called in and given a dozen papers of seed and told to forgive and forget.

"Six papers of onion seed to pay for the choking!" he said as he buttoned his overcoat.

They were given him, and when stowed away he remarked, "six papers of cucumber seed to pay for four kicks!"

After some argument these were handed him, and as he backed out of doors he said:

"It's all right! You've acted like a man about it, and if you want any vegetables next fall I'll make a discount to you."

The Jugglers of Madras.

[Madras correspondence of the London Telegraph.]

In a city so famous for jugglers, snake-charmers, acrobats, and Chevaliers d'industrie generally, ladies and gentlemen who live by their wits, in the most proper sense of the word, and who apparently make a very good living, it was scarcely likely that the Prince of Wales would be permitted to stay long without witnessing the feats of skill for which these wandering Madrassees are celebrated. Thursday being a comparatively open day, therefore, the morning was selected for an al fresco exhibition of this kind. The town lost the nomads; Government House received them. Let us look at the savage who appears to make the dried skin of a cobra live. It is a favorite trick—you may see it done twenty times a day in the streets of Madras. You may examine the apparatus closely every time and watch the operation as carefully as you please, yet you cannot detect the modus operandi. The performer hands you a little flat wicker basket, some eight inches in diameter, and asks you to inspect it, while he folds the cobra skin, which you have previously well examined, in a square, leaving only the tail unfolded. So soon as you have given the basket back the juggler places it on the ground, in full view, and under the lid puts the folded part of the serpent's skin, the tail being in your sight all the while.

You may at this stage, lift the lid once more to see that nothing but the serpent skin is in the basket, after which you must rest content. A white cloth is taken by the man and placed over the basket, after having been well shaken so that you may be assured that nothing is in it. A pipe is produced, and a horrible noise, similar to that always made by snake charmers, and not unlike the sound a cracked and badly made bagpipe would emit, is made. No one goes near the cloth or basket except the almost naked man, who cannot possibly hide any live snake in his sleeves, for the simple and sufficient reason that he has neither sleeves nor jacket, nor, indeed, cloth, which would certainly be a most inconvenient hiding place for a lively young cobra. The sheet is lifted, you look at the basket and see the tail of a living snake being gradually drawn into it, and on the lid being opened a most distinctly energetic serpent is discovered. No sooner is it stirred than it rises on its tail, spreads out its hood, and strikes with its fangs and tongue at the charmer. No one would care to examine that basket now, with a cobra four feet long making vicious snaps at the juggler. The charmer takes good care that the snake comes near you, for with a dexterous movement he seizes the reptile by the head, and holding it in one hand comes to you with the basket in the other, while you put a rupee into the receptacle, if only to induce him to go away.

The snake gone, a stout, strong girl comes forward, makes a deep obeisance, and then, stepping back, throws a man weighing fully eleven stone over her shoulders. Nor does she stop here, for she seizes her victim once more, places him crosswise on her back, and then tosses him into the air as though he were made of feathers, and not a broad-shouldered human being. Turning backward on her feet, she picks up straws with her eyelids, throws somersaults, and lifts weights which would astonish the ordinary London acrobat. While she is thus performing, jugglers are changing pebbles into birds, birds into eggs, and eggs into plants; men thread beads with their tongues, join innumerable pieces of cotton into one long cord, keep half a score of sharp knives in the air at once, throw cannon balls with their toes, and spin tops on the end of twigs. Pandemonium reigns, the clatter is unbearable, and one is compelled, as was the Prince, to dismiss the tribe of vagrants without further delay.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

A fire on Broadway, New York, Tuesday night, destroyed the Continental Hotel and thirty other buildings. The losses are estimated at $4,500,000, one firm, Catlin, Brundrett & Co., losing $1,500,000. Three firemen were killed by the falling of the walls of the Continental.

On the 8th inst., the barn, L and part of the house of E. S. Knight, at Nashua, were burned. The fire was caused by dropping a lamp on the barn floor. Loss $1400; insurance partial.

The trial and conviction of Doyle, the Mollie Maguire and murderer or one of the murderers of Jones is likely to prove the opening wedge in a crusade against this terrible organization that shall rid the Schuylkill coal region of the foul tyranny of lawlessness under which it has too long suffered.

A. H. Blaney and others of East Boston have just started a novel charitable idea in the Island ward. A team has been secured which goes through certain streets each day and collects bread from the charitably disposed. The bread thus obtained is given out at the police station with the soup. Thus far about one hundred loaves a day have been collected. A circular is sent to the inhabitants of a street the day previous to the coming of the wagon.

The Floridian says Mr. J. Stanley, of Marianna, has presented to the editor of the Courier two fine clusters of oranges from his grove in Calhoun county. One of them contained nine oranges, all touching each other and weighing in the aggregate twelve pounds and two ounces.

When Mr. Blaine proposed to distinguish Jefferson Davis by refusing to include him in a general amnesty, a majority of the republicans of the North believed that he made a great mistake. More than half of Davis' letter, however, is taken up in showing that Mr. Blaine was right. Whatever may be the feeling of the rest of the South, it is plain that Davis at least is unchanged. In his mind still the reconstructed States are conquered and outraged provinces; the Northern hordes are "invaders;" it is the privilege of the South to forgive, not ours. He does not wish for amnesty. He has "no view of the future" which makes it desirable for him to be included in an amnesty bill. He does not look upon it as an act of grace. To impose disabilities was an infringement of law. To remove them by act of Congress is usurpation. He will have none of our forgiveness. He only asks now, as he did of old, to be let alone. And the comment of the multitude at the North will be, "Well, Blaine knew Jeff. Davis best, after all."—N. Y. Tribune.

Several indications come to hand that Mr. Blaine's stock is rising in the West. A correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press has canvassed the Minnesota legislature and the State and federal officers on the Presidential question, and announces this result: For Blaine, 48; for Washburne, 12; for Bristow, 5; for Morton, 4; for Grant, 5; for Hayes, 2, and several scattering votes for less prominent candidates. Total for Blaine, 48, against 34 for all other. All of the federal officers, and all of the State officers except three, were for Blaine. A special dispatch from Leavenworth to the Chicago Tribune, says of Kansas sentiment: "Over one-half the newspapers in this State have declared for J. G. Blaine for President and John J. Ingalls for Vice-President. The Kansas delegation will probably go to the Cincinnati Convention instructed to vote for these two men." Of the feeling in Iowa, the Davenport Gazette says: "Mr. Blaine is making unmistakable advances in the Presidential race. This is welcome assurance. Should it soon become evident that he will be the winning man, for nomination and election, republicans in this region will be abundantly satisfied."

Ex-Gov. Noyes of Ohio is confident that his State will send a solid Hayes delegation to the National republican convention. What their second choice would be he did not care to say, when a reporter of the Indianapolis Sentinel asked him, but on the general subject of the prospects of other candidates he remarked: "Conkling's men will have much to say. I understand that New York, besides going into the convention solid for him, has secured and equipped a working force of 5,500 men to create a Conklin odor in the atmosphere. They may not bring so many as that. I hardly believe they will produce more than 1,000, but that is a powerful force. Pennsylvania will be for Hartranft first, with Blaine as second choice. The New England States will declare for Blaine, I think, as one man, and so far as I know personally, Morton has no assured strength outside of the South and Indiana. Another thing must be remembered in trying to calculate what compromise can probably be effected when the rub comes. It used to be the case that New York and Pennsylvania would put their heads together and rule the roost. But that day is over now. Ohio and Indiana are placed in a condition to dictate terms, on the basis of their earlier elections, and any eye can see a favorable omen for Hayes in this fact, with the convention held on Ohio soil.

Jere. McNamara and Michael Sullivan were badly scalded at the Salmon Falls mill, by the boiling over of starch from a sizing tub. McNamara is in a critical condition.

Miss Amy Ames, a favorite young actress formerly of the Boston Museum company, died recently in Paris, of peritonitis.

The President pro tem. of the Senate has a vein of humor in him. When the name of Senator Christiancy, his colleague, who had been married in the morning, was called, he very slyly said: "I beg to state to the Senate that my colleague is paired."

Bowen.

Henry C. Bowen replies to the examining committee of Plymouth church as follows:

I have received a letter, signed by S. B. Halliday, Clerk, summoning me to appear before you this evening to state the facts, if any, within my knowledge which tend to sustain the allegation made by me in my letter to the Examining Committee, to answer such questions as may be put to me, and await the action of the Committee in my case. Bowen then says he has carefully read Mr. White's grievances, and believes he has made a complete answer to the same, but, that he may make no mistake, he asks for the exact questions White wishes him to answer and to know the portion of the grievance calling for a more specific reply. Bowen continues: I see by your communication that your committee, which has never adopted Mr. White's grievances as charges against me and which I had a right to presume was impartially hearing the matter and advising us both, now considers that it has put me on trial. When the present case of Mr. White is disposed of I shall be quite willing to attend to any other grievance or complaint, provided the same is properly presented.

Said he, "Confound this ulster and the cold wind: I've got three hairs frozen on to my nose, and two at the corner of my mouth," "Where's the other hair, dear?" she inquired tenderly.—Lawrence American.

—One of the illusions is that the present hour is not the critical, decisive hour. Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows that every day is doomsday.—Emerson.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft, and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory. The effects of all medicines which operate upon the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all those diseases, however, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by dealers in medicines.

Amelioration and Cure.

Amelioration of the symptoms of a disease is, of course, one desirable object of medication, and there are, no doubt, palliatives which possess considerable remedial efficacy. The temporary disappearance of the indicia of a disease, in too many instances, however, deludes the sick into a belief that they are cured. Many of those who have borne grateful testimony to the permanent remedial effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, in cases of liver disorder, chronic constipation, intermittent and remittent fevers, urinary and rheumatic ailments, have also recorded the fact that the temporary relief occasionally afforded by the medicine which they tried before using the great restorative inspired hopes which were speedily dissipated by a return of the malady. The Bitters not only relieve, but if persistently and regularly taken, CURE the maladies to which they are adapted.

The Eastern Railroad.

The forty-first annual report of the Eastern Railroad Company was published last week. We have now the seventh annual report of the Railroad Commissioners, a large portion of which is taken up with an interesting retrospect of this much mismanaged corporation. As supplementary to the report of the directors it is most acceptable. It covers with great clearness those points which Gen. Lawrence avoided, as his report did not propose "to impugn the wisdom of the past management of the road, nor to reflect in any way upon individuals." The Railroad Commissioners, on the contrary, speak so pointedly that no one need misunderstand their language. They show that the directors, in purchasing stock of Maine Central, had no authority in law for their injudicious act. They assert that unadvised purchases were made with the utmost secresy. They deny the legal right of the directors to use the funds of the corporation for many purposes. They charge that the reports of the condition of the road were unreliable. They are of the opinion that no one connected with the management of the road had any knowledge of the debt or assets of the road, and they believe that "there are certain details connected with some of the financial transactions which should be thoroughly inquired into, either by the stockholders, or by some public tribunal empowered to compel the attendance of witnesses and the giving of evidence."

THE EASTERN RAILROAD.

The Commissioners briefly allude to the early history of the road, more fully given in the directors' report. In August, 1871, the Revere accident took place, which precipitated a change in the management and policy of the company, which had previously been decided upon. Mr. George M. Browne retired, and the Eastern Railroad entered upon that reckless policy of competition with the Boston and Maine which has caused the destruction of one road and greatly injured the other. We now quote from the Railroad Commissioners' report:

THE FATAL STRUGGLE COMMENCED.

The struggle seems to have originated in the desire of those controling a railroad in the State of Maine to secure a larger return on their property, and in the shrewd ingenuity with which they went about to secure that result. Both the Eastern Railroad and the Boston and Maine, prior to the Spring of 1871, made a connection with the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth road; the one at the New Hampshire State line, the other at South Berwick Junction. With a view to avoiding destructive competition and to effect a reasonably fair division of business, the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth had for a number of years been leased by the two Massachusetts corporations at a gold rental of 6 per cent. per annum on its stock; and the contract further provided a penalty of $100,000 to be paid by any one of the three parties who should break the lease, to each of the others. Not satisfied with 6 per cent., those controlling the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth thought, in 1870, to secure better terms. Their position was a very advantageous one, and they availed themselves of it with much shrewdness. Not only the Massachusetts corporations, but the Maine Central also, which connected with the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth at Portland, and constituted the eastern extension of that line, were eager competitors, and were played off one against the other for an exclusive lease. Owing to the presence in the field of the Maine Central, if for no other reason, the rival Massachusetts lines were unable to come to an understanding which would have rendered them masters of the situation. The three corporations were made to bid against each other. For a time it was a question which would secure the prize, and whether, after all, both of the Massachusetts companies would not be forced to enter into another competitive bidding for both the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth and the Maine Central. For the latter company sought to get control of the former only to enhance its own doubtful market value. Finally the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth came to terms with the Eastern, under which it gave an exclusive lease to that Company, which was to pay it 10 per cent. per annum on its stock, instead of 6 per cent., and also $100,000 in cash to reimburse to it the penalty it was obliged to pay to the Boston and Maine, under the terms of the broken lease. The leasing company was furthermore to assume all the outstanding liabilities of the leased line, which it themselves amounted to the not inconsiderable sum of several hundred thousand dollars. Under this arrangement the Boston and Maine was practically excluded from the eastern business, which, in view of the approaching completion of the European and North American Railroad through to St. John and the Provinces, it was then supposed would be of great and increasing importance.

THE BOSTON AND MAINE.

Not disposed to quietly accept the situation thus forced upon them, those managing the Boston and Maine at once inaugurated a railroad war of the most unrelenting description; and millions of money were expended by them to the construction of a parallel road for the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth, from South Berwick to Portland. As usual in these contests, one step led to another. Those holding the securities of other roads in Maine naturally followed the example set them by the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth stockholders, and placed one of the two competing roads off against the other. The argument used in every case seems to have been that, if the Eastern road did not lease this, or purchase that, or effect this or the other ruinous contract, the Boston and Maine would; and the through business which was soon to flow from the northeastern wilderness was so incalculable in amount that almost any contract would prove remunerative. In this way, during the year 1871, and before what might be considered the conservative management had gone out of the Eastern road and the recent and progressive management come into it, not only had the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth lease been effected, but the extension of the Portsmouth, Great Falls and Conway road had been begun, the construction of the Wolfeborough Branch decided upon, and a new running contract had been entered into with the Maine Central.

THE EASTERN OUTWITTED.

The liabilities assumed under these several arrangements by the Eastern Railroad Company were certainly—if publicly known which they were not—calculated to excite grave apprehension among the holders of its securities. In the case of the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth lease, it involved a cash payment amounting probably to $300,000 to $400,000, and an annual payment of 10 per cent. in place of 3 per cent. on $1,500,000 of stock, or an increase in the neighborhood of $120,000 a year. Nor was this all. Those managing the Maine Central road, disappointed in their efforts to secure the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth, suddenly found their opportunity restored to them through the extension of the Boston & Maine. They held the one connecting link between the new European & North American road and Portland, which both the Massachusetts lines now reached. Taking immediate advantage of the eager spirit of competition, in their turn they induced the Eastern road to consent to a revision of the tariff arrangements, in the hope of securing an exclusive connection. This was effected, though against the judgment of President Browne, who put his dissent on record, and went into operation in July, 1871. Under the joint tariff as thus revised the Maine Central received 50 cents more than it had theretofore received on each passenger, and from 70 to 95 cents more for each ton of freight which it delivered to the Eastern road—a change which was equivalent to an increase of at least $100,000 a year in the revenues of that road, and which caused it to earn more per mile for each through than for each local passenger it carried.

BURNING THE CANDLE AT BOTH ENDS.

Thus the Eastern Railroad, even before the close of the year 1871, was, so to speak, burning its candle at both ends. Under one set of contracts its liabilities were enormously increased, while under another set, its receipts were greatly diminished. Under these circumstances Mr. Browne retired from the presidency in February, 1872, and was succeeded by Mr. Thornton K. Lothrop, by whom a partial reorganization of the company was effected, and a more progressive spirit infused into its management.

UTOPIAN MANAGEMENT.

So far as the public was concerned, the improvement then introduced into the management of the road was marked and gratifying. A disposition was shown to afford every possible accommodation and to secure the utmost degree of safety; improvements and safeguards were rapidly introduced; the roadbed and rolling-stock were improved, and the train service was perfected. Unfortunately, however, the financial management of the corporation was not at all equal to its running management. Those directing its policy seem at this time to have become thoroughly captivated by that ignis fatuus of railroad managers—the idea that an enormous and most remunerative traffic existed in a pent-up condition somewhere, not far from the furthest present limit of the road, which only required to be tapped, as it were—to have the barrier in its way broken through—to pour out an unending flow of traffic, at once doubling, or, perhaps, trebling receipts. In the case of the Eastern road, this delusion sprang from the sanguine over-estimate which was indulged in respecting the European & North American Railway, and the extension of 482 miles from Bangor to Halifax. Similar popular delusions have within a very few years prevailed, as regards many other Massachusetts roads. The Boston & Lowell indulged in one respecting its great northern connections; the Boston, Hartford & Erie respecting its Newburg extension; and, the most glaring instance of all, the Commonwealth at large has for years been infatuated as to the results which were to ensue upon the completion of the Hoosac tunnel.

RECKLESS EXPANSION.

Fully possessed with this delusive dream of great and immediate prospective business, and further incited by the active competition of the Boston & Maine, the new management of the Eastern launched out upon a system of reckless general expansion. At the Boston end of the line provision was made for terminal freight facilities, to accommodate the great business expected from the British Provinces, by the purchase of salt water flats in Charlestown, at a borrowed cash outlay of $800,000, and with a mortgage indebtedness of $725,000 more upon the property; involving an increase of at least $105,000 a year in the interest account. Subsequently, the grading, track construction, and general improvements necessary to make this property available, carried the total cost of it to more than $2,000,000.

In the central portion of the line, the extension of the Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway road involved an outlay and additional indebtedness of about $1,500,000. The branch to Wolfeborough built, apparently, simply to accommodate the brief summer travel to the White Mountains, cost $338,000, besides a guaranty of 6 per cent. dividends on $48,600 more. The Portsmouth & Dover road, designed merely as a weapon of offence in the contest with the Boston & Maine, involved an additional yearly payment of $42,000, besides a direct outlay of $75,000, the recovery of which is very questionable. None of these enterprises were in themselves remunerative; and, indeed, they all called for very skillful management to enable them even to meet their running expenses. Meanwhile, at the Portland end of the line, another million dollars was locked up in the purchase of a controlling interest, or an interest supposed to be controlling, in the stock of the Maine Central Railroad Company. Money seems to have been lavished like water in attempts to control business, as it is termed. A wharf, for instance, at Mount Desert, 150 miles from any connection with the Eastern road, was purchased at an inordinate price, in order to get possession of the only available steamboat landing at that point, and thus control the Mount Desert travel. Land and buildings, and other wharves in various localities, seem to have been secured at large prices, under the idea that in certain contingencies that might present themselves they would prove useful; and yet, neither a schedule of the acquisitions thus made, nor a list of the liabilities assumed, seems to have been kept. At least, none is forthcoming now.

THE MAINE FINANCIER MORE THAN A MATCH FOR THE BOSTON LAWYER.

Among these transactions, that in reference to the stock of the Maine Central road seems to merit a special reference, if for nothing else as a specimen of skillful stock manipulation on the part of those having the property for sale. Prior to the year 1871 the shares of the Maine Central Railroad Company had little, if any, real value, and commanded in the market an uncertain price in the neighborhood of $30, as representing the control of the property. Those holding them then concluded to take advantage of the struggle between the two Massachusetts competitors, to dispose of their stock at the highest price it could be made to bring. The President of the Company held a large amount, supposed to be in the neighborhood of fifteen hundred shares. He was also in a position as regarded the direction of the Boston & Maine, and the consolidated line which it was then proposed to effect between Boston and Bangor, to make it desirable for those managing the affairs of the Eastern to induce him to withdraw from the field. This could only be done by relieving him of his interest. The Eastern Railroad Company was then purchasing the stock of the Maine Central in the open market at about $60 a share. Under what authority of law is not apparent. The large amount of the stock belonging to the President of that company was, however, at this time taken off his hands, not at $60 a share, but at $100, a bonus of about $60,000 being thus paid to that official to secure his withdrawal. Nor did the history of the transaction end here. With the purchase of this and other stock, a controlling interest, although not quite a majority of the whole, came under the control of the Eastern Railroad Company, which seemed thus to have secured the connection with the Maine Central exclusively to itself. Apparently, however, the holders of other shares presently realized that they had missed a most advantageous market, and accordingly they bestirred themselves so effectually that they reminded the Eastern Railroad Company, through a contract which they suddenly made with the Boston and Maine, that the policy of the Maine Central was not absolutely settled. Again, the Eastern found itself compelled to enter the market as a purchaser, and at the same inordinate price. Thus, at last, a sufficient amount of stock was secured, and the exclusive connection of the road fixed. The price which had been paid was a heavy one, for the stock, worth perhaps 50, had averaged over 70, and a portion had been made to cost one hundred cents on a dollar.

THE STOCKHOLDERS KEPT IN IGNORANCE.

All these contracts and purchases seem to have been effected with the utmost secrecy; not only the public at large, but a portion of the board of direction of the Eastern Railroad itself being unadvised as respects the purchases at least. The law of Massachusetts provided that the contracts of railroad corporations with connecting roads should be published with the annual returns of the corporations making them. This provision of law was evaded, so far as Massachusetts was concerned, under cover of the fiction that the contracts entered into were made, not by the Eastern Railroad Company of Massachusetts, but by the Eastern Railroad Company of New Hampshire, an entirely separate corporation with a distinct organization, though a purely formal one. Thus the Eastern Railroad Company of Massachusetts leased the Eastern Railroad of New Hampshire, and used it as an agency through which to effect its negotiations. The statute of Maine forbidding a corporation of that State to lease its road and franchise, except with the legislative consent, was evaded in the case of the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth, by substituting for the usual lease what was called an agency. Thus the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth Railroad Company constituted the Eastern Railroad, without specifying whether of Massachusetts or of New Hampshire, its irrevocable agent to operate its road with all the powers and privileges possessed by itself. The document will be found printed in full with the returns for the present year.

Concluded to-morrow.

Jottings.

Mr. Charles W. Jenness of Rye has been appointed agent of the Batavia Wind Engine and Pump Company, of Batavia, Ill., for the States of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, and will forthwith put up a large windmill for power, at Oakland Cottage Farm, Rye, (near the Ocean House site,) the residence of Job Jenness & Son.

Good joiners are offering to work for a dollar a day in this city.

The drawings for the new brick block to be put up by Mr. Albert J. Badger to replace the burned building on Daniel street were made by Mr. Alberto C. Fernald, son of Hon. Albert A. Fernald.

The new directors of the Eastern Railroad represent the bondholders, and the presence of Ex-Gov. Stearns in the board is a guarantee that there will be some business principles about the management.

The Eastern and Boston & Maine railroads are to build a union depot at North Berwick.

Gen. Butler said before the railroad committee of the Massachusetts legislature that he was confident that if the road were conducted on principles of common sense in common honesty, it could earn $600,000 a year, and increase that amount to a million in three years.

Hon. E. C. Bailey, editor of the New Hampshire Patriot, is to lecture here for the Reform Club in about two weeks.

A lady who was afflicted with two nasal polypuses which filled both nostrils so that she could breathe only through her mouth, called upon Dr. N. D. Folsom a few days ago for treatment, and in a few minutes was made happy. Dr. Folsom removed the polypuses, and she can now breathe as freely and as naturally as anybody.

The next three months will be a busy season for one of our local physicians, if all reports are true. It is told that he has boasted of having had his services engaged by five hundred parents expectant, who will all, if they have kept a correct reckoning, call him in during the next three months. Now, that is a pretty big story to believe, especially when the records show that since 1862 the average number of births in this city has been less than 170 per annum. But in this Centennial year we should be prepared for anything, and it may be that the gentleman's services have been engaged as stated. We are glad that one man, at least, can look ahead to a busy season, but supposing that two or three hundred of the little blessings should happen along on the same day, won't business be a little too driving to be pleasant for the doctor?—Times.

"This is your wife, is it? asked his Honor.

"I spose so," growled the man.

"And you gave her that black eye, did you?"

"How could I hurt her, your honor? She's an awful fighter, and I'm weak and sick, and I couldn't fight a bird when she pitches into and kicks me, and nearly murders me; all I can do is to get over it."

His Honor looked from the giant to the pigmy and smiled, and said:

"Mister Williams, it is a law of nature that the small and weak should hurt the big and strong. The rabbit kicks the grizzly bear around; the mackerel makes the whale hunt for peaceful harbors; the canary bird wallops the bald headed eagle out of his boots. It is but natural that your wife should pound you around and break your bones."

"And it's too bad sir," said the giant.

"Yes, it is. This woman may murder you if nothing is done. I will, therefore, give you three months on the Island to get you out of her way."

The prisoner opened his eyes very wide, the blood rushed to his ears and he growled:

"I didn't believe you are the law! I want a lawyer, sir!"

"You want several things," replied his Honor, as he signed his name. "A new face wouldn't be a bad thing for you, and I think your voice could be sand-papered, painted and greatly improved."

"If you knew this woman you would send her up too!" exclaimed the man.

"But I don't, and I haven't time for an introduction this morning. I know that if I was a little woman with melancholy eyes and a sharp nose, and you were my husband and gave me a black eye, I'd ——"

The little woman was listening attentively, and he finished:

"I'd call the police."

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal, and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to pater familias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a high popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased them spoke so much about them for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time had to quit work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was troubled with costiveness, took no rest, whole nights lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving a permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several friends and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed find one dollar for the packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars in Vain.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have sold many what good they have done and not doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldnot eat a meal without feeling as though everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials you have been worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.35 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,

Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism and Liver and Kidney Complaint, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to sleep to pick up any small article from the floor. I have been doctoring with some of the great dealers for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Boston Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to the store Skyril for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop or bend easily. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels and Piles, and I have told her to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The Year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Speaker Blaine's term will be controlled by the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration party growing to a close. In course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will engage sharp discussion and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent claimant can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, unbiased by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will vigorously oppose the attempts to reorganize under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of either. It will continue to make endeavors to ferret the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country may safely intrust with power; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard money victories gained by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may justly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher standard, and we hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will continue to expose the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks it success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' benefit.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the patronage of them so generously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watching news and the most liberal expenditure to procure the fresh intelligence, the most comprehensive, and the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and many of its outside contributors are numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

READING FOR CHILDREN. OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS. A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL. A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION. WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in frank demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A bad or worthless literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits "St. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "It

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has taken a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.50.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $14.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five spirited series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc., more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who rewere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and its depravity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

Has There Been Any War?

"Some of the republican papers do not seem to have yet learned that the war is over." This sentence we copy from a democratic exchange; it was doubtless intended as a political "fling," (and has been so used any number of times by the democratic press during the years since Lee surrendered,) but it is really a simple statement of an actual fact,—and among the republican papers which have not yet "learned that the war is over" must be counted this one. We will go even further, and say that so long as the most rabid secessionists of the South lead the democratic party of that section by the nose and are endorsed by the democratic party of the North, we never shall learn that the war is ended. At one time we were prepared to believe the war over; but the persistent refusal of the South to accept as conclusive the results of the war has forced us to alter our opinions.

But a still more remarkable instance of tardiness in learning is shown by the democratic press and party, which do not seem to have yet learned that there ever was a war,—a war for the Union against secession, in which slavery perished (or was believed to have perished) and which made the "black cattle" of the South men. When we see Beck of Kentucky, who said: "there is that contemptible word nation—the word that no good democrat uses when he can find any other, and forced to use it utters it always with disgust; this is no nation;" when we see him rewarded by a seat in the U. S. Senate, is it any wonder we fail to learn that the war against that very doctrine is over? When we hear the southern democratic leaders echoing Beck's declaration, "this is not a nation," denouncing the North in unmeasured terms for battling against secession, and persistently and boldly declaring the constitutional amendments which liberated and enfranchised the slave to be unconstitutional and tyrannical; when we see the southern men who fought for the Union ostracised and persecuted by their ex-rebel neighbors, slavery virtually restored in more than one southern State, and a southern State convention called with the openly-expressed purpose of fixing a State constitution which shall virtually nullify the fifteenth amendment,—when such a state of affairs is presented to our view we utterly fail to see that the war is over yet. And when, in face of all this, we find the northern democracy just as eager to-day to follow the lead of the southern wing of the party as they were prior to 1861; when the leading organ of the New Hampshire democracy "boasts" of the intense Bourbonism of the democratic candidate for governor, and the most rabidly copperhead paper in the State supports him heart and soul on account of his anti-war record and extreme State-sovereignty views, we cannot help concluding they have not yet learned there ever was a war in which secession went to the wall and legal slavery was overthrown.

But the emancipation of the slaves was not the only emancipation which it was hoped the war had effected. For some years after actual hostilities were over it seemed that the North had been emancipated from its long subjection to the South,—that the fawning sycophancy which insisted that it was an impertinence for Massachusetts or New Hampshire to dare to sneeze until after Virginia or South Carolina had graciously deigned to take snuff, had been thrown aside forever. One natural result of the slavish and eager submission of the North to the most outrageous and humiliating demands of the South was to win the hearty contempt of the latter for the former, a contempt pretty well exemplified by the southern belief at the commencement of the war that one southern man was at least equal to five northern men on the field of battle.

Yet the northern democracy demand that the North shall again return to its former state of vassalage to the South; the southerners may rave at and traduce the North and all its men and works as much as they please, unrebuked, but if anything is said in return there is a general outcry raised against "outraging the feelings of our southern brethren,"—the North must not sneeze now even after the South has taken snuff.

Virginia, we understand, will take no part in the Centennial; and a South Carolina paper says "if Blaine is endorsed at the North the Centennial is no place for the South." Well, suppose the South don't come to the Centennial; what of it? In the ante-war days, if the North exhibited any restiveness under the southern rule, the South easily enforced proper obedience by a threat of dissolving the Union; now, in the same spirit, Virginia won't have anything to do with the Centennial, by way of punishing the North. Sometimes a small boy will try to punish his parents by refusing to eat his supper; if they are weak enough to submit to him his end is gained, but if he is allowed to go to bed supperless he is generally glad enough to eat his breakfast, without any coaxing. Just so, if any southern State doesn't want to take part in the National celebration, let her stay out; she'll come in fast enough, when she finds nobody cares whether she stops out or not. It would be far better to have the Centennial celebration a total failure than to give up the least part of the principles for which the Nation contended during the war; and if we cannot have any more nice "gush" about the era of good feeling until the war is apologized for by the North, and the Union men ask pardon of the secessionists, then we think the country had better try to get along without the gush.

In conclusion, we would suggest to our democratic brethren that after they learn that a war was once victoriously waged against the assumed right of any one State to destroy the Union, one consequence of which war was a declaration that it is wrong for one man to buy and sell his fellow-men and another the giving equal civil and political rights to all citizens,—after the democratic press and party have learned all this will be time enough for them to taunt republicans with not yet having learned that the war is over.

News and Notes.

There is then no more serious political symptom in the present democratic revival than the resurrection of the State sovereignty idea, which we believed had been slain in a hundred battles and buried with the million dead that fertilize a hundred bloody fields. The animus which the recent democratic State-Rights utterances indicate in that party ought to have and will have an important bearing on the coming elections. The people see that in the democratic party of to-day they have before them the same old secession party which Webster fought in the Senate and Grant in the field, and which never can come into power without endangering the national idea.—Springfield Union.

Mr. George Young of Boston has contracted to sell the furniture, fixtures and good-will of the famous hotel which bears his name to William T. Hall, George G. Hall and Joseph Read Whipple for $65,000. on condition that the "Fifty Associates," who own the building, will transfer the lease of the house to the purchasers of his interest. Mr. William T. Hall is a wealthy hotel keeper at Newport; his nephew, Geo. G. Hall, has been book-keeper at the Parker House, Boston, for nearly nine years; and Joseph Read Whipple has been steward of the Parker House for about eleven years.

Ex-Governor Ward of New Jersey, now in Washington, says that unless some very reckless mismanagement on the part of the republican leaders in Congress and in New Jersey is fallen into, the State will roll up a handsome majority for the republican candidate for the Presidency. He says that the performances of the democratic majority have satisfied the wavering that the safety of the Government and the prosperity of the people rest in the continuance of the republican party in power.

The Trustees of Dartmouth College have closed their investigation, concerning the late Daniel Blaisdell's deficiency while Treasurer. A committee was appointed to wait upon the heirs with a compromising proposition, which was accepted. The sum named is not at present given, but it is assured that it is not over $15,000. Public sympathy is greatly in favor of Mr. Blaisdell, his friends believing that if alive he could explain the discrepancies in the accounts. There will be no election of a Treasurer this session. The one acting, Frederic Chase, will serve until the annual session in June, when he will probably be elected, though Rev. Josiah G. Davis, of Amherst, is mentioned as an aspirant for the position.

Amelioration and Cure.

Amelioration of the symptoms of a disease is, of course, one desirable object of medication, and there are, no doubt, palliatives which possess considerable remedial efficacy. The temporary disappearance of the indicia of a disease, in too many instances, however, delude the sick into a belief that they are cured. Many of those who have borne grateful testimony to the permanent remedial effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, in cases of liver disorder, chronic constipation, intermittent and remittent fevers, urinary and rheumatic ailments, have also recorded the fact that the temporary relief occasionally afforded by the medicines which they tried before using the great recuperative inspired hopes which were speedily dissipated by a return of the malady. The Bitters not only relieve, but if persistently and regularly taken, CURE the maladies to which they are adapted.

A Dollar a Day—No Roast Beef.

We are informed that on Thursday, at about noon, Hon. Daniel Marcy (he being then in company with Messrs. Osgood and Drew, the temperance reformers, Mr. John S. Treat, and others, near the corner of Daniel street and Market square,) expressed as his opinion that a dollar a day is sufficient pay for any working man,—our informant asserting that he distinctly heard the statement made, and that the others present must have heard it also. If Mr. Marcy did not say so he can easily disprove it if he chooses; but if he did say so, and meant it, we may presume a dollar a day is what he proposes to pay the working men he may employ in his ship-yard, after the appropriations for work at this navy yard have been cut off "for good," as he long ago intimated would be done when the democrats secured control of the National government.

The Eastern Railroad.

(Concluded from yesterday.)

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE PLACE STOCK IN THEIR OWN NAMES.

As respects the purchases of stock and other securities, these seem to have been, in a great degree, effected by the financial committee of the board of directors on account of the Eastern Railroad Company, while a portion, at least, of the other members of the direction were under the impression that the purchases were on private account. For this impression on their part, also, there seems to have been some ground; inasmuch as in the case of the purchase of the Maine Central stock at least, it appears that the transfers were made to certain of the directors of the Eastern Railroad individually, and the stock, where it has not been hypothecated for loans to the company, still stands in their names, although it was purchased with the funds of the corporation. It is extremely questionable whether the board of direction ever had any power to authorize such a use of the company's funds; it certainly has no such power under the law as it now stands. (Acts 1874, chapter 372, § 53.) Whether it had such a power or not, however, it never exercised it, for no formal action in regard to these purchases was ever taken until the 10th of May, 1875, long after the last of them was effected. At a directors' meeting that day held, the action of the finance committee in purchasing this stock for the benefit of the company was ratified and approved. The powers of the financial committee seem to have been large and somewhat indefinite, and little or no light is shed on the subject by the records of the company.

A TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLAR PRESIDENT.

In January, 1874, another change in the management took place. Mr. Lothrop retired from the presidency, and was succeeded by Mr. John Wooldredge.* The policy, however, continued the same, except that the rage for expansion had now worn itself out for two reasons: the field was occupied, and the resources of the company were exhausted. The returns made by the Eastern Railroad Company during the last five years have been brought into comparison. As is now well known, the earlier returns are essentially unreliable. At the same time, when thus placed side by side, they give a very clear idea of the course the corporation was pursuing. It was during the two years, 1872-3, that its ruin was consummated. During those years the debt of the company had been increased by an amount returned at $5,600,000, but which was in reality not less than $8,000,000, representing an increase in the annual interest account of more than half a million. Its liability on leases, contracts, etc., had gone up from $45,000 a year to $200,000. On the other hand, owing to the revisal of contracts, and the business depression of the times, this vast outlay had resulted in an increase of annual net receipts only to the amount of about $110,000. The anticipated increase of business had proved to be a pure delusion. This, however, was not the worst feature in the situation. The books and accounts of the corporation were in a condition of the utmost confusion. No one appears to have had a distinct idea either of what the company owed or what available assets it had as an offset to its debts.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

The board of direction was divided into two parties—a dissatisfied minority, which distrusted the policy of expansion but felt itself compelled to rest satisfied with a silent protest, and a majority which relied entirely on the judgment of the financial committee of the directors, which consisted of the President and Messrs. Samuel Hooper and Franklin Haven. Of these gentlemen, Mr. Hooper was in Washington, and Mr. Haven's attention was chiefly absorbed in other matters. Thus, the management of the company's finances devolved almost wholly on the President, with such assistance as the other members of the committee rendered when questions of exceptional importance had to be decided.

BOOK-KEEPING EXTRAORDINARY.

When the reorganization of 1872 was effected the immediate charge of the books of the corporation had been practically taken from the Treasurer, Mr. John B. Parker, and intrusted to the auditor. The methods of accounting then in use by the company undoubtedly stood in great need of a radical reform. Not only were they obscure, but they were imperfect. They do not seem to have covered all the financial transactions of the company, and they afforded curious opportunities FOR THE CONCEALMENT OF IRREGULARITIES AND EVEN DEFALCATIONS. The auditor appears to have honestly endeavored to reform them in these and in other respects; but, whether because he was not equal to the task, or because his efforts were not seconded, or because of the radically defective discipline which pervaded all branches of the company's service, he seems to have been unsuccessful. The Treasurer, meanwhile, abandoning the account department to the auditor, devoted his time almost exclusively to the work of borrowing money to pay notes, or effecting their renewal when they became due. Nor does he seem to have lacked occupation. The most extraordinary absence of system seems, however, to have prevailed even in regard to the bills payable of the company. No one, down to the moment of the final disaster, appears to have known how much the road really owed, to have had any definite plan for putting its affairs on a sound basis.

THE PRESIDENT AUTHORIZED TO RUN THE MACHINE.

The directors, apparently, placed great confidence in the president; so great, indeed, that by a formal vote of the board Mr. Wooldredge was finally authorized "to take such measures and execute such contracts, and to do all such other things as he may deem necessary and expedient for the funding of any portion of the floating debt of the company." The powers of the president as respected financial questions were, therefore, the broadest possible; the board of directors had abdicated in his favor. Acting under these powers, he was supposed to be getting the finances of the company rapidly into order, while in fact, he was struggling along day by day, under a mass of maturing indebtedness of every description, relying, in his turn, on the general manager to increase the receipts of the company to an extent which would enable him to meet his payments. Even at the last moment, when the bankruptcy of the corporation was inevitable, Mr. Wooldredge seems to have had no realizing sense of the fact. As late as January, 1875, on account of the increasing difficulty in effecting loans, he had procured the passage of a vote, by the Board of Directors, limiting the amount of bonds and coupon notes of the company, issued and to be issued, to the sum of $12,500,000; although at that very time its total indebtedness could hardly have been less than $14,000,000. Finally, when a partial investigation somewhat disclosed the real posture of affairs, he still thought the nature of the difficulty was unduly exaggerated, and that a little faith and persistence was all that was required to bring matters to a successful issue. Had the books of the Eastern Railroad been properly kept, the hopelessness of the struggle would have been apparent; as it was it may literally be asserted that, so far as can now be ascertained, no one took in the situation. Every one referred to somebody else, and nobody was himself informed. To this condition of affairs was probably due the fact that no attempt was made to put a mortgage upon the property, securing under it all the outstanding indebtedness in one form of securities. As no one knew exactly what those liabilities were, the officials upon whom the responsibility for action devolved did not dare to take any step which should make public at once both the possible extent of them, and their own ignorance of what that extent was.

THE COMMISSIONERS ON THE DEFENSIVE.

When the returns for 1874 were rendered a year ago, their numerous irregularities, and the great difficulty which the officials of the company evidently had in presenting them in a plausible form at all, were very noticeable. They had to be sent back repeatedly for revision; and finally, when brought into a shape supposed to be correct, they could only be made intelligible by the aid of foot notes. To these circumstances and the suspicion excited by them in the minds of the members of this Board, was owing in a great degree the recommendations in regard to railroad accounts addressed to the last Legislature. Beyond this, so long as the present system of independent book-keeping was in use, the Board did not feel authorized nor care to go. For the correctness of the annual returns, as now published, it is not responsible, and has always carefully disclaimed all responsibility; neither has it in any way either held itself forth or been held forth by law, as guaranteeing to private creditors the financial soundness of the railroad corporations of the State. Railroads are not banks, nor insurance nor trust companies. Their relations to the community are not of a fiduciary character. Neither the law nor the public understanding has, therefore, ever devolved upon this Board the peculiar inquisitorial functions of bank and insurance commissioners. Under these circumstances, to have entered of their own motion into an elaborate investigation of the financial status of the Eastern Railroad Company was wholly beyond the province of the Railroad Commissioners; and to have done it except at the call of a body of the directors or stockholders, would have placed the Board in a false position, as undertaking to do that, in regard to a member of the system, which it was wholly out of its power to do in regard to the system as a whole.

Accordingly, the attempt to effect a general change in the law having failed, the Commissioners contented themselves with privately intimating their suspicions to members of the Eastern Railroad direction, through whom, finally, the necessary investigation was begun. As a result of this investigation, and without going through an analysis in detail, which would be no less elaborate and tedious than useless, there is good reason to suppose that the liabilities at least of the Eastern Railroad Company have been ascertained, and are accurately set forth in the accompanying returns. Its books and accounts are in a state of extreme confusion, and it would require the labor of months to unravel them. No reliable estimate can be formed of the amount or value of its available assets, if indeed, it has any which could now be disposed of to advantage.

THE CAT IN THE MEAL BOX DISCOVERED.

Meanwhile, with the exception of a few persons interested in the Maine Central road who succeeded in disposing of their stock at inordinate prices, it is not easy to see who has been benefited by this strife and competition. The Portland, Saco and Portsmouth road, which was mainly instrumental in bringing it about, certainly has not; inasmuch as the Eastern Railroad Company is no longer in a condition to fulfill its agreement, and the stockholders of Maine corporation have accordingly been compelled to return to their former 6 per cent. dividends, once payable in gold, but now in currency. They are fortunate, also, in getting even that, for the building of the Boston and Maine extension to Portland has destroyed the exclusive value of their property. They are tied to a bankrupt corporation, and must be content in future, apparently, to accept such terms as it can afford to offer. The Boston and Maine can hardly claim that its position has been improved by the events which have ruined the Eastern and crippled the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth. It has built a duplicate line from South Berwick to Portland, at a cost of $4,000,000, perfectly useless to any one but itself. In 1871, it was out of debt, paid regular dividends of 10 per cent. per annum, and reported a steadily increasing surplus. Since then it has increased its capital stock $2,000,000 and accumulated a debt of over $4,000,000, which is annually increasing. Its dividends are reduced to 8 per cent. per annum, and for the present year it reports a considerable deficit. Finally, the public are no better served now than formerly, and its corporations are so encumbered as to be no longer in a position to make the improvements and changes, and to grant the increased accommodations, which a growing community stands always in need of.

As yet, however, nothing has resulted from the embarrassment of the Eastern Railroad Company which has directly involved the interest of the public.

THE COMMISSIONERS WASH THEIR HANDS.

Up to the present time the road has been operated in the same manner as heretofore, the question simply being between the corporation, the holders of its stock, and its creditors. With this question the Commissioners have no apparent concern, except in so far as it may reveal defects in the existing laws of the State.

A FEW PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

Nothing has come to the knowledge of the Commissioners in the course of their inquiries directly affecting the integrity of any one intrusted with the management of the affairs of the Eastern Railroad. At the same time the lack of system, the irregular methods of doing business, the extraordinary assumptions of authority and absence of accountability everywhere apparent, cannot but excite notice. There are certain details connected with some of the financial transactions which should be thoroughly inquired into, either by the stockholders, or by some public tribunal empowered to compel the attendance of witnesses and the giving of evidence. Reference is more especially made to the transaction in the Portsmouth, Great Falls and Conway, and the Wolfeborough branch securities; to the purchase and subsequent transfers of the Maine Central stock; and to the issue and sale of certain classes of bonds and notes, especially the last two millions of 7 per cent. It would be desirable to know exactly who held the Portsmouth, Great Falls and North Conway, the Wolfeborough branch and the Maine Central securities which were purchased; the price at which those holders bought them, and at which they sold them. In frequent cases, corporations have been depleted by these intrusted with their management through transactions of a similar nature, and it would be well it should be made clear that nothing of the sort was done in this case. Some question has also been made as to the regularity of all the issues of bonds, and it has been asserted that one lot of at least $250,000 was not authorized, and was made under circumstances amounting to overissue. The last negotiation of two million 7 per cent. securities, known as sinking fund notes, which were placed on the market at 90 or more, and brought into the treasury of the corporation but 85 per cent of their value, also calls for investigation. It is wholly improbable that a firm of brokers was allowed to realize so large a sum as $100,000 upon so simple a financial operation as the sale of two millions of the securities of a corporation, the credit of which at the time was not seriously impaired.

That Frozen Down Cover.

The Times "can't see that any blame can be attached to the fire department" on account of the cover of the Rogers reservoir being frozen down on Sunday morning, and says if we take the trouble to inquire into the matter, we shall find that the chief engineer is no more responsible for the delay than was Mr. Marston when the same thing occurred during his term of office, and in fact that the head of the fire department does not and never did have authority to remove the cause. The reservoir is owned by Mr. S. P. Rogers, who lets it to the city for the use of the department, and it is kept free from snow by a competent man." This "same thing" never occurred when Mr. Marston was chief of the fire department, with that reservoir nor any other; and Mr. Marston always exercised authority to keep the cover in a condition to be easily removed, whether he possessed such authority or not. But we believe the chief engineer has that authority, for the reservoir is held by the city on a long lease, and the city must be as competent to keep the cover free from ice as from snow. In case of fire all wells and reservoirs, no matter where situated, are under full control of the chief engineer of the fire department; and the Rogers reservoir was leased, as we understood at the time, for the express purpose of giving the chief engineer the supervision of it at all times, that it might always be in proper condition for instant use when needed,—as it was always found to be when Mr. Marsten was chief engineer. That gentleman was anxiously faithful in attending to all the duties and details of his official position, yet he never received anything but censure (or what was worse, half-praise) from the democracy, and not a little political capital was made by that party out of growling at the republican management of the fire department; hence we had a right to expect that a democratic chief engineer and democratic management would be much superior to what we had been accustomed to. But we are not aware that fires are more judiciously handled or that the discipline of the department is any better than formerly, while in at least two instances delays which might have proved serious have occurred at fires in getting engines at work, through such neglect of some one as never occurred under republican management. It is much easier in many cases, we are aware, to growl at the work of others than to do their work better than they can; but our democratic brethren, who always were so ready to blow up republican officials no matter how ably and faithfully they did their duty, should not object to our pointing out actual neglects of duty on the part of democratic officials.

A tandem team composed of one white (or yellow—we don't know what horsemen call the color) and two black equines, two of them colts, harnessed to a sleigh and driven by their owner, Hon. Frank W. Miller, attracted much attention on our streets, Thursday.

On Saturday, Feb. 5th, a boy of six years swallowed a tin whistle, half of an inch thick and nearly three-fourths of an inch in diameter, with sharp edges. With soft solids for food, followed by a little sweet oil, under direction of Dr. N. G. Folsom, the boy the Tuesday morning following picked up his whistle as good as new.

About seven inches of snow fell, Wednesday afternoon and night, and the hopes of the stable-men rose in a corresponding degree; but the warm sun of Thursday commenced to liquefy the sleighing, and a few more such days will use it up altogether.

What Broke It Off.

On Thursday last Queen Victoria entered the boudoir of her unmarried daughter, the Princess Beatrice, and said: "Beatrice, my dearest, you want to get married, don't you?" "Oh, don't I, just," replied the fair girl enthusiastically; and it's leap year, too. Hooray! But say, ma, who's the him?" "Prince Louis of Battenburg," replied Her Majesty. "That'll be awfully jolly," said the Princess: "Louis is such a sweet name," and she began scrawling on the blotting-pad "Beatrice Battenburg," and wondering how she would look in white. Yesterday morning, when her august mother again entered Her Royal Highness' apartments, she found her daughter in tears—tears of indignation rather than of grief. "Why, drat the child, what ails her?" said Her Majesty. "O, ma," cried the Princess, "look at this," and she pointed to the following item in the Times:

CALCUTTA, February 4.—Prince Louis of Battenburg, while pig-sticking to-day, fell and broke his collar-bone. The sad event has cast a gloom over the community.

"Well," said the Queen, "what of that?" "What of that?" echoed the daughter; "what of that? With all due deference to you, ma'am, I will have no Prince Louis in mine. I thought we had come down low enough when poor Louise married into a grocer's family, but a butcher, a man that makes his living by sticking horrid pigs—not much Alexandria Victoria," and kicking off her mother's crown, with the remark that that was the sort of hairpin she was, Her Royal Highness betook herself to her bedroom and gave way to tears.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that renders it the first in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by its droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is fully of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its stories and essays, its poetry and gossip, are all invigorating to the mind. —Chicago Evening Journal.

CONDITION PILLS!!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from fear of the Pills exchanging their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and to this first trial testimonial came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so that Life was Almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, and have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have tried many cures, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay most of the time. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package cured me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have sent for about two dozen more. I enclose one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir.—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have suffered much from Liver Complaint, and gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I suffered severely with Liver Complaint and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to move or stand up any time. In one of your Circulars from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, but received no benefit, and concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Cosmopolitan. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well now, can eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I told her what I thought it would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to those who are sick and need to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockingham, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,
USE
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

is a good new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he who was the first that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which promise to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the 43d time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fail to piece or to enter upon a new career of usefulness, in the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many reforms to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke much discussion, and greatly largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE will endeavor to do its part in recording the present performance, as constituting its claim for the patronage of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely as an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal ends or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rally to the support of the Republican party under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. It will giving the news without fear or favor the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and trusts, to office, where hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and as consequents, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy digging the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a sound and high type of public men, and we hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. Its news columns will give the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal warranting; will waste no time in replying to the greatest attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will record all sources of its readers' information.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so long and largely enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchingness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh est intelligence, the most complete digest of the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished and vigorous writers, and its list of outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "vapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the ingenuity of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, and then what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says:" The

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.0..

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.00 . Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $20.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Plagiarism.

The following anecdote of Chief Justice Chase is told by the Toledo Commercial: Soon after Chief Justice Chase assumed the gubernatorial chair in Ohio he issued his proclamation appointing a Thanksgiving Day. To make sure of being orthodox, the Governor composed his proclamation almost entirely of passages from the Bible, which he did not designate as quotations, presuming that every one would recognize them and admire the fitness of the words as well as his taste in their selection. The proclamation meeting the eye of a democratic editor, he pounced at once upon it, and declared that he had read it before—couldn't say where—but he would take his oath that it was a downright plagiarism from beginning to end. That would have been a pretty fair joke; but the next day a republican editor came out valiantly in defence of the Governor, pronounced the charge libelous, and challenged any man living to produce one single line of the proclamation that had appeared in print before.

A Pet for the Children.

Judge Pitman, a short time ago, bought a pet lamb for his children to play with. It was a pretty good sized lamb, and strong and vigorous; but the Judge said he preferred that kind, because the children would be less likely to hurt it. On the day that it came home they turned it out into the front yard, where it strayed about nibbling the grass, while the Judge tied up his geraniums.

Mrs. Pitman had the children in the house, and was reading to them from a book a description of the characteristics of lambs. The account said that "The lamb is one of the most playful and innocent of animals. So kind and meek is it that its name has for centuries been the synonym of gentleness and sweetness of disposition. It never injures any one, and when it is attacked it always suffers humbly and in silence." There is something so beautiful about the gentle little animal that"—

Just at this point Mrs. Pitman was interrupted by the voice of the Judge coming from the front yard. It sounded as if he were in distress of some kind. The whole family flew out upon the porch, and then saw that pet lamb, whose name was the synonym of gentleness, engaged in butting the Judge. It would butt him in the rear and knock him over and then it would butt him on the legs, and batter him on the ribs, and plunge its head into his stomach, and jam its skull against his chest. When he rose it butted his shins, and when he stooped over to rub them it butted his head. Then it butted him generally whenever a chance presented itself; and when it had doubled the Judge all up under the Norway maple, it butted down three rose bushes, butted a plaster garden vase to fragments, butted two palings off the fence, and danced off down the street, butting at tree boxes, the hitching posts and the northwest wind. The lamb was served up for dinner next day, and now the Pitman children stick to kittens as regular pets.

—The law of the table is beauty—a respect to the common soul of all the guests. Everything is unreasonable which is private to two or three or any portion of the company. Tact never intrudes the orders of the house, the vices of the absent, or a tariff of expenses, or professional privacies; as we say, we never "talk shop," before company. Lovers abstain from caresses, and haters from insults, whilst they sit in one parlor and with common friends.—Emerson.

—A Fond du Lac (Wis.) exchange relates the following cow story: "A cow in the town of Eden, the mother of a handsome calf, was crossing the railroad a few days since. She had cleared the last rail when the passenger train appeared. The animal hastened toward the fence. Looking back she saw her offspring standing on the track. With a frightened look, she made a piteous but useless appeal to the foolish little creature to follow her. On came the train, and still stood the calf, by this time facing the train. The engineer tried to scare the little creature away by making the whistle scream, but he wouldn't scare. When the train was within ten rods of the calf the cow made a rush for her silly child, caught him on her horns, and bore him away in safety."

—John Travis, a miner in Amador county, California, is an Austrian who settled there four years since, and had accumulated $1800. With this he started to return to the home of his youth, carrying most of his gold in a belt around his person. The journey across the continent and across the ocean was made in safety, Hamburg reached, and a plank laid for the passengers to pass from the steamer to the wharf. The plank was at once crowded. It broke, and twenty or thirty poor wretches were precipitated into the water. Travis was one of these, and felt that the weight of gold in his belt was dragging him to the bottom. He loosened and dropped it, and was one of the rescued, five being drowned. Then came the search for the lost treasure, but it could not be found. Travis then counted the means he had left—it was enough to take him on home, or take him back to California. And back he went, and is now again a miner in Amador.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

Hon. Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, was found dead in Gov. Carroll's grounds at Annapolis, Thursday evening. He was the guest of the Governor and left the assembled company to take a walk alone, fell over a bank and fractured his skull.

The United States District Court at Fort Smith, Arkansas, closed Saturday last. It was an unusual session, sixty-six persons being sentenced to the penitentiary at Little Rock for various offences, and six sentenced to be hanged on the 21st of April.

The charge that it manifests a lukewarmness upon the subject of Gov. Hayes' candidacy for the Presidency prompts the Cincinnati Gazette to make this explanation: "The Gazette expects the republican convention to nominate a man for the Presidency who will command the confidence and respect of the country, and it expects to support that candidate whether he be Hayes, Morton, Blaine, Bristow, or Washburne, or some other equally good man. This being the case, it does not become us in speaking well of one candidate to speak ill of another. Either one of the persons mentioned in this paragraph would carry Ohio. Outside of this list we might mention Hamilton Fish as a candidate that would be indorsed by Ohio. Taking a broad view of the situation and passing upon it, not from a narrow, personal, or partisan stand-point, we have to say it is extremely desirable that the convention should be composed of delegates who will rise above personal favoritism and sectional jealousies, and, after a full interchange of views, nominate the best and strongest man."

The greatest man in Congress is Schleicher, of Texas. His breadth of beam is so great that an ordinary chair won't hold him, and the doorkeeper had him measured, and he now enjoys a seat made expressly for him.

Hon. Mason W. Tappan, having declined a nomination for Senator in the eighth district, Gen. Luther McCutchins has been nominated in his stead.

For the seven months ending with January, 1875, it appears there has been a decrease of $7,500,000 worth of dry goods, gold value, imported into the United States, as compared with the same period in 1874. This is encouraging to Americans. When money is paid for substantial cotton and woollen goods, there is value received; all such goods we can make in this country. The greater part of our imported goods are more ornamental than useful, and the figures show that the American people are doing with less of them. The lesson which Americans have to learn is that they must wait until they can afford to buy luxuries, or pay the penalty.

One of the firemen killed by a falling wall in New York rescued a mother and child at the risk of his life from an Eighth Avenue tenement a few months ago. His name was David Clute. A wife and child survive him.

Attention is directed to the card of Grand Union Hotel, opposite Grand Central Depot, New York. This hotel is one of the largest and most popular of the New York city first class hotels. It is so conveniently located to the Grand Central Depot that all expense of carriage and baggage expressage is saved its guests. An indisputable recommendation of this house is the fact that guests who stop there once become regular patrons thereafter. Persons contemplating visiting or passing through New York, or to attend the Centennial, will do well to give the Grand Union a trial. The Grand Union supplies every advantage afforded by a first-class hotel, while the rates of charges are moderate, being suited to the stringency of the times.

President Orton publishes a card in which he says: "I have not stated to any person anywhere that the records of this company contained evidence conclusive of the guilt of Gen. Babcock. I have stated in a few instances exactly the contrary."

The Plymouth Journal says that this spring will be the first, for many years, that a "drive of logs" has not gone down the Pemigewasset river.

Rev. Joseph Fullonton, of Raymond, author of the "History of Raymond," has commenced writing a history of Danville. This town was formerly a part of the town of Kingston, which formerly embraced within its precincts Kingston, East Kingston, Danville and Sandown.

The democrats spent three days of Congress at the rate of $12,000 a day trying to reduce the pay of the West Point cadets $60 a year. Alas! Alas! they lack perseverance; if they had spent a month on it they might have carried that great and good measure and got it as far as the Senate, where it would be snuffed out; but it is worth $12,000 a day to see a great party show its spirit.—Graphic.

Miss Belle Stevens, a beautiful young lady, and who was one of the reigning belles of Washington society last season, was drowned while attempting to cross the river on the ice, at Keokuk, Iowa, a few days since. Mr. B. J. Bird accompanied Miss Stevens to a school exhibition just across the river, and on their return home she bantered him to cross the river on the ice instead of going around by the bridge. He hesitated and pointed out the danger, as the day had been warm, and he knew there must exist a number of wind-holes in the ice. Miss Stevens laughed at his warnings, and they finally started. After travelling a short distance over the ice, they came to a large air hole, over which there was a single piece of ice. Mr. Bird took Miss Stevens by the arm and insisted that she should retrace her steps back with him and go home by the way of the bridge. She released herself and started to cross the ice, and was drowned. He made an attempt at the risk of his own life to save her, but was finally benumbed and became unconscious. Her last words were: "Good bye—tell them at home it was all my fault."

At Rochester, on the 9th, Mr. A. S. Parshley was thrown from his sleigh, and it is feared, fatally injured.

Mr. Shacklord, of Canaan, killed a muskrat in a barrel of apples, on the 2d instant, which had made its home in his cellar all winter.

There is quite a breeze being stirred up in Ohio, all of a sudden, in favor of George H. Pendleton, as the democratic candidate for President. We have been anticipating this unveiling of the candidate on which Ohio is expected to compromise for some time, and the curtain has been drawn sooner than we supposed it would be. If Mr. Pendleton becomes an avowed candidate for President, we may look for lively times in the democratic camp about the time of the State convention. Pendleton was very conservative in his speech, last fall, and his efforts contrasted very favorably with those of Allen and Cary. If the canvass had lasted a few weeks longer Mr. Pendleton would have been as unobjectionable to hard money men East as is Judge Thurman. Ohio is a great State, and if the democrats of the nation do not want Pendleton or Thurman let us give them Allen, Ranney, Payne, Ewing, Morgan, or some of our other good men. Do not let Ohio be cuchred out of the candidacy because of a difference between her conspicuous candidates. Do not let the gleaming knife be applied to every man's throat! We want peace! Have we no James K. Polk or Franklin Pierce within our borders? Let us think!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

John Gilman, of Sanbornton, rigged up a sled, with which, by the aid of a couple of steel pointed sticks, he pushed himself across the Winnesquam on the ice. Some little time since he was thus propelling himself when there chanced to be in his track a streak of water, but so near the color of the ice that he did not notice it until he slid in. He could not extricate himself, and had hung on to the edge of the ice about half an hour before he chanced to be found and pulled out.

The late Samuel Hooper's executors deny the statement which has been made that he took advantage of his position as a director of the Eastern Railroad to sell out his own stock and bonds of that company before the public became aware of its true condition. They say that his interest in the stock and other securities at the date of his death was the largest he had ever held; that after June 1, 1874, he bought a very large amount on his own account, paying therefor over $300,000 in cash; and that he did not sell a single share of Eastern Railroad stock, or any other securities of the company, for himself or any other person, during the last five years of his life.

The Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad Company have notified the city of Portland of their inability to pay the interest on $1,350,000 of bonds issued by the city in aid of the road, which will be due March first.

This is the way Belknap Bartlett of Tilton, talks to the reform club of that town, and has given them one week to answer it: That if the club would pay for one-half of the liquor he had on hand, he would sacrifice the other half and knock in the heads of the casks, turn it all into the river, and would sign the pledge and keep it.

The board of health say that two-thirds of the deaths in Boston are caused by the incomplete system of sewerage. Acting upon this suggestion, the commissioners upon the subject have conceived a mammoth system of sewerage, an outline of which is worthy of notice. It is proposed to have two great sewers, the sewerage to be discharged at high tide into the ocean, at a total cost of $4,000,000. One sewer is to sweep round the southerly side, and the other around the northerly side of the city, each properly provided with intercepting sewers, with pumping engines, etc., and each sewer will be large enough to accommodate a two-horse team and wagon. The condition of the sewers of the city is as bad as it could possibly be. When the city contained but seven hundred acres there was no trouble in this respect, but the growth of the city has been far in advance of the growth of the sewerage system.

The demand for witnesses in the Babcock trial has exhausted the regular force of officials on duty at the White House. The President now sends his message to the Senate by one of his sons. The modest youth has for several days performed the task without Senators knowing who has taken the place of Gen. Babcock, and Mr. Luckey, the Journal Clerk of the Senate, is required to state who delivers the President's message, and he yesterday asked whether any one knew the stranger. Failing to get the information, he telegraphed to the White House, "Who was the boy that delivered the President's message today?" The answer returned, signed by the President, was, "My son, Ulysses S. Grant, Jr."

The Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, Knights of Pythias, at Nashua has elected the following officers: Grand Chancellor, Frank E. Rollins of Exeter; G. V. C., William O. Sides of Portsmouth; George W. Tilton of Epping; G. M. E., L. K. Peacock of Concord; G. K. R. S., William E. Moore of Manchester; G. M. A., Charles M. Lang of Concord; G. I. G., F. W. McKinnly of Manchester; G. O. G., Frederick W. Hon. Reverdy Johnson was born in Annapolis in 1796, graduated at St. John's College, was admitted to the bar in 1815, and before 1845, when he was elected to the United States Senate, he had attained to the leadership of the Maryland bar. In 1849 he was Attorney General in General Taylor's Cabinet. He became United States Senator again in 1862, and in 1868 was appointed Minister to England, from which position he was recalled in 1869. In his long public career he has been distinguished for great ability, lofty patriotism, and a personal character beyond reproach.

Bowen.

The trial of Henry C. Bowen is not likely to come off. On Thursday night he appeared before the committee of Plymouth church with the following proposition, which the committee rejected:

You will remember that in referring to a portion of the evidence, which had led me to an unfavorable judgment of the pastor of Plymouth Church, I said: "I never can or will be base enough to allow a single name to be bruited before the world." It is almost certain that the questions which might be asked before your committee would lead to the identification of the names referred to and to their being ultimately brought before the public. To this I cannot consent, whatever may be the consequences to me personally. Fearing, therefore, lest an investigation before your committee should be inevitably incomplete and unsatisfactory, I propose that three men within the Congregational body be selected, distinguished for their wisdom and impartiality—such, for example, as President Woolsey, President Asa D. Smith, President Fairchild, Judge Lafayette S. Foster, the Hon. Alpheus Hardy, or the Hon. Julius H. Seelye, men in whose decision the world will feel confidence, who shall be pledged to keep all such evidence secret, before whom Mr. Beecher and myself shall appear, with our witnesses, and before whom I will consent without any reserve, and as soon as they can meet, to give in full the evidence which has led me to say that I have no doubt Mr. Beecher is guilty of adultery, hypocrisy and perjury. I ask nothing more than that they shall fully consider the questions which you seem to have before you, whether I deserve ecclesiastical censure for my previous silence in reference to Mr. Beecher and whether I am now justified by the facts in my possession in making what you call my infamous allegations and insinuations about him, made in response to your own demand for a reply to Mr. White's grievances. I am willing to abide by the censure or approval of such a body of men if Mr. Beecher and Plymouth will also submit to their decision. I reaffirm everything I have stated about Henry Ward Beecher in my previous communication to you, and I am ready to substantiate it before such a tribunal.

The Revival.

The series of union meetings which have been held for several weeks past in our city have interested us. Mr. Fowler (who was invited to visit the churches, and under whose particular direction the meetings have been held) is a young man, and like all young advocates for truth or error is full of confidence and zeal. Years hence he will probably be not less a worthy Christian, but will have less intense, and we might add less arbitrary methods of work; he will find calmness and urbanity increasing with increasing wisdom. Doubtless Mr. Fowler has already discovered that Portsmouth is not easily convinced or converted. While particles of skepticism are falling around us like snow flakes in a storm, he assumes to trust the ground is firm under his feet and he assumes it to be thus for his hearers. It is comparatively easy to convince people whose intellect has not been cultivated in proportion to their religious development, of certain religious statements; but what would our evangelist say to infidels, to free thinkers, to those who have Tyndall, Darwin, Renan and others for ready quotation, to whom the lids of the Bible are the only facts about it? "The greater the knowledge the greater the doubt." [Goethe.]

Mr. Fowler serenely enjoins a peculiar sort of prayer. While we most heartily believe in prayer,—that it flows from a sense of helplessness to that of power, the weak to the strong—we cannot understand that which Mr. Fowler expresses as "agonizing prayer." He describes the agony of a mother over her dying child, and insists that the Christian must feel and utter similars prayer for unconverted souls. Evidently Mr. Fowler has never lost a child, and knows not that a mother over her dying child, when she would almost wish the sky, the trees and the flowers black to accord with her mourning, would count the souls of a continent as nothing if she might have her child. That sort of prayer for souls—that "unutterable agony"—must come from a divine nature; it is not human; and the calling forth of such a prayer from man, and particularly from woman, a prayer born of a duty they think required, which manifests itself in agitation and anguish of voice, etc., is simply distressing.

Mr. Fowler is most earnest that his hearers shall conform to his ideas concerning posture in prayer, being quite disgusted if any stand in prayer when he thinks they should kneel. Surely the posture is unimportant; we have seen people kneel with mirrors before them, kneeling with German lesson books or unread letters in their hands before their faces; therefore kneeling seems favorable alike to devotion and deviltry. Shall we then condemn too strongly those who do not kneel?

As for the backslider, our Evangelist would have him in the stocks of confession before the great congregation; does he remember that the Great Teacher in the most unpardonable instance of backsliding on record gave unto the culprit only a look?

Of course Mr. Fowler cannot hope that all who listen to him will accept every proposition he may advance; yet he has given us many wise suggestions, many old truths clothed in fresh and novel array, quite forcible arguments, very pertinent illustrations, perhaps a few grammatical errors mingled with very good rhetoric. We have wished and waited for one comforting word to the church—to those who have struggled long, and have not fallen; we have wished for the sweet story of unutterable love, the tender, hopeful word. Is not our religion gloomy enough? Are we not too often like children groping in the dark? Shall we not take up the consoling, hopeful past, if we can find it?

One of the most touching things about these services has been the constant presence of so many men and women who really have made a sacrifice and effort to attend such services for religion's sake,—men who could hardly afford to give their time, women whose families doubtless needed their presence at home,—and who in their desire to serve their Lord, sacrificed much to perform this real or imaginary duty. God grant they may find peace in believing.

The local pastors associated with this work have faithfully sustained Mr. Fowler, by their presence, their prayers and earnest efforts. Among the people, thus far, the converts have been mostly from the Advent and Pearl street churches. TRUST.

A Dollar a Day---No Roast Beef.

We believe in fair play, so we give place to an article from the Times of Friday evening. That paper copies our article headed "A Dollar a Day—No Roast Beef," which we print, as follows:

We are informed that on Thursday, at about noon, Hon. Daniel Marcy (he being then in company with Messrs. Osgood and Drew, the temperance reformers, Mr. John S. Treat, and others, near the corner of Daniel street and Market square,) expressed as his opinion that a dollar a day is sufficient pay for any working man,—our informant asserting that he distinctly heard the statement made, and that the others present must have heard it also. If Mr. Marcy did not say so he can easily disprove it if he chooses; but if he did say so, and meant it, we may presume a dollar a day is what he proposes to pay the working men he may employ in his ship-yard, after the appropriations for work at this navy yard have been cut off "for good," as he long ago intimated would be done when the democrats secured control of the National government.

The Times then comments as follows:

That the statement is unqualifiedly false,—a deliberate lie manufactured "from whole cloth" for political purposes, is shown by the following communication to this paper.

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 11, 1876.

To the Editor of the Daily Evening Times:

—The article in the CHRONICLE of this morning purporting to give the substance of a conversation between the undersigned and Hon. Daniel Marcy, in which the latter is alleged to have stated certain views in relation to labor, is unqualifiedly false in every particular. The subject was not mentioned directly, nor indirectly, and Mr. Marcy made no allusion to the labor question whatever.

ALFRED W. HAVEN,
JOHN S. TREAT.

As our article did not "purport to give the substance of a conversation" between Mr. Marcy and Messrs. Treat and Haven, nor even mention Alfred W. Haven at all, their joint letter simply amounts to a disclaimer by Mr. Treat of having heard Mr. Marcy express the sentiment attributed to him. Our authority we consider reliable and the statement true; and if it is not, a square denial of it by Mr. Marcy over his own signature would carry more weight than the declaration of twenty democratic politicians that they did not hear him say anything of the kind.

Unclaimed Letters.

Letters for the following named persons are now lying at the post-office:

Gentlemen—Thos E Brough, Mr Boyle, A Blare, Wm A Coombs, Samuel Dixon, E Dana, N P Folsom, Moses L Garland, K M Green, Wm Gray, Lewellyn Gould, John A Hammond, Jacob Hayes, Mark L Jenkins, James Kennedy, Richard Laha, John Marchant, F D Morris, Herbert S Manson, T F Staples & Co, Henry E Trott, E H L Wentworth, James Wilkinson, Gates Wentworth, Harry R Wallace.

Ladies—Hattie Barnum, Mrs James Bean, Eliza Cate, Helen Clough, Mrs Geo W Dixon, Mrs John L Downes, Mrs Joshua Frizzell, Mrs H S George, Ruth A Gillingham (2), Ruth C Hall, Sarah J Holbrook, Mrs Wm James, Mary A Kenney, Lena E Littlefield, Ida Meloon, Arabella Norton, Fannie Parker, Mrs A C Roberts, Olive W Rand, Maud M Stanton, Mrs Albert Stackpole.

Jottings.

The Dover democrats are so indisposed to work that they have employed a man to canvass the city for them, instead of dividing the work among a score of willing canvassers as the republicans do. Their Portsmouth brethren work on a different plan. They care little for a canvass and less for the result of the actual vote cast, confining their exercise of the duties of office to the retention of hundreds of names on the check-lists of the wards they control, of persons who have no shadow of right to vote here, and by declaring majorities to suit themselves.

The residents of towns in the vicinity of Rye Beach, are talking of having a gathering at the beach next September, similar to those held at Salisbury beach every year.

This winter (like every other winter we remember) is certainly the most remarkable one on record; we have had weather nearly all the time since it first set in, and from present indications are likely to have another spell of it. On Friday a moist rain dissolved a large part of the snow which came earlier in the week, and made slosh and most abominable walking of the rest.

The Journal complains that one of the police force recently held an intoxicated man down while another pounded him. Mr. M. Crowley, who saw the act, indignantly denounced it as cowardly and brutal, and was arrested afterward on the charge of "brawl and tumult," but Judge Bufford very properly refused to hold him, as he criticised rather than resisted the officer.

We regret to learn that Lewis W. Brewster, Esq., lost the top of the middle finger of his right hand in the Journal press while his paper was being printed on Friday afternoon. Mr. Brewster has always looked carefully after this mechanical work, it being a special matter of pride with him that his paper shall be well printed.

The Concord People calls the democratic candidate for governor "Old White Oak." That is very nice. It looks well in print, and would no doubt sound well in a stump speech—something like "Old Hickory," whose political faith was once the faith of the democratic party. Possibly the People hopes that in some abstruse manner the democratic masses will muddle "Old Hickory" and "Old White Oak" together, in such a way as to believe the two identical—in political faith if not in fleshand blood reality; but it will take something more than a "pet name" to mask the difference between Andrew Jackson, the outspoken and determined defender of the Union and relentless opponent of nullification, and Daniel Marcy, the equally outspoken and determined defender of the doctrine of State sovereignty and the right of any State at pleasure to dissolve the Union.

The temperance meeting at the Temple, Thursday evening, was addressed by Messrs. Osgood, of Gardiner, Me., Drew, of Concord, Miss Kelly, and Messrs. A. P. Stevens, E. B. Goodall and John S. Treat. A great deal of enthusiasm ensued, some 185 persons signing the pledge. Miss Kelly will speak again at the same place on Sunday evening.

Ship Anna Decatur, Proctor, built here, bound from Independencia Bay for Europe, was at Callao Jan. 15th, in a leaky condition, and discharging her cargo previous to repairing.

The distribution of the pictures of the Portsmouth Art Union will take place at Mr. Burleigh's next week.

York Correspondence.

YORK, ME., Feb. 9.

The Portsmouth Glee Club, assisted by Prof. Goodall, the violinist, gave us a splendid entertainment at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, 8th inst. The evening was a fine one, and a goodly number was in the Hall. Perfect order prevailed, except during the frequently occurring and deserved applause. The Club may be assured of a good house here at any time, as the people here appreciate a good show—and one void of any slang or personal reflections. We hope to see them again; but, gentlemen and ladies of the Club, next time be sure of having an evening when there is no meeting. Ask your friends over here to post you on an open evening, or to arrange one for you.

Capt. Samuel Staples, of this town, died on the 7th inst., at the age of 75 years. Previous to his disease he requested that a post mortem examination be made on his body. The examination was made on the 8th inst, by Drs. Potter of Portsmouth and Hawkes of York, and resulted in showing a cancer as large as a hen's egg, commencing on the liver and extending across and closing the stomach, thus preventing his taking solid food for a long time. Several smaller cancers were also present. P.

—A West Hill boy, says the Burlington Hawkeye, came in to his mother recently with two yawning rents in his trouserloons. His patient mother sat down, after administering the necessary counter-irritant, to repair the garment, and was shocked to hear her darling tell his sister that "Mother was an old devil." "Harry," she cried, "what did you say?" "I didn't say nothing, mother." "Yes you did, Harry. You said that I was a devil. What did you mean by that?" "Well, it's so, mother; 'cause my Sunday-school teacher told me that nobody but the devil sowed tares."

—"What beats a good cup of coffee?" said Mrs. Spilkins to her husband recently at the breakfast table. He gave it up. "Two cups of coffee," said she. "What beats a good wife?" queried Spilkins. She gave it up. "Two good wives," said Spilkins, and then she got mad and sulked, nobody knows why.

—Senator Christiancy courted but three weeks.

—Mrs. Tilton is living with Mrs. Morse.

—Would Miss Cushman have achieved the eminence she has if she had started out as Lottie Cushman? Would we be giving tea parties to Mattie Washington? Would there be much hair-starting effect in La Borgia? Would men's stout hearts quail at the name of Susie Anthony?

—A young lady attending a Masonic entertainment in Keokuk, Iowa, recently, was much disconcerted on learning that a banquet had been prepared. On looking at the elegant tables in the supper-room, she exclaimed, "Good gracious! Are they going to sit down? I didn't expect that—I ain't fixed to sit down." Her escort looked at her "pull-back" for a moment, and then found a place alongside the mantel-piece, where she could take her supper standing. But it was a very narrow escape.

Pimples, Eruptions, Rough Skin.

The system being put under the influence of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a few weeks, the skin becomes smooth, clear, soft, and velvety, and being illuminated with the glow of perfect health from within, true beauty stands forth in all its glory.* The effects of all medicines which operate upon the system through the medium of the blood are necessarily somewhat slow, no matter how good the remedy employed. While one to three bottles clear the skin of pimples, blotches, eruptions, yellow spots, comedones, or "grubs," a dozen may possibly be required to cure some cases where the system is rotten with scrofulous or virulent blood poisons. The cure of all these diseases, however, from the common pimple to the worst scrofula is, with the use of this most potent agent, only a matter of time. Sold by dealers in medicines.

CONDITION PILLS!

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing to its favor.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

READING FOR CHILDREN.
OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.
A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.
A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.
WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "vapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are so healthful, and they are so beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher plateau, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., is an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer the last volumes (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides short stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

A ROUGH DIAMOND.

The cold northern blasts had settled themselves down into legitimate winter business, bridging streams and locking up nature in fetters of ice. Everywhere through the broad and fertile land, huge graneries were stored with the golden harvest. Cellars actually groaned with their rich stores of fruit and vegetable, and the thrifty and industrious inhabitants were about to celebrate their annual thanksgiving to the great and bountiful Giver of such plenty, prosperity and peace.

But nowhere did greater bounty prevail than in the homestead of Farmer Joel Jones. His broad acres lay but a mile from the thrifty village of Centreville, where he found an easy market for all his produce, and where every Sabbath his round and ruddy face might be seen alongside of the thin and sallow one of his spinster sister Betsey, in the old family carryall, on their way to the village church, which ever found a willing heart and ready hand in the unsentimental Joel Jones, as its thrifty aspect fully attested.

A few days previous to the one appointed as Thanksgiving, he came into his ample kitchen with a huge and golden pumpkin in his strong arms.

"Here, Betsey," said he, "is one of them real Yankee pumpkins, and I want ye to spread yerself a makin'a batch of pies. And jest say when ye want that air turkey killed."

"What for, I'd like ter know, Joel? You talk as ef yer wer going' ter feed a regiment, when thar is only you and me and the hired man to eat the best Thanksgiving dinner ever invented."

"I know as well as ye, Betsey, we hain't got no folks ter speak of, but that hain't no sign we haint ter eat like other Christians on Thanksgivin' day, specerly when I've worked the hull year like everything, and been prospered beyond my deserts."

An hour later he looked in upon Betsey and her sullen preparations for the coming feast.

"I'm goin' ter town with er load of oats, and I'll bring ye some cranberries ter go erlong with yer turkey, Betsey," said he, "and if yer want anythin' else speak quick, fer I'm off."

The answer of the spinster was a grunt of satisfaction, as she continued kneading the snowy bread, while the pumpkin stewed and sputtered on the stove in the most savage manner.

"Betsey grows groutier every day of her life, poor thing. She's gittin' old and the work is tew heavy for her. But it hain't no use of speaking of gettin' help. She'd fight me down on that forever," soliloquized the old man, as he drove along. "Hey, Bub, want ter ride?" he called out to a small specimen of humanity, who was trudging along under a heavy load, and who most gladly accepted the kind offer. "Ye'r Widow Burton's boy, hain't ye?" he asked in continuation, after the boy had scrambled up behind, and perched himself upon a bag of grain.

"Yes, sir!"

"What ye got in yer sack, Bub?"

"Cosl, sir, that I have been picking up along the track."

"Dangerous piece of business, and it's strange yer ma should send you out on sich an errand. Ther cars will come erlong some day, and chop yer into mincemeat."

The poor, little, pale-faced lad made no reply. He was too happy in the enjoyment of the unexpected ride to care for any anticipated danger. At the door of his humble home the farmer stopped, and to the surprise of the lad, got down from the wagon and hitched his horses.

"I want to see yer ma. So I'll jest run in fer a minit, if ye'll mind the team."

One of the children answered his summons and conducted him into the little kitchen where the widow sat sewing, with her brood of little ones about a scanty fire.

"Don't git up, Mrs. Burton. I can't stop but a minit. I give yer boy a lift as I came along, and he told me that he goes over on the railroad ter pick up coal, and I thought, maybe, ye didn't know it was dangerous. Ther lad is tu small for sich work, and some day he'll get killed. So I hope ye won't take it amiss that I named it ter ye."

Tears were in the good woman's eyes long before he had ceased speaking, and she answered:

"You are very kind, sir, but what can I do? It is hard for me to keep my little family together simply with my needle, and the coal the children gather from the track keeps one comfortable, and leaves my scanty earnings for other needs."

"Yer girls hain't any on 'em old enuff to work out, be they, Mrs. Burton? If so, I'd take one of them ter held sister Betsey. That would be one less mouth tu feed; at any rate, she'd fare well."

"Janey is twelve years old, and has been brought up to be useful, and can wash dishes, sweep, and do a great deal of the ordinary work of a household."

"All right, Mrs. Burton. Have the girl ready when I come back from town, and I'll take her home with me."

Again in his wagon Farmer Jones communed with himself:

"Don't seem to be much of a show for Thanksgivin' dinner at Mrs. Burton's. Poor thing! It's agin' nature that such a pretty girl as she used to be should have married that shiftless, drunken rake, Jim Burton, only to be left with a lot of young ones to slave for."

All the day Farmer Jones seemed in an uncommon grave mood. The town people missed a certain heartiness in his manner, and not once did his old boy-like laugh ring out to notify Centreville that Joel Jones was in town.

It was almost dark when he reached the widow's cottage, and a furious snowstorm had commenced. But, securing his restless team, he stamped into the little kitchen.

"It's stormin' terribly, Mrs. Burton, and I guess your little Janey better not think of goin' to night."

"No, thank you. I fear it would be too tedious for the child. But will you not be seated, Mr. Jones, and get warm before you go on?"

"Slim chance for that," thought he. But after an awkward pause, he answered:—"I would like to have a word with you in private, Mrs. Burton."

With an expression of surprise, she led the way into the cold and cheerless little sitting-room.

"Jane Burton," began he, after clearing his throat, "you and I have known each other since we were children. We war young folks together, and though you war a pile above me, I always loved ye. But knowin' I warn't fit for yer tier wipe yer old shoes on, I never said a word, and let yer marry Jim Burton, while I took Nancy Price. Since then the good Lord has taken both on 'em, leavin' you with an empty purse, and me with an empty house. Well, ter make a long story short, I hain't had ye out of my mind since I was here this mornin', and my heart is chock full of ye. And, now, Jane, if I am good enuff for yer, say so, and I'll try and do my duty by ye and the little ones."

During his earnest, stammering speech, the poor woman had blushed and glowed like a full blown rose, and actually looked youthful again, and like the fair young girl he had loved before; and tears dimmed her eyes as she answered:—

"I cannot think for a moment of accepting so noble an offer. Reflect what a burden you would assume. I can bring nothing but a broken constitution and five helpless children. No, my good friend. I shall think of you ever as the kindest and best of men."

She broke down completely, and could only extend her hand. He grasped it with a vise-like pressure, and as the little woman began to sob, he took her in his great strong arms, and to his ample breast, whether she would or no, and talked so earnestly and long, that the children grew tired of staying alone in the dark (for their mother had carried away the lamp,) and the horses were stamping impatiently out in the storm.

"God bless ye, Jane! Ye'll come to a big heart and a warm, full house," said the farmer, as the little woman at last smiled her consent and blushed more than ever as he fervently kissed her, and took his departure.

If ever a man walked on air, Joel Jones did for the next two days, and Betsey declared to the hired man that he acted "just like a crazy critter." He was almost omnipresent—went in and out of the house in a state of mental disquiet, and mixed himself with the domestic preparations for the coming feast, in the most promiscuous fashion. He insisted upon an immense plum-cake being made—stoned raisins, beaten eggs—and declared with many a chuckle, when it was at length finished, "that it looked for all the world like a bride's cake!" And when Betsey actually iced it, and placed a wreath of pressed and dried autumn leaves upon its bulging top by way of ornament, he was in ecstacies.

"Wal, there it is, Joel, and I do hope you are satisfied for once. Ye will have a grand dinner, and no one to it," said his sister.

"Don't ye believe that, Betsey. Jist set the table for a full half-dozen besides you and me, and see if I don't fetch along somebody to fill ther places when I come hum to-morrer from church."

Betsey gave a sniff of disapproval, but continued the completion of the preparations, thinking what an old fool her brother was getting to be.

Thanksgiving day dawned clear and bright, though very cold, and the good folks of Centreville were surprised to see Farmer Jones come dashing up to the front door, in his fine new sleigh, with a most jubilant chime of bells, and the Widow Burton, snugly tucked beneath the robes, by his side. And a little later they actually took away the breath of the congregation as they marched up the aisle—the little woman clinging to his arm, dressed in some simple gray material with a rich shawl about her shoulders—the very one he had purchased the day before, and, as he said, "for sister Betsey." A pretty little velvet hat, with a dash of lavender and white flowers and ribbons completed the delicate bride-like costume.

They passed many unoccupied pews, and only paused when they had gained a position opposite the pulpit. And then, before the wondering people realized it, Parson Doolittle was reading to them the marriage ceremony, and when it was completed the happy man gallantly kissed the bride and led her to his own pew, now and forever Mrs. Joel Jones.

If ever Thanksgiving sermon failed to reach listening ears, it did that day, for the little congregation were in the most blissful flutter. They had actually witnessed the knitting of two lives together, and though they were not youthful ones, yet there was romance in the suddenness and surprise of the whole thing.

The benediction said, how hearty were the congratulations, and how proud and happy the bridegroom, and how bright and blushing the bride! Away they dashed at last amid cheers and the merry chimes of bells. At the cottage they paused and 'took in the little brood'—as the farmer called them—and then drove merrily on, amid youthful shouts and laughter, to his great white farm-house, whose blue, curling smoke proclaimed warmth and good cheer within.

"As I live," exclaimed Betsey, looking out of the window, "If Joel hain't brought that stuck up Widow Burton and her brats to dinner. There won't be a hull piece of the old-fashioned chiney left on the table. If I had dreamed of his bringing them I wouldn't have put it on, even if Joel did insist on it."

The Widow Burton and her brats—as she called them—were ushered into the parlor by the master, where a cheerful fire blazed, and where Miss Betsey stiffly received them and their wrappings.

When dinner was announced, very much to her disgust, her brother came out with the little woman upon his arm, and leading the youngest child by the hand.

"If ye have no objections, Betsey," said he, "I'd like to place this little woman at the head of my table, 'specially as it is the position she is likely to occupy the rest of her days, thank God."

"Joel, ye hain't goin' to git married?" screamed the horrified spinster, and she almost dropped the 'chiney' pot of scalding tea in her excitement.

"Never again in this life," he chuckled, as he seated his new wife at the head of the table, despite her protest; and as he spoke he stooped and kissed her while Betsey looked on in blank and horrified amazement, utterly speechless at such disreputable conduct; "for this day, in Centreville church, this little woman has promised to share my bed and board for the rest of her mortal days."

"Married?" gasped Betsey; "and all them ar' children?"

"Yes, they all belong ter me, thank God. I've got some folks of my own now, Betsey, and no more lonely days and nights for me, or cheerless Thanksgivings."

He bustled about and seated each little child, rewarded by a tearful glance of gratitude from their mother's eyes. Then such a tremendous prayer of thanksgiving and praise as ascended from that bountiful board was rarely heard by men or angels. Then came the feast. And how everybody did eat except Miss Betsey. She received the praise of her cooking in frigid silence, and actually refused to taste the bride's cake.

"No wonder," thought she, "that Joel was so set on having it made. I'd cut my right hand off before I'd have touched it, if I had only known what he was about—the sly old fool."

The next day she packed her trunk and departed to find a home with some other of her relatives in Connecticut, positively refusing to share a home with her new mistress where she had so long reigned supreme. And one year later, when she received a letter from her brother Joel, announcing the birth of a son to this last and happy wedlock, she exclaimed:

"There's no fool like an old fool!"

She consigned the missive to the flames with the words.

Peace and prosperity smiled upon her brother and the happy husband and father, and the "little woman" blesses the day she accepted the rough diamond for a life partner—all of her days being those of thanksgiving and praise.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President—Lincoln—will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. If was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his fool deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

News and Notes.

The Lebanon Free Press, good authority, says "it is already decreed that the next Senator in No. 11 shall be a republican." The democratic majority in that district last year was 324.

What a shiver must have run through the democratic ranks in the House of Representatives when a colored member, and a former slave, told his democratic colleague from Mississippi that he was sorry to see him "not better informed," and all the republicans laughed as if the remark was deserved!—Boston Journal.

The clerk of the House committee on ways and means, J. B. Hambleton, who named his son after Wilkes Booth, has been obliged by the pressure of public opinion to resign the clerkship. Mr. Morrison, chairman of the committee, in accepting the resignation says: The charge so often made, and so often denied by you, that you had named a son after the assassin of Mr. Lincoln, I have until now utterly disbelieved. Recent developments, which show your son to have been named or recognized by the name of John W. B. Hambleton, gives, at least, a semblance of truth to the charge with the slightest appearance of the truth of such a charge. I have but one duty to perform; that is to accept your resignation offered some time ago, which I hereby do.

The U. S. Senate on Friday passed the bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the Centennial exhibition, by a vote of 41 to 15. Mr. Cragin voted in its favor; Mr. Wadleigh against it.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says that every encounter in Congress thus far has strengthened the republican lines, while every bone of contention which has been dexterously thrown into the democratic camp has been picked up by some unwary gentleman, to his own sorrow and the detriment of his party.

Mrs. Robeson is without exception the most self-poised, self-possessed and brilliant woman in Washington, ever ready in bright, sharp conversation and witty rejoinders. Among the acknowledged belles of Baltimore, even in her young girlhood, she has always seen the best of American society, and holds her position as an inalienable right, without thinking about it; so that one naturally yields deference and homage without any more consideration.

The mystery surrounding the robbery of the National Bank of Commerce in New London, Conn., is dispelled by the confession of George C. Packer, one of the tellers of the institution, who has made a full confession and restored the stolen $21,500 to its owners. The circumstances attending the robbery pointed directly to some one of the employes of the bank as the guilty party. The banking room is on the first floor of the building in which it is located, and a back window was left open as if the thieves had effected ingress and egress in that manner. But, though the mud under the window was several inches deep no foot-prints were discernible there, and it was not easy to see how that window could have been used without any tracks being visible. The burglary was committed in the light of a full moon, in the centre of the city, with lights and windows everywhere. The absence of tracks in the mud under the open window, the fact that the safe door was opened without injury or violence and by the regular combination, and the singular anticipation by only three days of the arrival of a chronometer lock previously ordered, raised an uncomfortable suspicion that the thieves were no common robbers, and possessed more of a certain kind of knowledge than professional burglars ordinarily would. Moreover, the neatness of the bank floor, the absence of tools, and the failure of any one in the vicinity to hear any sound, made the affair exceedingly enigmatical. The combinations of the lock were known to only Teller Packer and the cashier, a man of high character, so there was nothing left for the guilty party to do but to confess his crime and give up his booty.

Edward Nevins, of Fletcher, Vt., cut his throat and crawled under his barn floor to die, but he may get well, after all. It is seriously stated that the fear that he hadn't enough to winter his stock led him to do the act.

The Congregationalist compares Plymouth Church's advisory council to a convention on the deck of a sinking ship to settle whether her sailing papers are regular.

A recent applicant for lodgings at Boston gave his name as George La Doo, said he was fourteen years old, and was sent from his home in Greenfield, by his parents, who gave him a dollar and told him never to come back, as they were too poor to support him.

The Concord Monitor is authorized by the chairman of the republican State committee, Col. Daniel Hall, to say that the statement of the Concord correspondent of the Boston Post, copied into the democratic papers, and sent forth as truth to the people of New Hampshire, that the republican State committee have received a draft or check for $10,000 from John D. Sanborn, is false from beginning to end. Not one dollar has been received by the republican State Committee from John D. Sanborn; nor was a single dollar ever received from him by the committee, directly or indirectly.

From every quarter news is daily received that business prospects begin to assume a more cheering aspect, and that the depression and stagnation of the past three years will soon be succeeded by the hum of industry and an era of prosperity to which the entire country has been for that length of time a stranger.—Philadelphia Press.

A dispatch from Rotterdam states that Winslow was not on board steamer Rotterdam when that vessel arrived.

Senator Bruce of Mississippi, colored, finding his State democratic, made a speech in the U. S. Senate on the 10th, charging President Grant with indifference to the colored republicans of the South and saying that hereafter he should act with that party which should favor them the most. Senator Edmunds of Vermont replied, stating that it came to a pretty pass that the Senate should have to listen to sentiments showing such base ingratitude from the representative of a race which had received so much at the hands of the white people of the country, and he added that this convinced him of the mistake that had been made in granting so many privileges to the colored race. The effect of this occurrence has been to change a few republicans from a purpose to vote for Pinchback's admission, and will probably defeat the latter altogether.

On Friday, the House passed the diplomatic bill appropriating $314,000, a reduction of $470,000 from last year.

Mr. Beecher made a speech in Plymouth church on Friday in which he pronounced Bowen's allegations false, closing with: "And with Almighty God before me and the judgment I arraign him as a slanderer and a liar."

Commodore Shufeldt, chief of the Bureau of Equipment, in his examination before the naval investigating committee at Washington, recommended the abolition of the navy yards at Kittery, New London and Pensacola. He said half a million dollars could be saved by such abolition. He also recommended a radical change in the management of yards and in advertising. It appears that it cost $25,000 to advertise the sale of the Philadelphia navy yard.

The "Old White Oak."

BY R. E. R.

The old white oak is hardy and rare!
So clay can be formed to a perfect brick!
But he who wins the Governor's chair
Must be something more than an oaken stick,

Poor Horace G., with his old white hat,
Was great till he dropped the editor's pen;
And some have not ceased their laughing at
The Quixotic tilt of the hunkers then.

So oak is fair in a forest tree,
And for building uses is strong and good;
But old New Hampshire will never be Governed by lifeless, inanimate wood.

White seems to be the favorite hue;
So it was when flourished the old white tile;
But all the dems. were decidedly blue
When they recklessly tied and lost their pile.

Inseasnate oak is good in a keel
When the vessel's sharp prow the salt waves rip,
